Waiting for the U.S. Mail

by BARRY SIGALE

Here is a mathematical problem to chew on along with that high-priced roast beef sandwich and costly glass of milk.

If more than 5 per cent of the population is not receiving its first class mail on time and literally thousands of persons are complaining of incredibly slow delivery, then why is it the U.S. Postal Service is intending to raise the cost of mailing a letter to 10 cents?

Before hearing the answer you better swallow first. You'd think that most of the estimated $1 billion raised would cover the cost of improving services, right? Apparently that's wrong.

ACCORDING TO Postmaster General E. T. Klassen, the newly independent postal service probably will ask the Postal Rate Commission in September for permission to raise the price of the 8 cent stamp to 10 cents beginning next year.

The money, said Klassen, primarily would be used to meet the rise in labor costs, which means meeting the needs of postal workers who have negotiated bigger and better wage and benefit contracts the last few years.

Since the new revenue would probably have little effect on productivity it is assumed the public is going to be paying a lot more than they are now with nothing gained in return. Nothing, that is, unless you work for the two-year-old postal service.

Standing in the way of this latest move by the highly controversial postal service is the U.S. Congress, armed with the approval of their beleaguered constituents, to head off additional price increases of any kind.

One of the most outspoken congressmen is U.S. Rep. Philip Crane, R-10th "Mr. Conservative," who has always fought for his idea that private industry can do a better job in areas where government is foundering. And the postal service, according to Crane and others, is foundering badly.

CITING THE fact that the 2 cent boost would be an increase of 25 per cent or 66 per cent over the last three years, a violation of the wage-price guidelines, Crane said:

"Such an increase would be unconscionable at a time when the federal government is imposing severe restrictions upon price increases in the private sector. It is incredible that the federal government itself should seriously be contemplating a 25 per cent price increase in a service vital to communications within our country.

"An increase in first class mail rates from 6 cents to 10 cents in three years," added Crane, "is hardly a record in which our government can be proud. It dwarfs the meat price increases which have recently been the topic of such debate."

Then Crane added what will amount to be the knockout blow if he has his way:

Our birthday! Fourth of July in Des Plaines

It was one big birthday party — complete with balloons for the kids, ringing bells, candy, popcorn and a huge birthday cake with red candles.

The 110-unit annual Independence Day parade kicked off on schedule at noon yesterday to the cheers of thousands of spectators.

The Chamber of Commerce and Industry led the marchers, floats, antique cars and bands with a car and a red and white birthday cake float. The Chamber which sponsors the yearly Fourth of July festivities, is celebrating its 40th birthday this year and chose that as the theme for its parade.

Birthday congratulations came from civic organizations, churches, women's clubs and local businesses. The Des Plaines Junior Woman's Club also had a cake and a sign reading "It's Our 40th Birthday Too."

THE DES PLAINES Bank provided a bell for the celebration. The south side bank's float boasted lovely young ladies who rang a liberty bell.

Mayor says 'no conflict' in bank stock holdings

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT and DOROTHY OLIVER

Mayor Herbert Behrel — owner of stock in two Des Plaines banks that hold city funds and may purchase superbloc land — said yesterday that "I can't see a conflict of interest in this."

"Being elected to public office doesn't mean that a man can't live. I would never accept a position on their board of directors. I don't even attend stockholders meetings," the mayor told the Herald.

Behrel owns 100 shares of stock in First National Bank of Des Plaines, 733 Lee St., and 43 shares of stock in Des Plaines National Bank, 678 Lee St.

"I'M NOT EVEN sure of the value. I bought it a long time ago," the mayor said. Value of the bank stock is about $44 a share, according to bank officials.

"I just collected a dividend check Friday. It was about $80. It sounds terrible in the newspapers — a man owns stock. But, this thing has got to be silly," Behrel said.

Ownership of the stock could force Behrel and Ald. Thomas Koplos (1st) from voting July 16 on superbloc zoning.

Koplos owns about 150 shares in First National and 50 shares in Des Plaines National Bank. His stock ownership is listed on a current state ethics statement filed with the Cook County Clerk's office because value is more than $5,000.

"My sister is an assistant cashier at First National," Koplos said. "I've never hidden the fact I own the stock."

"OF COURSE, I'll abstain in voting" on superbloc, Koplos said.

Behrel told the Herald "that I've done nothing wrong and I intend to vote on the (Continued on page 3)

He won't challenge U.S. decision

Col. Guy insists charges were proper by United Press International

Air Force Col. Theodore W. Guy said he was convinced there was a legal basis for his filing charges of collaboration against eight former prisoners of war and he was surprised Washington officials dropped the case.

"No, I didn't think they would drop the charges," Guy said. "I spent two months reviewing the facts and there was a legal basis in my mind for the charges."

Earlier Guy said in a television interview he would not challenge the decision announced in Washington.

"I will abide by the decisions of the Secretary of the Army and the Secretary of the Navy. I made a promise to my men that I would see this thing through and I have completed as much of my obligation to these men as I can now."

GUY, A FIGHTER pilot, held prisoner for nearly five years, was the senior American officer at a North Vietnamese camp called "The Plantation" where approximately 80 POWs were held.

Wearing a uniform with a chestful of ribbons, Guy took time out as grand marshal of a July 4 parade in Elmhurst to talk about his charges with UPI reporter David Fields.

"The charges against all eight were almost identical," Guy said. All concerned misconduct and violations of the military code, he said.

Guy reiterated his belief that the charges were not responsible for the death June 27 of Marine Sgt. Abel L. Kavanaugh, one of the eight accused. Kavanaugh was found dead in Denver from what police believed were self-inflicted wounds.

KAVANAUGH'S WIFE said in Denver Tuesday she blamed the government and Guy for Kavanaugh's death. "Had these charges never been brought, my husband would have been alive today," she said.

Guy said, "She's probably emotionally upset, and I don't think the charges had anything to do with Kavanaugh's death." The colonel said the death "certainly upset me very much . . . but I didn't turn back when it did happen. I could not."

Guy declined comment on reports two former POWs were considering taking legal action against Pentagon officials and Guy himself for the now dropped accusations.

The two, Army S. Sgts. John A. Young of Arlington Heights, and King D. Rayford, Chicago, made the statement at a news conference in Denver where they attended Kavanaugh's funeral.

"PRIVATE ENTERPRISE believes it can do a much better job of delivering the mail for half the cost. Why should Congress continue to support the notion of the government monopoly in the postal service simply because it is traditional. It is time for private enterprise to show what it can do."

Crane and fellow Republican congressman Stephen Symms of Idaho, have filed a formal protest with the Cost of Living Council and its chairman, John Dunlop, calling for special hearings into the possible increase. That decision has yet to be made, although Crane's aides feel such hearings appear certain.

The postal service no doubt differs with Crane's views but even their views are muted when stories are told of poor or even non-delivery.

Like Elk Grove residents who have complained bitterly that it sometimes takes a letter six days to get from one side of the village to the other. Some say they want to have their own post office and not have to rely on the Arlington Heights branch for service.

LIKE BUFFALO GROVE residents who say they would get better service if their village had its own post office instead of having to rely on Wheeling, Schaumburg and Hoffman Estates residents feel the same way about the service they are getting from Roselle.

Keeping track of pieces of mail sent to and from the Northwest suburbs proves the mail to be quixotic at the least.

A first class letter deposited in Northern Michigan arrived in Arlington Heights the next delivery day — although the time span included a Sunday. The letter traveled some 400 miles in less time than it took to mail a similar letter from Arlington Heights to Schaumburg.

Mail less than first class is either very fast or incredibly slow. In one case a piece of third class mail postmarked in Chicago June 6 arrived in Arlington Heights on July 2 — it took almost a month to get from the city to the suburbs.

Such complaints rush into Crane's office a couple of times a week and the congressman is keeping them well in mind when he fights for what he believes to be the best solution to the problem.

THOUGH THE postal controversy became very heated during the early part of the year at the Senate Post Office committee hearings, the issue has now died down somewhat. But the possibility of a request for a 2 cent increase will put the subject on the top of Congress' priority list.

"There will be a lot of pressure on the post office to justify the increase," said a Crane aide in Washington. "The question will probably come up: Should Congress control the postal service again?"

The new independent postal service agency opened its doors July 1, 1971, with the power to set rates, borrow money, and make its own decisions about personnel and post office locations. It replaced the 187-year-old government-run Post Office Department.

Congress made one major stipulation at that time. It said the new postal agency must pay its way by 1984. In two years there is some doubt the agency can meet the requirement.

POSTAL OFFICIALS have said they need a few years to get on their feet financially. As far as service is concerned they contend they do an excellent job delivering first class mail: 95 per cent of all local first class mail is delivered the next day and nearly all first class letters are delivered within two or three days. In short, postal officials say, service today is better than ever.

The Chicago region of the U.S. Postal Service consists of 251 post offices in northern Indiana and the metropolitan area. The region manages all the branch buildings in contrast to pre-1971 when each postmaster did his own thing.

"The postmaster in Palatine, for instance, had no direct relationship with the postmaster in Arlington Heights," said a Chicago postal official. "Reorganization has been a step forward. We're very proud of the fact that no specific complaints have been aimed at Chicago."

Flexibility has been one of the most important results of the reorganization, said one Chicago official. If an area post office has a shortage of personnel because of sickness or vacations they can borrow employees from another post office. Thus, service is not affected.

"THE POST OFFICE still has fantastic service with timely and safe delivery," the official said. "Nationwide we get 18 complaints per every one million pieces of mail we deliver. People forget the 95 per cent of first class mail that comes on time. They only remember the five per cent that don't."

The central region of the postal service has 11,000 post offices, 188,000 employees in 13 states and operates on a yearly budget of some $2.6 billion. To keep going, however, postal officials are asking or time to prove they can make their operation a viable one.

There's choice if you dislike the U.S. Mail

For those dissatisfied with the U.S. mails, there is an alternative: the Independent Postal System of America (IPSA).

IPSA is a 5-year-old free enterprise competitor of the federal postal system. It delivers mail in plastic pouches by rail and air, because federal law prohibits it from using regular mail boxes.

The IPSA is forbidden to carry first class mail, but it has its own army of mail carriers, all of whom buy their routes for $1,000 each. And it claims to give "first class" service to second, third and fourth class mail patrons.

The service was started in Oklahoma City, Okla., in 1968 by Thomas Murray, an Irish immigrant. IPSA operates in 60 U.S. cities and in a total of 1,000 communities, including suburbs, and it also delivers on rural routes in many states.

CHARLES J. Richardson, head of IPSA's mid-continent division in Elk Grove Village, said the service depends entirely on bulk mail which makes up 80 per cent of the U.S. Postal Service cargo.

"But the regular mail service gets to the bulk stuff only after first class mail is moved, and nowadays that is slow enough," Richardson said.

Drum majors contained incredible energy.

Corps worked through intricate formations.

Drums rolled, bugles blared and "Music in Motion" wowed the crowds at Tuesday night's drum and bugle competition sponsored by the Des Plaines Chamber of Commerce and Industry.

The Des Plaines Guardsmen hosted the competition which featured six corps from four states and Canada. It was an excellent show put on by young people with enthusiasm, control and professionalism.

One corps outdid the next. The audience picked their favorite while judges ran around the field checking the marchers right down to the crease on their pants.

St. John's Girls from Ontario, Canada won the admiration of the audience sitting in the bleachers at Maine West High School stadium. When the judges announced the 110-member all-girl corps finished fifth out of six the fans booed their disapproval.

St. John's corps was the belle of the evening. They paraded out in their Kelly green and white uniforms, jigged their way through Irish tunes, danced and skipped around the field as they presented music from around the world. The crowd rose to its feet for our neighbors from the north and remained there through the last number as they marched off the field.

ANOTHER CANADIAN group, The Crusaders from Toronto arrived in Chicago at 5:30 p.m. The guardsmen agreed to let the newcomers share their spotlight after the official competition was over and The Crusaders, decked out in red and white, provided an excellent exhibition.

Des Plaines' own corps brought cheers, screams and whistles from the audience during their exhibition. Beginning with a Dixieland combo they asked to "Let Us Entertain You" and did so with ease.

Each corps deserves its superlatives. The Marion Cadets of Marion, Ohio presented "Populace '73," the music of the ethnic groups that fill the melting pot called America.

They looked sophisticated in their gray, black and white uniforms. Their drum majorette had a lot of class and eventually won a trophy for Best Drum Major in the competition.

The Skokie Imperials played the most popular music. The theme from "2001 Space Odyssey" was made for drum and bugle corps; the music from "Jesus Christ Superstar" came off very well. The Imperials brought their own rooting section who went nuts over each number.

A smaller corps, the St. Paul Scouts from Minnesota marched out in olive green scout-like uniforms. They were small but mighty and they, too, walked off the field to a standing ovation.

THE SILVER Sabres of Salina, Kan., had the fanciest flagwork around. Somehow they managed to change flags three times during their allotted 13 minutes on the field and wound up with a mixture of Confederate flags as they played a moving medley of Civil War songs.

The first place pick of the judges was The Phantom Regiment, also known as the pride of Rockford, Ill. The field became alive with their music. Their two drum majors bounded around with endless energy. One trumpet soloist danced center field, zapped the crowd with his music and jumped in the air with a creak of his heels as he returned to formation.

A frustrating aspect of the competition was that everyone was applauding so loudly you couldn't hear what the corps were about to play.

The Phantoms did a great job on a Sousa march I couldn't identify, the song about leaving his cake out in the rain and the familiar "Dummmmmmm... da, da, da, da, dada, dada... Dummmmmmmmm..."

Corps were judged on general effect, bugle execution, drumming execution, difficulty of musical pieces and drumming, marching and maneuvering and respect for the colors. Each corps had to be on the field from 11 to 13 minutes and lost two-tenths of a point for each six seconds under time or over time.

Let one foot be out of place, one bugle held at the wrong angle or, God forbid, one marcher out of step and the point deductions started.

While maintaining perfect composure and attempting absolute precision they not only carried their huge horns, drums and flags around but blew, banged and waved them without batting an eyelash. Excellent entertainment. Bravo.

2nd teachers' union seeks members

A second teachers' union is seeking a foothold among East Maine Dist. 63 faculty members.

The new group, affiliated with the Illinois Federation of Teachers (AFL-CIO), was formed because of dissatisfaction by teachers with the Illinois Education Assn. (IEA) local, according to organizer Chuck Burdeen.

He charged the local East Maine Education Assn. (EMEA) has not provided adequate representation for teachers in contract talks with the school board.

Burdeen, a high school teacher from Niles, refused, however, to say how many Dist. 63 teachers have joined his group or who heads the new group's council of IFT Local 1274.

The new group was condemned by EMEA President Hank O'Neill, who said the IFT is trying to fragment Dist. 63 teachers. The group's formation in the middle of negotiations is the "sneakiest kind of move possible," O'Neill said.

THE EMEA has unsuccessfully sought a voice in determining working conditions and establishment of grievance procedures during talks with the board which started in February. Both sides still appear far from agreement in their negotiations, which have been marked by picketing, teacher rallies and confrontation at board meetings.

"A man in his position has got to know what would happen," O'Neill said of Burdeen. "I can only deduce that he is trying to win power and prestige for his organization and that he fully realizes that what he is doing cannot help the teachers in Dist. 63. It can only hurt them."

Joe Anderson, IEA representative, called Burdeen's refusal to discuss the size of the group's membership "surprising." If there is such a local, then I would suspect that they want themselves to be heard and known so people can support them," he said.

O'Neill said more than half of the district's teachers have joined the EMEA for the upcoming year.

He added that he had heard about the IFT local early in March, but could not find out who the members were. Apparently, he said, there were some EMEA members who had also joined the local.

During a May school board meeting, teachers were not allowed to speak. Burdeen said that if the IFT had been bargaining agent for the teachers, they would have taken the matter to court immediately.

ANDERSON POINTED out that because of parent pressure, teachers were allowed to present their case at a later board meeting. He said there was no need for a lawsuit.

Burdeen also contended that because the IFT is affiliated with the AFL-CIO, picket lines are respected by other unions. "When we strike in a district, everything comes to a standstill," he said.

Anderson said he had never heard of any unions crossing picket lines. He also criticized Burdeen as "irresponsible" for mentioning a strike. "We're not anywhere near a strike," he said.

In the February elections, teachers voted almost 3 to 1 in favor of having the EMEA as their bargaining agent, said O'Neill.

O'Neill said Burdeen was contacted by the IEA to discuss the elections in December. He said one of the EMEA board members and a member of the negotiating team worked closely with Burdeen in January and February, until the election.

He said the EMEA effort was made so that a fair election could be held.

along pulling wagons full of children and passing out about 900 bags of popcorn. Their float was a popcorn maker.

Antique cars, most of them older than the Chamber, were prevalent. Small children sitting on the curb kept the drivers busy by begging "Honk your horn."

Uncle Sam made an appearance on the back of a Scout jeep.

The Des Plaines Historical Society provided a popular display. Two members, dressed in pioneer garb, rode a covered wagon pulled by a rocking horse nestled in the back of a Public Works truck. Other members waved from the Society's bandstand — a familiar sight at Des Plaines parades.

THE YMCA Indian Guides rode the parade route north of Lee Street from Oakton and east on Ellinwood to Pearson, in mini-canoes (decorated wagons) pulled by Indian chiefs on tractors.

The Des Plaines Herald was also represented in the parade with a flowery white float and four spirited newboys passing out balloons and newspapers.

And there were bands. Maine West High School band had a front position. Drum and Bugle corps who appeared Tuesday night in competition also appeared.

"Music in Motion," the drum and bugle corps competition sponsored by the Chamber and hosted by the Des Plaines Guardsmen, brought hundreds of people to Maine West High School stadium.

Six corps competed for trophies. First place went to The Phantom Regiment of Rockford, Ill. Out of a possible 100 points the Phantoms received 89.70 from the nine-judge panel.

SECOND PLACE was awarded to the Silver Sabres of Salina, Kan., which drew 60.05 points. The Skokie Imperials, Skokie, Ill. received third place and 58.55 points. Fourth went to the Marion Cadets, Marion, Ohio, with 50.95 points. St. John's Girls of Ontario, Canada placed fifth with 44.50 points. Sixth, and 29.80 points went to the St. Paul Scouts, St. Paul, Minn.

The Phantom Regiment also won trophies for Best Color Guard, High General Effect, High Drum and High Bugle competitions. The Marion Cadets took a trophy for Best Drum Major.

The Guardsmen and The Crusaders of Toronto, Canada gave an exhibition after the judged competition. The Des Plaines corps made room on their program for the Canadian group when they found out The Crusaders would arrive in Chicago at 5:30 p.m.

Robert Bade, president of the Chamber, told the crowd "Every unit was a winner in my book."

Mayor Herbert Behrel presented the City of Des Plaines flag to St. John's Girls corps which Bade described as "A terrific group — our neighbors to the north."

Results on the 10th annual Brown-Hanson racing regatta held yesterday at Lake Opeka were not available by Herald press time.

ordinance."

He then changed his tone and said "I may be forced to back down and may abstain."

Superblock backers revealed in a letter to aldermen that the two banks and First Federal Savings and Loan Assn. of Des Plaines may purchase part of the $1.3 million in land held by Des Plaines Tomorrow Corp.

In a letter signed by Rex Wilson, Des Plaines National president who sold Behrel his 100 shares; Paul Shaw, First Federal vice president; and Bruce McPhee, First National vice president, the council was told that "the financial institutions have agreed to proceed (with the purchase) if asked to do so by the Des Plaines Mall Corp."

THE THREE FIRMS would lease the land to Des Plaines Mall Corp., proposed financier of the shopping-mall-office building redevelopment project.

"The institutions will purchase the land and receive a specified return each year regardless of the amount of profit made by the development corporation. The institutions will receive none of the tax advantages of ownership and none of the appreciation on the property. The financial institutions have further agreed that their interest in the property can be purchased at any time for their original investment," the letter states.

"In our opinion this ownership has the attributes of a loan," the officials said. "The only similarity between our ownership and more conventional ownership is that if the project is not successful, the institutions could lose their investment."

Both banks are $15,000 guarantors of Des Plaines Tomorrow Corp.

THE BANKS HOLD about $142,000 in city deposits, according to a recent report by City Treasurer Thomas Mahon.

A checking account at First National, which collects no interest, totaled about $128,160, the report states. A similar checking account at Des Plaines National totaled $14,153 in late May.

Total city funds were $4.2 million, the report states. Nearly 97 per cent were invested in U. S. Treasury notes or certificates of deposit which collect interest.

"You can't leave a zero balance in your checking account," City Comptroller Duane Biletz said yesterday. "We need enough money in these accounts to pay the bills."

The council approved bill payments Monday totaling $142,810 which is $496 more than the city checking accounts carried at the time.

OFFICIALS in Cook, DuPage and Lake county have been criticized recently for holding stock in banks that do business with their governments. Two Chicago aldermen have been indicted for holding bank stock.

An April 13 opinion from Atty. Gen. William Scott, that discusses possible conflict of interest involving county officials, states that "no officer, whether elected or appointed, may be directly or indirectly interested in any contract or work in the making or letting of which the officer may be called upon to act or vote."

The city designated the banks as depositories in 1969 by resolution. No agreement existed before 1969 and the banks were chosen "for convenience," city officials have said.

"I don't know what the answer is — whether it is absolutely illegal to be a director or own stock in banks that the city has money in," Mahon said. "There does seem to be a lot of investigation in this area. This is a change in philosophy that elected officials should be aware of."

A CHECK OF personal property books at the county clerk's office showed only one other council member holding bank stock — Ald. Charles Bolek (3rd).

Bolek told the council Monday that — "for the public record — 60 days ago I sold all my bank stock." He said that "I had no choice — as a public official."

C&NW train windows broken by vandals

Vandals caused $120 damage to a passing Chicago and North Western Rwy. train Monday after throwing rocks through three windows, police said.

Police said the vandals struck while the train was going eastbound near 300 Northwest Hwy.

Steal antique swords

Thieves stole $300 worth of antique swords after forcing their way into the car of a Normal, Ill., man, Monday, said Des Plaines police.

Paul Black told police the car had been left outside Maryville Academy, 1150 N. River Rd., when the theft occurred.

Among the stolen swords were a Japanese Samurai sword, a navy cutlass, a pair of French rifle bayonets, and three other knives.

A stereo tape player was also stolen from the car.

a stock holder in both banks and listed his ownership on 1972 ethics statements.

Other city officials holding stock include City Atty. Robert DiLeonardi, who also is redevelopment attorney, in First National; police chief Arthur Hintz; housing commission chairman Ralph Martin; and Building Commissioner Alfred Prickett.

About 27 of 43 superblock guarantors hold bank stock the county records show. Included are Louis Spiegler, one of three redevelopment zoning petitioners; James Paroubek, president of Des Plaines Redevelopment Assn.; Richard Wessel, publisher of the Des Plaines Journal; William Kunkel, a former superblock petitioner; and Des Plaines Publishing Co. publisher Herman Herzog.

"everyday"

Interest. That's pretty special. But there's more. That daily interest is compounded daily. Paid quarterly. So you can deposit when you like. Withdraw when you need to. Never lose interest provided you maintain $25 or more in your account at the end of the quarter. In fact, you even gain. All money deposited by the 10th earns from the 1st ... If you leave it on deposit until the end of the calendar quarter. Sounds interesting? But what does "everyday" interest mean in dollars and cents? It means that our 5% passbook interest actually earns more when compounded every day the First Federal Savings way. It makes a difference.

Motorists weigh conflicting reports

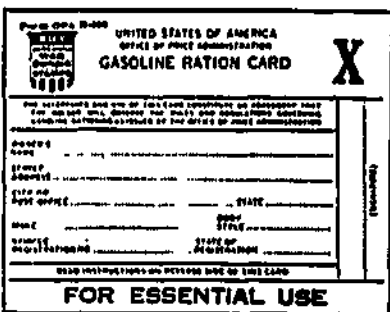

Gasoline shortage—real or a fake?

Motorists must sort out conflicting reports on the severity of gasoline shortages and possible rationing plans by federal officials this week.

U.S. Sen. Adlai Stevenson, D-Ill., charged major oil companies are using the fuel shortage to their advantage by eliminating the competition of independent retailers. The federal government is doing nothing to stop them, he said.

STEVENSON suggests antitrust action against the oil companies to restructure the industry, citing the elimination of some 2,000 independent gasoline retailers in recent months.

The Society of Independent Marketers of America agrees with Stevenson that the voluntary allocation programs set up by the federal government are not sending added supplies their way. More independent stations are closing their operations completely or simply cutting their hours of service, said a SIGMA spokesman this week.

Will it happen again?

Against this backdrop of fuel shortage reports, a UPI survey this week indicates many major brand stations in the U.S. are benefiting from increased gasoline production in many areas of the country. Some stations are staying open longer hours as a result of this increase and the somewhat-lower-than-expected demand for gasoline.

The Independent Petroleum Association of America said it had expected demand to be 6 or 7 per cent higher this year than last. As of late June, the demand was running around 5 per cent higher.

The National Petroleum Refiners Association said American refineries have raised their production to 94 per cent of capacity and have announced plans to expand their capacity by some 2 million barrels a day within three years' time.

Arco, Texaco, Gulf, Exxon and Shell have announced they can make more gasoline available to dealers this summer than originally had been expected. Arco had planned to hold its dealers to 98 per cent of the gasoline they received last year. Now its Eastern dealers will get 104 per cent.

The Georgia Motor Club surveyed stations and found some have increased hours of operation for the first time in weeks. In Texas, an American Automobile Association survey determined "the gasoline crunch has taken a turn for the better." The survey showed only half the stations that had held customers to a purchase limit were still limiting sales this week.

A Texaco station on the outskirts of Washington, D.C., an area that has been one of the hardest hit by shortages, put up a sign a couple of weeks ago saying, "Sorry, Gas Shortage, Now Closing Sunday." The sign came down during the past week.

THEN ALONG came the pronouncement by Dean Walcutt, executive vice president of the Certified Oil Co., Columbus, Ohio, and John Ross, senior vice president of natural resources for Standard Oil Co. of Ohio, that rationing of gasoline is likely to occur if demand does not decrease. Rumors of gasoline rationing books already printed and ready for distribution spread.

This was denied by William Simon, chairman of the President's oil policy committee, and Duke Ligon of the Interior Department Office of Oil and Gas. Options which are under consideration by Colorado Gov. John Love, newly appointed "energy czar," include a variety of mandatory and voluntary fuel allocation plans.

According to Herbert Hugo, Midwest bureau chief for the Platts Oilgram petroleum industry publication, "Any talk of rationing doesn't make sense now." The inventories of gasoline in the Chicago area have improved tremendously in the past two weeks, he said, to 10 per cent above last year at this time. The inventories had dipped below the 1972 levels starting in April.

Oil companies are turning out more gasoline, which benefits the motoring consumer, he added. Farmers, commercial users and municipalities which are hunting for supply contracts will not gain satisfaction until the Administration comes through with new Phase IV price guidelines, he predicts.

Economist hopeful about food price stabilization

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon's hope that food prices can be stabilized through the rest of this year may be realized if the price freeze is lifted quickly, and if farmers are able to harvest hoped-for record crops this fall, a top government economist said.

But it's too early to make any firm forecast about food price trends for the rest of 1973, Don Paarlberg, director of economics for the Agriculture Department, added in an interview. Another government expert said privately that current official estimates of 1973 average food costs may have to be boosted again later this summer.

The administration's currently operative food price prediction, issued June 19 by the Agriculture Department, says that "if present demand and supply expectations are realized, little if any further price increases will be forthcoming after the 60-day price ceiling period . . . and retail food prices for all of 1973 may average about 12 per cent above a year earlier."

EXPERTS SAY that forecast was based on the hope that despite last spring's floods and planting delays caused by wet fields, farmers have managed to plant enough corn and soybeans to reach the record harvests sought by administration planners — 6 billion bushels of corn and 1.5 billion bushels of soybeans.

Agriculture Department experts continue to say that planting indications point to the possibility of reaching those goals. But at least one recent private survey predicted that while the soybean goal will be reached, corn planting may have fallen short by about 3 million acres. The first official Agriculture Department planting estimate will be issued July 10.

Some experts here fear that even if the food cost situation is eased later by the impact of a recent order to slow exports and record 1973 harvests, enough damage may have already been done to force food prices for the rest of this year somewhat above the level predicted in late June. But until the duration of price ceilings and the shape of the 1973 crops becomes apparent, government specialists are reluctant to talk publicly about revising their July 19 prediction.

As Paarlberg sees it, one key to heading off further sharp gains in retail food prices lies in quick action to end the crunch which has seen egg producers, for example, claiming that with recent food costs and current food ceiling prices they will lose 4 cents on every dozen eggs sold.

Profit sharing book published

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Profit Sharing Council of America reports that more than 100,000 qualified plans and nearly an equal number of nonqualified cash plans exist today in the business world.

Stanley D. Noble, president of the non-profit organization which represents more than 1,400 enterprises with profit sharing plans, said the intricacies of government regulations coupled with the operational aspects of deferred income has prompted the Council to publish a new book, "Guide to Modern Profit Sharing."

Education Today

by Wandalyne Rice

The Illinois General Assembly doesn't seem to have accomplished too much this year, what with the sudden death of the proposed six county mass transit district and other wrangling.

However, one action the legislators took may turn out to be the most significant thing they have done in years. They passed a measure that drastically changes the state school aid formula — the way in which school districts get aid from the state.

The new plan is called a "resource equalizer" and provides that the state will guarantee each school district the amount of money it would receive if it had a certain level of wealth in terms of assessed property tax value per pupil.

THE SYSTEM, which still must be signed into law by Gov. Daniel Walker, would replace the old "Strayer-Halg" school aid formula, which has long been criticized by school officials as inadequate.

The "resource equalizer" will probably mean more money for nearly all the school districts in the Northwest suburbs over the long run, although school officials are still working with their figures to decide what the full impact of the change will be.

However, the new formula will do more than give a lot of school districts more money. Proponents of the formula hope it will cut down the vast disparities between school districts which are very wealthy because of their large amounts of industry and other revenue producing property and those which are very poor because they are mostly made up of single-family homes.

IT'S SOMETHING of a mystery, certainly, that this session of the General Assembly succeeded in coming up with a new way of financing schools while it was floundering around on other issues. When the U.S. Supreme Court handed down a ruling earlier this year in which it refused to order major changes in school finance, many observers thought the chance for change died.

There are arguments about whether the resource equalizer is going to be the best way to fund schools, of course. It was opposed by State School Supt. Michael Bakalis because it continued to use property valuation as a measure of wealth, among other reasons.

Even so, the new plan looks like a start toward a more equitable funding of schools. And even though it may be necessary to make some changes in the future, the legislature has made a step away from the present system.

Now, if they can only remember what magic they used to do that, they may find a way to accomplish something useful on other issues.

20,000 words per minute

What? Now comes Super-reader!

by JACK V. FOX

WEST COVINA, Calif. (UPI) — Donald Walthers, 13, a good looking, dark-haired boy, thumbed through the pages of a book with the title "From Slave to Statesman — the Life and Times of Frederick Douglass."

After four minutes, Donald put the book down on his chair-desk. Then he picked it up and skimmed through it twice more.

To outward appearances, it was a boy idly glancing at a book in which he had not much interest.

Actually, Donald had read the 231-page biography three times in 12 minutes and was prepared to discuss its contents in detail.

Young Walthers is an eighth grade student at the St. Christopher School where an experimental program has been under way this year in rapid reading under a system known as Optimation.

THE AVERAGE reading speed of a college graduate is 250-300 words per minute. Donald Walthers can "cruise" through non-technical material at 20,000 wpm and go 80,000 in "sprints."

He could read "Gone With the Wind" in 40 minutes.

But Donald is not a genius; he is not even unusual. In the demonstration at the Catholic school he was one of four seventh and eighth graders, four adults and two public school students who all went through the Douglass biography in less than 15 minutes.

There also was a little doll of a girl, Cindy Charland, 9, a third grader who read an adventure story about a young girl in less than 15 minutes.

The Optimation technique is being promoted by the Reading Foundation of California in Pasadena with the hope of having it widely adopted in public schools across the nation.

ROBERT G. AYRES, the foundation president, says the rapid reading system is one of the most significant breakthroughs in the history of education.

"The human mind is far more sophisticated and capable than any computer," Ayres said. "But we have only begun to utilize its capacity."

The key to such astonishing rapid reading is the elimination of what is called "subvocalization."

All "normal" readers subconsciously pronounce silently most of the words they are reading. It is a slow and tiring process. In Optimation, the reader no longer subvocalizes and also blots out any concept of words, sentences or paragraphs.

Sister Francis, the principal at St. Christopher, has taken the course and says she is capable of bursts of reading at 180,000 words per minute.

"IT IS ONE of the most exciting things I have ever experienced as an educator," she said. "And best of all is that slow or even retarded students can grasp the technique and do far better than they did before which in turn produces a sense of confidence."

Sister Francis says that comprehension and retention is greater than in slow reading.

But what about reading for pure enjoyment? Can you still get the same sense of a writer's style, his wit, his subtleties? Do you really enjoy reading Dickens' "Tale of Two Cities" in 20 minutes?

"Well, of course, if you really wish to savor a book, to stop and put it down and relish a passage, that's a different thing," she said. "But actually you do get enjoyment and you can always slow your speed to your wish — down to only 1,000 words per minute if you desire."

Poetry, with the sound and beauty of individual words and phrases as much or more important than substance, is one of the types of reading material not suitable to Optimation.

SISTER FRANCIS recalled that recently she went to morning devotions with other nuns. Each had a Book of Meitation and they were to read one paragraph and then meditate upon it.

"Instead, I suddenly whipped through the entire book before I realized what I was doing — and I just broke out in laughter there in the chapel."

After the student demonstration of rapid reading, this reporter borrowed the sister's office and wrote a spot story which ran about 500 words.

I handed it to Sister Francis and asked her if she would like to read it. She glanced at the first page for one second, at the second page for one second and then handed it back.

"Good story," she said. And she pointed out an error.

The environment

Sounds of silence becoming too rare for everyone

by LEA TONKIN

SOUNDS OF SILENCE: They're virtually unknown to most of us. We accept the clacking of typewriters, the steady drone of nearby traffic and the whine of household appliances as part of the daily routine.

Yet noise pollution is more than just an annoyance. According to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, noise appears to affect at least 80 million people, or 40 per cent of the population. Many millions of Americans have lost part of the utility of their dwellings and yards to noise from traffic and aircraft on a continuous basis. Another 21 million persons at any given time are similarly affected by noise from construction sites.

The recent hearings conducted by U.S. Rep. Sam Young, R-10th, on the noise problem created by jets at O'Hare Airport is aimed at one source of bothersome noise. Home workshop tools, power mowers and rock and roll bands are among the additional polluters we suffer.

Loss of hearing is an increasingly serious problem which results from this racket, reports the National Wildlife Federation Conservation News. Increased blood pressure, heart damage and headaches are associated with excessive noise levels. Other stresses include changes in acid produced in the stomach, endocrine hormones and the functioning of the kidneys.

What can be done about this pollution problem? First, suggests the federation, eliminate noise in the design stage for equipment and hardware. Unfortunately, market researchers find that noise is often associated with efficiency in the mind of consumers. Quiet jackhammers, a whisper quiet Hoover vacuum cleaner and a quiet electric typewriter are all market duds compared with their noisy counterparts.

The federal government may get into noise control in a big way, under the Noise Control Act of 1972. But emission standards won't be coming out until late next year.

Chicago has a reputation as the city with the toughest stand on noise pollution. A city ordinance will gradually lower acceptable noise emission levels from internal combustion engines by 1980. As no representative from the city was able to attend the recent airport noise hearing, however, this suggests selectivity.

In the meantime, one effort to curb bothersome noise is the set of noise pollution control regulations up for consideration by the Illinois Pollution Control Board. A final draft has been prepared and comments will be received through July 15 by the board.

The original regulations were received by the board in February, 1972. They were produced by a task force set up by the Illinois Institute for Environmental Quality, intended to limit noise from stationary sources. Sixteen public hearings have been held on the proposed standards and modifications have been made as a result of these sessions. It's up to the board to consider the modified proposal to limit noise emissions.

FRIENDLY SKIES are cleaner now: United Air Lines announced this week that modification of some 650 jet aircraft engines to virtually eliminate smoke emissions has been completed. The world's largest user of the Pratt and Whitney JT8D jet engine, the airline began its cleanup program on these engines three years ago.

Now a number of Boeing 727s and 737s are equipped with the modified engines. The modification involves the engine combustor, the area where the fuel and air are mixed before igniting to create thrust.

Fuel is more completely burned, eliminating unburned carbon particles in the modified engines. The engine was chosen because it had been estimated by federal and state officials that it accounted for 70 per cent of all smoke emissions from jet aircraft.

END TO INDECISION may be at hand as Gov. Walker gets around to naming the new chairman for the Illinois Pollution Control Board. He's indicated that acting chairman Samuel Lawton will stay until the end of this month.

This week's reappointment of Jacob DuMelle as a board member by the governor, still leaves another vacancy on the five-member board. DuMelle's appointment must be confirmed by the Senate. Last week, the Senate finally confirmed the appointment of Roger Seaman to the board.

HARNESSING SUNSHINE — It's no longer a far-fetched idea, said energy experts at this week's solar conference in Paris, France. Some 800 biologists, engineers, urban planners, industrialists and researchers participated in the conference. French minister of industrial development Jean Charbonnel told a receptive audience, "Action must pass as soon as possible from the researchers to the engineers in order that the domestic use of solar energy can be realized."

Charbonnel was among the speakers who suggested a sunshine collecting station in orbit around the earth to make electricity as one means of putting solar energy to work. The world energy shortages and the unreliability of oil companies were stressed at the conference.

James Harrison, former deputy minister of Canada's department of energy and resources, and now assistant science director for the sponsoring United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), said, "For the first time, proposals for supplying a large fraction of the world's vast power needs by solar energy no longer seem quite so far-fetched." Among the practical applications of sunshine power are small solar water heaters, plants to take the salt out of seawater and small engines used in African countries. Technological breakthroughs are still needed in the efficiency of absorption and the thermal dynamics of heat storage, Harrison said.

SCENIC DRIVE through the Shawnee National Forest in southern Illinois, proposed 40 years ago and endorsed by the Forest Service and development groups in the 1960s, is under attack by environmentalists. The opponents of this proposed high east-west highway were joined by the Illinois Department of Conservation at a Saturday hearing held in Marion. Testifying at the public meeting sponsored by the Shawnee National Forest, opponents said the $50 million highway would destroy the beauty of the forest along its route from the Mississippi to the Ohio rivers and disrupt wildlife management programs.

Testimony in support of the highway included the arguments that it would make Southern Illinois a better place to live, help attract more tourist dollars and make scenic areas more accessible.

Noel Sheldon, Shawnee Forest recreation and watershed staff officer who conducted the meeting, said a report with a recommendation will be issued in late fall or early winter. Five plans have been proposed for the area, ranging from a proposal to develop a combination highway and trail, to a recommendation that nothing be done to the terrain.

BETTER WATER WEEK will be coming up Aug. 12-19. According to the American Water Works Assn., a nonprofit, scientific society, the special week is an opportunity for the consumer to inspect his water system and learn how water is actually treated and "manufactured."

"Too many people take the water they get from their taps for granted," says Dr. G. E. Symons, president of the association. "They don't realize there is an $80 billion industry behind those taps."

An island progress overlooked

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — Part of Prudence Island, located in Narragansett Bay, would become a "people preserve" if the Rhode Island Heritage Foundation can obtain land to be abandoned by the Navy.

The island, with its rocky shoreline interlaced with sandy beaches and in sight of the mainland, has escaped the hustle and bustle of modern living in the 20th century.

Deer, fox, rabbits and quail roam the island which is seven miles long and one mile wide, and sea gulls circle endlessly near the shore in search of shellfish.

The Heritage Foundation would like to acquire the Navy's 600 acres of land on the island to assure its preservation in its unspoiled state.

Dudley A. Williams, an executive committee member of the foundation, said preservation of the island is important "especially in an industrial state like Rhode Island." He added that it is an opportunity "which wouldn't occur again in a hundred years, and shouldn't be let slip by."

Williams said the foundation already has 450 acres of land on the island and hopes to buy the area now held by the Navy.

He said when the Navy pulls out, the area will be up for grabs. The General Services Administration in Washington, which administers the naval property, must give first consideration to federal agencies, then to the state and local communities before hearing requests by local groups.

He describes a people preserve as an "unspoiled natural state that is not just for rabbits and fox, but for people to enjoy" and see natural Rhode Island as it has been for the last couple hundred years.

"People would be able to get off their boats or take the ferry . . . just to wander in some unspoiled country," the president of the foundation, Alfred P. VanLiew, said.

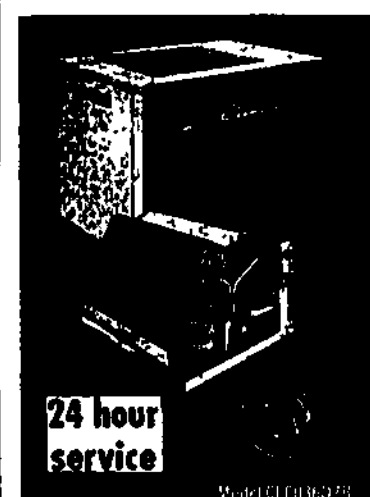

The foundation is planning to raise funds for the purchase of the property which was used primarily by the Navy to store ammunition.

Disabled widows will soon be eligible for Medicare

Widows who have been getting survivors payments from Social Security but who have been severely disabled for two years are eligible for Medicare, "but they must file a disability claim," according to Norman R. Thoresen, manager of the Arlington Heights Social Security Office.

Medicare has been available only to people 65 and older. Starting in July, the government health care insurance will be extended automatically to all disabled people under 65 if they've received monthly Social Security disability payments for two years or more.

"But some severely disabled widows 50 and over have never applied for disability payments," Thoresen said. "Generally they've been getting benefits as widowed mothers who have young or disabled children in their care.

"To get Medicare, these widows must file a claim for disability payments," Thoresen said. "As soon as possible, they should call, write, or visit any Social Security office. If a widow is unable to make the contact, a friend or relative may help. If necessary, arrangements can be made for a Social Security representative to visit her."

Quirks in the news

Paul: 'Thanks for helping George. Regards, Dick.'

by JIM HARVEY

THE PRODIGAL SON: Henrique de Freitas was 6 years old when he ran away from home 37 years ago. Recently he knocked on his mother's door. At first, his mother, Rosa, did not recognize her 43-year-old son. He recalled so many early childhood incidents, however, that she let him in. He said he wanted to work hard, become prosperous and take care of her in her old age. She spoke to the parish priest, who gave Henrique a job as a $1.50 a day laborer at the Roman Catholic Church of Saint Anthony of the Poor. Last week he ran away again. This time he took the church's $300 monthly payroll and housekeeping fund.

'THANKS FOR BEING IN-EFFECTIVE': Paul Elliott said he received a card from the White House, signed "Dick and Pat, David and Julie, and Eddie and Tricia," bearing the presidential seal and a picture of the Nixon family, thanking him "with our deep appreciation for helping make our victory on Nov. 7, 1972." Elliott, 21, who was Washington State youth coordinator for Sen. George McGovern, said, "I know we weren't able to carry the state, but I didn't realize we were that ineffective."

NO GOOD DRUNKARDS: Pub keepers are annoyed because the York (England) Arts Festival brought in Kevin O'Mahoney, 51, an Irishman, to play the role of a drunk in the opera Katya Kabanova. The festival director contended York men did not look drunk enough. Pub keeper Vincent Coulson, however, disagreed. "It's ridiculous to say they couldn't find anyone in York to be a drunkard," he said.

HE SHOULD'VE BUCKLED UP: Timothy Sowell, 25, of Fresno, Calif., got a free ride to jail because he forgot to fasten his seat belt. Police reported Sowell grabbed a purse from a woman at a shopping center and jumped into a waiting car. As the car sped away, the door opened and Sowell — still holding the purse — fell to the pavement. Police said Sowell did not buckle his seat belt.

MARRIAGE WAS A SENTENCE: Raymond Davies' wedding plans ran into a slight snag in Nottingham, England recently. He went to jail instead of church. A bachelor party with his best man and six other friends ended with Davies and the other seven men under arrest on charges of "affray and assault." The next day, his fiancée, Kay

Murphy, pleaded for Davies' release but police refused. The reception went on as scheduled, but was renamed a "tea party." Davies' father said "I suppose it went off quite well. There were no toasts, but all guests will be invited again when the ceremony takes place."

FIREMEN FLUNK: When the first major blaze in 18 years hit Lima, Mont., recently the firemen flunked the test. Their siren didn't work and the extinguishers were empty when the department tried to quench the blaze which partially destroyed Bramlett's Cafe.

NATIONALIZE CRIME?: With Britain embroiled in another controversy over nationalizing industries and losses in those already state-owned, the following letter — quoted in full — from Lt. Col. W.E.C. Pettman appeared in The London Times: "Sir, why not nationalize crime?"

Then it won't pay."

ABOUT TIME . . . HEY! The residents of Cliffe Field Road in Sheffield, England, who have been trying for 30 years to get their street paved, finally got the application approved and the work completed. The next day, after the paving was finished, the municipal gas men tore up the street to lay gas pipes.

Veterans' commission rep now at Harper

The Veterans' Affairs Office at Harper College in Palatine is now staffed by a representative of the Illinois Veterans' Commission.

Commission representative Darrell L. Stanfield is prepared to assist veterans of the northwest suburban area with information on state and federal benefits to veterans, as well as rights to which they are entitled.

The Harper College Office of Placement and Student Aids will continue to assist veterans who are Harper students with educational benefit applications.

A brochure available at Stanfield's office lists general information on 43 benefits available to qualified veterans through state and federal government programs. Included in the brochure are educational benefits for veterans and dependents, bonuses, GI loans, hospitalization and reemployment rights.

. . . But the crook was a 'good guy'

PORTO ALLEGRE, Brazil (UPI) — The director of the department of street cleaning in this southern city, Julio Rubbo, gave a lift to a stranger recently between two small nearby towns.

When the hitchhiker began leaning against him on the curves, Rubbo became suspicious. Discreetly, he examined his pockets. His wallet was missing. Keeping one hand on the wheel, Rubbo drew his pistol and growled: "Hand over the wallet, crook, or I'll shoot you right in the face."

The hitchhiker handed over the wallet and then leaped from the moving car, fleeing on foot.

But when Rubbo returned home, his wife told him she had been worried about him all day, because he had left his wallet on his bed.

Looking at the wallet he had recovered, Rubbo discovered, far from foiling a crime, he had robbed a stranger of $10.

So far, all efforts to return the money have been futile. Driving the same route several times, Rubbo has never seen his victim. And the man was apparently too intimidated to report the crime to police.

11% more		11% more

This coupon is worth 11% more on your passbook savings.

Deposit by the 10th and earn interest from July 1st.

Bell pays 11% more than commercial bank passbook accounts.

Most commercial bank passbook accounts pay you 4½% interest. Bell pays you 5%.

Perhaps that doesn't sound like much more. But Bell's higher interest actually lets you collect 11% more for your savings. In other words, for every $100 in interest you earn in a regular bank passbook—these same savings could earn you $111.00 interest in a Bell passbook—that's 11% more.

We think you'll agree that in these times of inflation—times when every dollar counts—11% more for your savings isn't something you should overlook.

We don't stop with higher interest, either

Bell's passbook lets you earn extra interest two ways:

First, we pay you day-in, day-out interest—so no matter when you deposit or withdraw, you'll be assured of collecting interest for every day your savings were on deposit.

We also pay you interest from the first when you deposit by the 10th of the month—so you'll be able to collect these extra days of interest every month. Just leave your savings on deposit until the end of the calendar quarter.

It's convenient to earn 11% more, too

If you're like many people—you probably save at your bank (and receive their lower interest rate) because it just seems more convenient.

Well, if convenience is your concern, we'd like to suggest our Save-by-Mail plan. It's a good way to receive the maximum amount of dollars for your savings. And it could be even more convenient than saving at your bank.

Our Save-by-Mail envelopes are postage paid. All you do is send us your check and a deposit slip. We'll immediately credit your deposit to your higher earning Bell account.

This coupon is all you need to start

The coupon (transfer form) above can take your lazy bank savings and really start them earning again.

Here's all you do:

1. Fill out the form above.
2. Send it to Bell with your bank passbook.
3. Then we'll automatically transfer your savings from your lower interest bank account—to your higher interest Bell account where you can earn 11% more interest on your savings.

Certificates earn more than ever

If you have $5,000 to qualify for a Bell Savings 2-year Certificate, they also pay more than commercial banks. You can take advantage of Bell's new higher certificate yields (where 6% earns 6.27% on an annual basis). Effective July 1, Bell has increased the return on all certificates—not just one. Any Bell savings counselor will be happy to explain our certificate plans to you.

You see, when we say "money grows faster at Bell," we really mean it!

You can halt corruption

A recent Gallup poll shows steadily increasing numbers of Americans are getting more and more disillusioned with the integrity of American government.

A key contributing factor, no doubt, is the current Watergate scandal and its corresponding investigation by a select Senate subcommittee.

But there are others. And the current federal investigations into suspected governmental improprieties in Wheeling and Hoffman Estates bring the point home to the Northwest suburbs.

Federal investigators have been at work for months in Wheeling, seeking evidence to prove what they allege is a pattern of extortion by public officials against housing developers.

The Herald started its own investigation in Wheeling prior to the initiation of the government probe and has turned over to the U.S. Attorney's office much of the information obtained.

Today, the matter is pending before a federal grand jury and sources close to the investigation have indicated to the Herald indictments may be coming in August or September.

A similar investigation, being conducted by a second federal agency, is underway in Hoffman Estates. It apparently centers on zoning and annexation practices of a prior administration.

Certainly, no one has been proven guilty of a crime in either case and we hope judgment will be withheld until all the facts are in.

At the same time, however, the very existence of such federal investigations serves to foster and strengthen the growing disillusionment in our public officials.

This kind of governmental black-eye — whether it occurs at the national, state, county or local level — is attributable to a widespread failure of government.

Government has become too big and too powerful. Bureaucracy has grown — even in such small communities as Wheeling and Hoffman Estates — so large and so pervasive that, inevitably, it begets corruption.

To head off those governmental maladies the public must cease encouraging and refuse to allow government to play such a broad integral part in our everyday lives. Secondly the public must demand a thorough cleanup and be willing to report illegal actions by governmental officials and employees.

We can not help but feel most, if not all, the scandals confronting us today could have been averted if one person of honesty and integrity would have forsaken his own personal profit and exposed the improprieties at the outset.

Instead, we have today — both locally and nationally — a mood of disillusionment and a serious lack of confidence in government. As government expands its influence into everyday American life, bureaucracy balloons. Simultaneously, the government grows more inaccessible and unanswerable to the public it is bound to serve and those in the political arena command less and less respect.

For years that vicious circle has continued to spin until we find today what has been called the low point in the public's regard for politics in this century.

The pattern will continue until the public demands its halt.

Singleness

So marriage-minded has American society been traditionally that it comes as somewhat of a surprise to learn that one out of every three adult Americans is single — a total of 43 million.

Of this number, 22 million have never been married. An almost equal number, 21 million, have been married but through divorce or widowhood are again single.

To delve into the statistics further, of the 43 million single adults, 25 million are women; 14 million (of both sexes) are in the 18-24 age bracket; 14 million are in the 25-54 age bracket and 15 million are over 55.

Shifts in the population structure, and the social changes they bring, don't happen overnight, though it often seems that way. The fact is that for the past decade the singles' growth rate has been more than double that of the general population.

Between 1960 and 1970, the adult population grew by 16 per cent but the single group (those never married) grew 39 per cent. At the same time, the widowed and divorced group grew 34 per cent. The absolute number of divorces increased by a whopping 82 per cent.

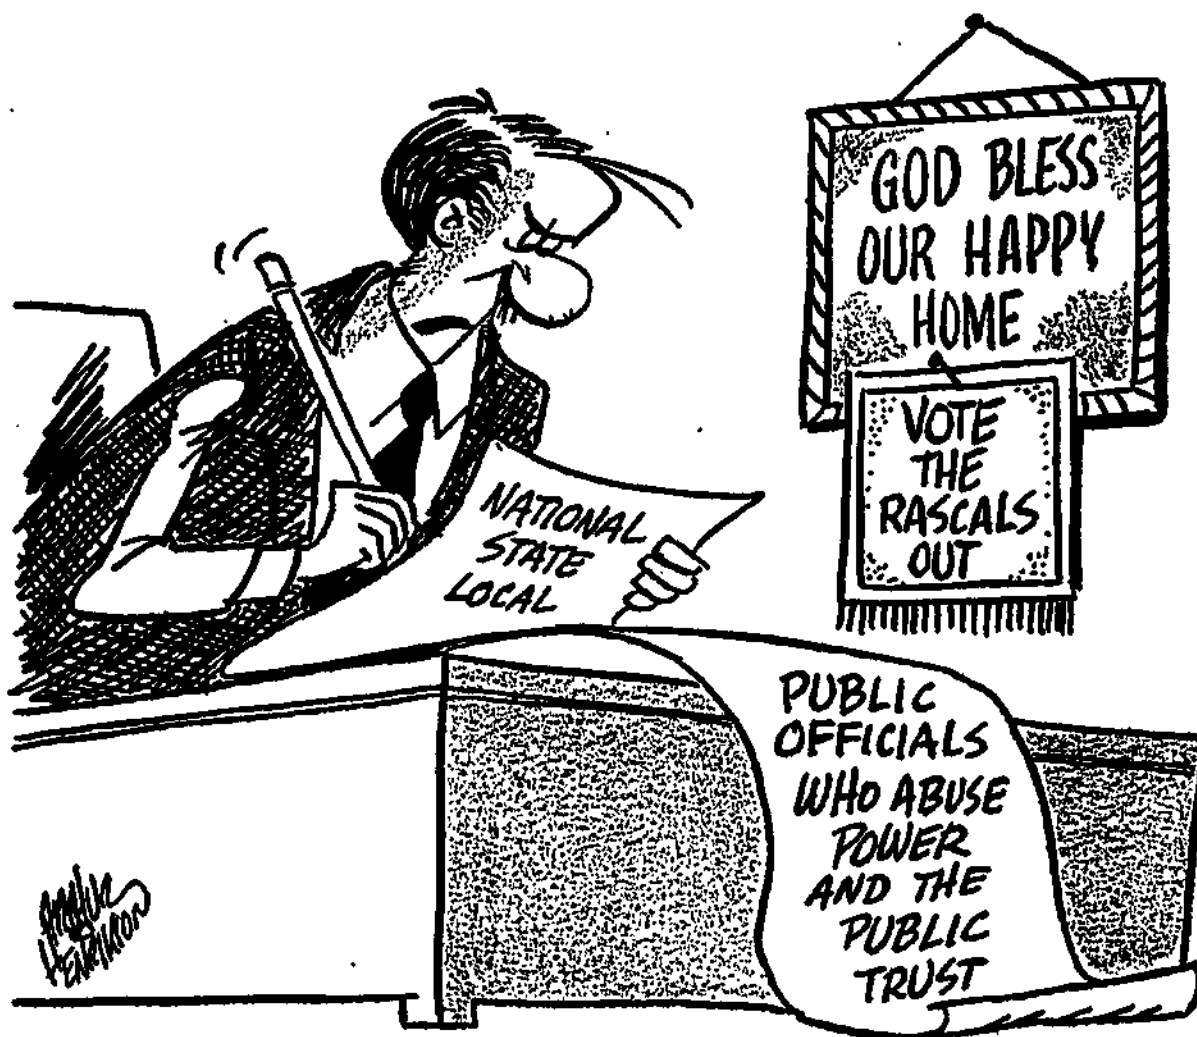

Behind the figures is a trend toward later marriage or no marriage or non-permanent marriage which finds more and more Americans living more and more of their adult lifetimes in the single state.

All of which is leading to some of the most startling social changes our society has ever known, as witnessed by the growth of apartment complexes, and at least one country club, for singles only.

Singles now even have their own magazine, appropriately named "Single." Just debuted, this special interest publication for the single, divorced, widowed and unmarried, says publisher Hy Steirman, "an endeavor to reach individuals who by choice or by chance find themselves single in a marriage-oriented society — to help them to adjust, to develop fully, to discover identity," etc.

With a potential readership of 43 million, the prospects of commercial success for "Single" seem eminently bright. In any event, the growth of the single population as a percentage of all Americans promises to have great impact on the lifestyles, goals, attitudes, aspirations and mores of the entire nation.

I'm making a little list

Fence post letters to the editor

Where did witnesses go?

On Friday, June 15, I left work early (almost 3 p.m.) with a bad toothache. This is neither here nor there, but simply to state to you that I was in a hurry to get home.

On Friday, June 15, on the East River Road train track crossing in Des Plaines, a car got hit by a freight train. This was obviously neither here nor there to the 30 other people who witnessed the accident, and never bothered to call the police or the railroad.

The attractive woman in the large car with the white poodle whose hands flew up to her face when the car was hit. The truck driver who stood in the pouring rain (remember how hard it rained that day?) pointing an accusing finger at the boy who had gone around the lowered gates only to get stuck on the tracks. The two teenage boys who came running down the road in shiny green rain ponchos to see what was holding up traffic. And, let's not forget the driver of the car coming around the gates from the other direction (he too was interested in beating the freight), who ran the boy off the crossing and caused the boy's car to get stuck. He drove away, leaving the stuck car; a panicked older lady; many late drivers; an undoubtedly shook engineer and brakeman, and people horrified at the consequences.

So, the car got stuck, and the first freight train braked in time and stopped almost in the crossing. And the boy stood and watched as a freight came from the other direction, unable to stop (a radio call from the first freight came too late) and hit the car.

The purpose of this letter is to tell all the people who were there and witnessed the accident, who went home and told their families about it, who went to work on Monday and told their co-workers about it, who went to a barbecue and told their neighbors about it, that you're telling the wrong people. It's the Sheriff's Department and the Milwaukee Road who are most deeply concerned and involved in this matter.

There was only one witness to the accident who came forward and said anything. Who called the police and left a name and address. That was me. But, I'm not looking for any laurels. You see, I had never seen a car get hit by a train before, and in all the excitement, I missed a lot of the details. But the others, those are the ones I keep telling the investigators, "If only you could find out who the truck driver was, if only you could locate the two boys, and all the others. I'm sure they could help you."

And what about the boy whose car got stuck on the tracks? He's gone. He disappeared. Someone must have seen where he went. I didn't. Did he run into the forest preserve? Did someone give him a ride? Where is he? No license plates on the car; was it stolen? They're running a trace on it. But, does he want the police to come to him and take him away, or would he prefer to go on his own? Where is he? And what did the people on the other side of the lowered gates see? What did they see that I didn't see? Is my story accurate or is it conjecture? Can they correct my description? The speed of the train? The length of time the gates were lowered before the boy attempted to cross the tracks? "It's like a puzzle," the investigator told me. "We try to find the pieces and put them together and see what kind of a picture we get. But when no one comes forward to offer us any information, it takes us a long time to find out what really happened."

Where are the rest of the pieces to that puzzle? Home thinking about it? Afraid to get involved? Involved in what? That's what I want to know! Afraid to give 15 minutes of their time to help people who have always helped them; people who will always help them in the future. Afraid to give a description? This article isn't a pitch for the railroad or the police. They'll eventually get to the bottom of this. But, it is a pitch to get the people out who saw the accident. To get them to call the Milwaukee Road. To call the Sheriff's Department. It's a pitch for me and the others like me who stand up and do what's right. If everyone relied on the other guy, if everyone thought someone else would handle it, what kind of shape would we be in?

The East River Road train track crossing is a small incident compared to what went on in New York several years ago when a woman was stabbed on the street, while people hung out their windows and watched her die. But it serves to show how people react.

I had a toothache, and that's taken care of. And not wanting to get overly dramatic I must say this. I have a heartache. I just can't believe that people could be so uncaring. If I have to rely on people like those at that train crossing on June 15 if I ever need help I'll be in a bad way. I mean, I'll really be in a bad way, and it's not too late. More information is needed. I've asked the investigators to let me know if anyone steps forward and gives some information. I'd like to meet that person and tell them my faith in my fellow man has been reinstated. Besides, the toothache is gone, but that heartache, well, that can be there a long time.

Registration hit

Last week I witnessed and was part of such mass disorganization in this community that I can't believe that mature adults could possibly be the originators, that is, registration in the Arlington Heights Summer Park Program.

I waited in line 1½ hours, baby in arms, while one poor woman at Camelot Park registered people and took their pictures — an unnecessary expense, a waste of time, labor, material and a genuine "pain in the neck" to those of us that must carry and be responsible for those passes each time we use the pool.

For five years I lived in a community where we received little metal badges with a number that had to be sewn onto one's suit. Therefore, it could not be lost by a forgetful child (as most children are) nor could it be easily removed and transferred to someone else's suit for an afternoon of so-called "free-swimming." Look at the labor and taxpayer's money that this practice would save! Or are they just interested in teaching us the practice of patience?

Also, those who only need their passes validated should have been in another line and not have had to wait in line with those that needed pictures taken.

I hope that next year a better, more efficient system may be initiated and I recommend a serious investigation into the merits of the metal badges over the picture by the officials of the park district.

Officials praised

A thank you to our present village board for their responsiveness to The People. It is a genuine pleasure to be able to speak at village meetings without being "put down." It's also refreshing to see politicians keeping campaign promises. I, as a concerned homeowner in a flood prone area, sincerely appreciate their efforts.

Legislature

meets too often

Rep. William J. (Bingo Bill) Murphy, R-Antioch, the majority whip of the Illinois House of Representatives, accused Gov. Daniel Walker of "a complete lack of communication, cooperation or leadership."

Gov. Walker complained of the "obstacles thrown up by (House Speaker W. Robert) Blair, Senate President (William C.) Harris and the rest of the obstructionist Republicans."

Rep. John J. Matiejewich, D-North Chicago, sat, half-sleeping, during Sunday afternoon's dragging session of the legislature, muttering about bills being debated which could be held with no detriment to anyone for another year.

Sen. John A. Graham, R-Barrington, sat in his Senate chair across the Capitol rotunda and declared that the reason the legislature was still dragging on was "there's no damned leadership over there," indicating the House chambers where his Republican colleague, Blair, presides.

You may, without contradiction, agree with the statements of all four.

Gov. Walker consistently failed to bridge the communications gaps between himself and the 78th General Assembly or to enlist support for a reasonable legislative program.

Blair, Harris and other "obstructionist Republicans" spent more time worrying about ways to embarrass the governor than they did about seeing to the legislative needs of the state.

Members from throughout the state continued to push legislation of special interest groups while metropolitan mass transit, property tax relief and a campaign disclosure law were submerged in the political swamp.

And in the closing days of the session, Blair, the most powerful man in the Illinois legislature, was seldom to be seen, providing as Graham put it "no damned leadership."

The past session of the General Assembly provided one of the most compelling arguments that could be concocted for reversing the trend toward a full-time legislature.

This session proved almost beyond argument that the only way that anything meaningful will be achieved in the Illinois legislature is by strict limits on its work schedule.

In years past, the legislature has fumbled along until the closing hours of what used to be the mandatory adjournment date on June 30, usually winding up stopping the clock at one minute to midnight, so it could wind up the final issues of the session.

That mandatory adjournment date no longer exists, and this year the session hobbled along for three days past its adjournment target.

Had it not been for the shortening tempers and the vacation plans of legislators, they might be still at it.

Moreover, the fact that the legislature can convene itself at will makes it all the easier for the leadership to put off important legislative matters such as mass transit until the next time they convene, in order to gain political advantage.

It has become a tired adage that "No man is safe in his life, liberty or property while the legislature is in session," but it is also becoming more and more obvious.

It would be a service to the public if the legislature would reconvene in October for only one purpose, to resurrect the former law that it could meet for only six months every two years, or when summoned for specific legislation by the governor.

Word a day

Business Today

by DEAN C. MILLER
NEW YORK — When millionaire Dan W. Lufkin walked away from Wall Street two years ago to take a $32,286 job with the State of Connecticut a friend thought he had "flipped" or was gearing up for a political career.

"Not at all," says Lufkin, a founder of the Donakson, Lufkin, Jenrette Inc. investment house. "I had a belief, or call it a dream, that business and government must work together or both will go down the drain. I became state commissioner of the Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) because it involved a national problem — solid wastes. If I could get business and government to cooperate and come up with a sound state answer to that one, it would be reward enough."

There are those who feel that Lufkin, who resigned the state job effective July 1, did just that in 22 months. After gathering a dozen or more agencies under one environmental protection roof, Lufkin set out to convince the Connecticut legislature to authorize a statewide system of solid waste control. Just recently Gov. Meskill signed into law the Resources Recovery Authority Act giving a 10-man body the power of eminent domain, the power of contracting and the power of state credit up to $250 million of bonds.

BEFORE THAT Lufkin persuaded 22 companies to bid for the privilege of devising a statewide solid waste disposal system that would protect the environment, recover material and be economical. And he asked them to do it on a non-profit, share-the-cost arrangement.

While some of them agreed to participate to "shine a little image," they also realized that any breakthrough in solid waste disposal meant entrance into a $6 billion market. In Connecticut alone the citizens generate 3.5 million tons of trash annually. The annual U.S. total is 4.5 billion tons. States are running out of land fill areas. Incineration fouls the air. Prices for handling trash are soaring.

General Electric won the contract and came up with a system that may be a model for the other 49 states.

The Connecticut plan envisions 23 waste separation plants, one large material recovery plant and five energy recovery plants.

GARBAGE AND trash would go to a separation plant instead of a landfill site or incinerator. There it would be classified, sorted and reduced to manageable size by machines.

It's estimated that a Connecticut family of four will produce by 1985 about 85 pounds of solid waste annually. Under the proposed state system, 60 pounds of that total would be combustible material and could be converted to steam or fuel oil and natural gas by a pyrolysis technique. Twenty-five pounds of noncombustibles shipped to a reclamation plant for processing and sale would be broken down into about eight pounds of glass, seven pounds of iron and one pound of aluminum and other metals.

ONLY NINE pounds would remain in the form of a harmless inert substance usable as land fill.

Natural resources would be saved instead of buried or burned.

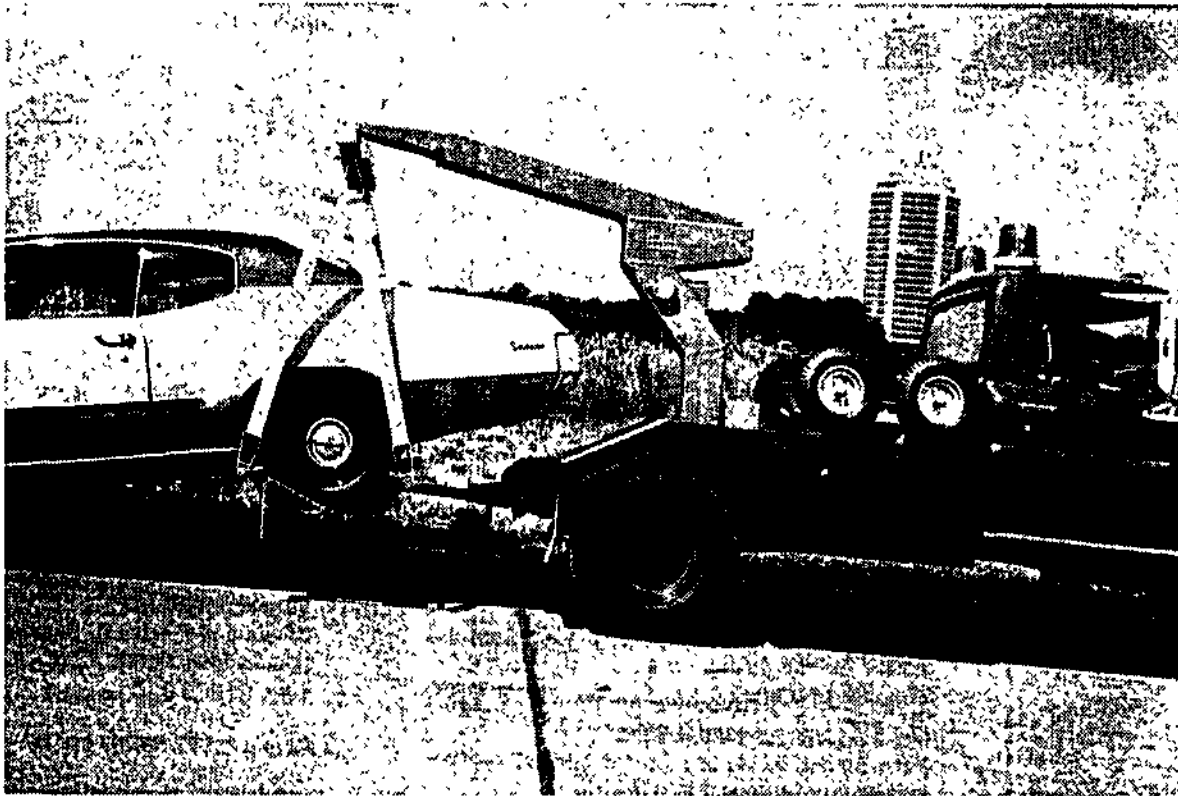

The air would be cleaner. The cost of disposal cheaper. The state expects to offer this service at about $10 per ton, netting it $35 million annually in users' fees plus what it gets for reclaimed material. The combustible material burned also would take care of about 11 per cent of the state's electrical needs.

Lufkin says the first plant could be put into operation within a few years and the total system effective by 1985 if the state makes it a priority item.

D. J. FINK, general manager of GE's Space Division which devised the system, noted that the public always asks why business can't do something about trash if it can put men on the moon. "Now, in Connecticut, we've been given the chance to answer that question," he said.

"The only answer to many of our problems," says Lufkin, "is to let government do what it does best, point the way and make the rules, and let business do what it does best, operate the business involved. I think Connecticut's new solid waste program will prove that and, in the process, eliminate some of the mutual distrust which has slowed down the country."

Safety bumpers present problems

'Cradle snatcher' saves cars Safety bumpers on some 1973 cars can mean that towing by conventional methods may damage the car, according to B. D. Ahn, president of the Vulcan Equipment Co. Ltd., Toronto, Canada. He added, "New bumpers and body work on the new cars are more susceptible to towing damage."

To solve this problem, Vulcan has developed a new towing system called the Cradle Snatcher. This towing system uses wheel-lift cradle slings rather than belts, slings and hooks to left and tow a car.

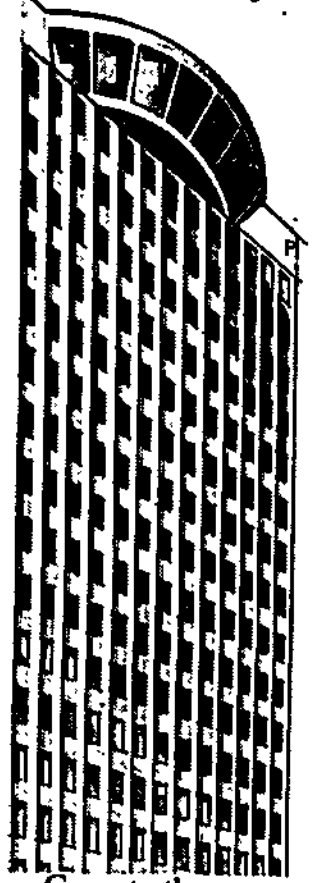

Portable cradle bars are put in front of and behind the wheels, then are fastened together by chains. Heavy duty nylon slings are dropped on both sides of the car, hooked to the cradle bars and the car is lifted by a telescopic hydraulic boom. The weight of the car is on the wheels and not on the body or the bumper. The Vulcan system can be purchased with a telescopic hydraulic boom and an optional four-ton winch or just the boom can be installed on any standard one-ton truck.

With this system and its swivel connection to the boom, cars can be lifted out of tight parking places. A telescoping tow bar locks the lifting cradles to the rear of the truck, and eliminates any swaying or jerking motion of a car during towing.

Vulcan also manufactures a lift and tow system to mount on standard pick up trucks.

Culligan International Union Oil Co.

Culligan International Co. president Harold F. Werhane announced that sales and earnings records were established in the fiscal year ended April 30.

Worldwide consolidated sales were $62,831,073, compared to $53,214,524 for the same period last year, an increase of 18 per cent. Earnings before extraordinary items amounted to $3,447,257, a 55 per cent increase over the $2,222,027 earned last year. Earnings amounted to $1.02 a share against 66 cents a share earned last year, based on the average number of shares outstanding during the respective periods.

"Fourth quarter earnings of 34 cents a share reached an all-time high for any quarterly period, and is a continuation of the upward earnings trend experienced for the past 11 consecutive quarters," Werhane said.

In the United States, the marketing efforts of Culligan franchised dealers kept pace with the consumer interest in water conditioning appliances. Marketed sales increases of products for commercial-industrial and institutional applications were also reported. In the U.S., Culligan has experienced a 29 per cent increase in sales volume in this field during the past three years. Culligan subsidiaries outside the U.S. were also of major importance in the establishment of record sales and earnings.

Individual investors fleeing stock market

DALLAS (UPI) — The small, individual investor is fleeing the stock market and has "lost confidence in the market, depressing prices," according to C. V. Wood, president of McCulloch Oil Co. of California. Wood said publicly-held companies have a vested interest in keeping individual investors because of the liquidity they provide.

Being the "best of the best" is a designation recently achieved by Arlington Realty from Homeric, the nation's largest home counseling service.

In the latest edition of the Homeric newsletter, Arlington Realty was announced as the top Realtor of 1,300 real estate brokerage firms serving 6,800 towns and cities across the nation. Arlington Realty topped all others in Homeric referrals for 1972.

"Homeric's brokers are the best," the front page story said, and Arlington Realty was cited as "Homeric's Top Man." A picture of Al Cinquini, one of the owners, appeared on the front page of the booklet.

Arlington Realty was formed in 1950 and when the present owners purchased the name in 1960, one of the first things they did was to seek the Homeric affiliation for the northwest suburban area.

"We knew Homeric was the oldest, largest and most progressive of all the home counseling services in the nation, and we wanted to be associated with the best. We were honored to be selected as their broker for the MAP area. Since then our Homeric sales have increased each year so we consider it a great honor to be number one out of 1,300," said Herb Carl, co-owner of Arlington Realty.

The 23-year-old firm is owned by Bill Kleiner, Herb Carl, Elmer Zilen and Al Cinquini. All have lived in the area for 20 years or more. Kleiner was born and raised in Arlington Heights.

All have wide experience in all phases of real estate. Zilen formerly had his own building business. Kleiner has done extensive work in land development and multiple family dwellings. Cinquini is a top advertising and public relations man. Carl is a professional appraiser with a background of 22 years experience appraising for savings and loan associations and large Chicago banks.

Ten years ago, Arlington Realty management held a session for planning future development. The goal was to expand without sacrificing personal, individual service and attention to the many details of follow-up service to clients. Since that time, the sales organization has been expanded from six to 40. The number of offices has increased from one to four.

The plan has paid off for the firm, as sales have grown from $2.4 million per year to a present rate of $24 million for 1973 based on sales in excess of $12 million for the first six months, an increase of 32 per cent over 1972.

Even more important is the high referral rate of which Arlington Realty has always been so proud. Seven out of every 10 new clients are sent to them by former clients and friends. Eighty per cent of their sales volume is produced by referral sources.

In considering the reasons for its constant and remarkably dramatic growth, the owners give full credit to the 40 sales associates. Careful selection plus constant in-service training has resulted in a top flight team of sales associates working together for Arlington Realty clients.

A 12-module sales training session has just been completed and a new class will begin shortly.

Sales associates have frequently been honored for excellence in-service to the public. Lorraine Larsen is a member of the exclusive $2 million sales club.

Members of the elite Million Dollar Sales Club include: Evelyn Hines (8 years), Lorraine Larsen (7 years), Ed Joyce (3 years), Lillian Marshall (2 years), Jim Blaeser, Nylene Swaby and Terry Leighty.

Lillian Marshall and Dorothy Jacobs are both graduates of the Realtors Institute. Many of the sales people have been with the firm for more than five years.

Arlington Realty is a charter member of MAP Multiple Listing Service and also a member of national, state and local Boards of Realtors.

Village Square broker passes $1 million

Bob Lotka has reached the coveted million dollar sales goal for 1973, with seven months of sales activity still ahead. This is the fifth consecutive year in his 6 1/2-year real estate career, that he has participated in real estate sales exceeding $1 million.

Use the right tool for the job — and use it properly

With labor costs higher and higher, the average homeowner is not likely to hire someone to do small jobs around the house, and therefore finds himself handling tools more than ever before.

Someone hitting his thumb with a hammer may seem funny until it happens to you. Dull tools are likelier to cut you than sharp ones.

Before tackling any job, large or small, remember these basic rules — use the right tool for the job, use the tool properly, keep the tools in good condition.

For the basic tools you are likely to be using, here are some basic rules.

• Hammer — When you strike the nail, strike it with the full face of the hammer. Striking it at an angle causes the hammer to slip off the nail. Hold the nail between thumb and forefinger. Hold it near the head, not the point. Hammer handles should be smooth and free of splinters. Use a hammer heavy enough so that pounding is at a minimum, but not so heavy you can't lift it. Make certain the handle is tight in the hammer head.

Don't use a hammer if the face of the head is dented or nicked.

• Screwdriver — Have an assortment. One size won't do every job. The right size is one in which the blade tip can be seated firmly and squarely against the bottom and sides of the screw slot. Don't substitute a screwdriver for a chisel or prybar. Don't hold the work in one hand, the screwdriver in the other. That's a way to gouge a hole in your hand.

• Saw — A sharp saw cuts, a dull one slips. Support your work on a sawhorse. Start the cut on the back stroke and keep an even steady pressure while sawing. If you are cutting metal with a hacksaw, fasten the work in a vise.

• Pliers — Have several types; there's no such thing as universal pliers. Don't use pliers with worn jaws. Don't use pliers to try and loosen or tighten bolts or pipe fittings where great pressure is needed. Use a wrench.

• Wrench — Again, you will need a variety. The adjustable wrench is the nearest thing to an all-purpose wrench but you will learn after a time what other kinds to get. Do not put a pipe on the handle of a small wrench to increase leverage. Use a larger wrench. For round objects you will need a pipe wrench with a movable upper jaw that tightens automatically when pressure is applied to the handle.

• Power tools — Any electrical tool should be grounded before using. The exception is the newer types of portable tools with insulated, nonmetal housings. If you have any number of power tools, try to run them on a separate circuit to avoid overloading.

Don't use a power saw without a guard over the blade. Check the material you are cutting for nails. Don't wear a long necktie or loose, floppy sleeves.

• Storage — Have a place for your tools. Don't toss them together into a drawer or box. If you can, hang up hand tools.

New method developed for programming computers

A new way of programming computers has been developed which takes most of the risk out of buying investment property.

Using the new programming, what would normally take hours to figure can now be computed in minutes with maximum accuracy, according to Robert B. Green, president of MGM Realtors.

Developed by Realtron Corporation, the computer program was recently explained to realtors attending a seminar in Florida. Green attended the seminar and has incorporated the new programming into his Skokie office computer.

Green says he can program all the facts and can project how a person buying income property today will net out in the sale of this property as far ahead as 20 years, based on present income tax laws. This projection also takes into consideration today's value of the dollar compared to the dollar value at a future time... specifically, the time of the projected sale.

FOR SOMEONE currently interested in selling income property the computer will tell whether it is best to hold it, trade or exchange it, refinance it, or sell it outright. It can also tell the customer the type of depreciation to take and when it is best to switch to another kind of depreciation to put the customer in the most advantageous income tax situation.

The computer is also programmed so it will ask questions. Called the conversational mode, it will print out questions if adequate information is not provided in the original data.

This sophisticated new investment information method can also print out mortgage amortization, depreciation schedules, investment credit information, monthly payments on an existing mortgage, and the balance existing on a current mortgage.

Green believes the new computer programming will add a new dimension to his business. He is making the computer printouts available free of charge to clients interested in real estate investments.

Baird, Warner commercial division

Baird & Warner Inc., has changed the name of its Commercial Management Division to Shopping Center Division, it was announced recently by John W. Baird, president of the diversified real estate firm.

The new name "will more accurately reflect this division's predominant involvement in the management, leasing and development of shopping centers," Baird said.

Under the direction of vice president Leo Koltz, CPM, the division serves as the leasing and management agent for seven shopping centers, has developed three, and is in the process of developing several more.

Baird & Warner May sales top 1972 results

Baird & Warner, Inc., reported substantial increases in real estate for the month of May.

Total sales dollar volume for the diversified company increased by $5,170,425, or 27 per cent, from $19,909,073 to $24,909,498 for the current month. The volume increase was achieved on the strength of 16.5 per cent increase in production. Number of sales participations jumped from 359 in the year ago month to 415 this May.

According to Robert G. Walters, vice president and general sales manager, residential division, residential volume included 380 properties with a total value of $10,680,698.

Mace Cole, vice president and sales manager, commercial, investment, and industrial division, reported the sale of 35 properties by his staff representing a dollar volume of $4,576,800.

Results for the year to date remained firmly ahead of the first five months of Baird & Warner's record-breaking year in 1972. For this year production has increased by 211 units, or 12.3 per cent, from 1,639 last year to 1,850 sales participations this year. This has propelled dollar volume 30 per cent ahead of last year, from $83,757,004 to $109,530,338, a sharp rise of $25,773,334.

Have you considered renting an apartment as investment?

Have you ever considered renting an apartment as an investment?

"Most people consider three major decisions when contemplating to rent an apartment home," Donald E. Felix, director of marketing for Donald J. Scholz and Co., remarked, "price, location and the amenities that are included within their apartment home community."

Versailles-On-The-Lake, off Golf Road in Schaumburg is a typical apartment home investment, Felix said, plus, it also has the amenities and location requirements for an apartment home community being located just one half mile west of Woodfield Mall.

"We encourage our apartment home owners to decorate their apartment homes in keeping with the trends of contemporary living, be it choosing color schemes, wallpaper, shelf arrangements, mirrors, wood beams or paneling, so that, they feel an intimate relationship with their new apartment home, rather than having the sameness that most apartment complexes offer," Felix asserted.

Why should persons rent rather than buy?

"Capital outlay is one of the main reasons our apartment home owners don't buy. Another reason is a good percentage of the persons work within a 10 mile radius of Versailles-On-The-Lake, and are with a company which someday may move them," Felix explained. "Because of these reasons, they feel it is better to rent an apartment home and make it as comfortable as possible without the investment in an individual home."

IN A RECENT market study by Scholz Company on their Versailles project, they discovered that one-third of those renting were single and employed in the surrounding area; the remaining two-thirds that were married worked both locally and out-of-town and of those married, 10 per cent had children.

"Sixty per cent of our present apartment homeowners have moved from another rental project within the immediate Chicagoland area," Felix noted. "The balance of those now renting apartment homes at Versailles-On-The-Lake have moved from out of state into the Chicagoland area."

The survey also discovered that the majority of the renters were under 50 years of age.

Occupants come from upper middle class economic levels who are white collar workers with such jobs as businessmen, salesmen or professional people, the survey noted.

"We discovered that because of our clientele, it was just not enough to display furnished apartment models," Felix explained. "Today's market calls for a 'convenience' approach to lifestyle and the lease owners free thought in decorating."

"To somewhat accomplish this, we decorated our two model apartments in Contemporary and Traditional styling filled with accessories most people add to their homes to give a lived-in feeling. It proved to be successful and distinguished it from other competitive apartment complexes in the area."

HOWEVER, MARKETING studies and decorating changes are only two additions to the basic philosophy behind leasing apartments. The first premise is a good sales staff, Felix said.

"The most important factor to marketing an apartment complex, besides constructing a good, sound product, is to hire a competent resident manager," Felix asserted. "Certain characteristics which fit this person are that she or he is conscientious, between 30 and 50 years of age, have no children, should live on project, handle all service complaints, treat project as if it was their own investment and receive a good salary along with commission."

Not all problems of apartment complexes are with the customers or competitors, or even within the corporate structure, they also lie with the location and zoning within a suburb.

According to Felix, Versailles-On-The-Lake had to prove to Schaumburg that there was a need for an apartment complex. One way Scholz Company accomplished this was through a tax impact study which indicates how much the developer will pay in school taxes to even the burden to the village, based on a certain amount per child for the year.

Versailles-On-The-Lake, on Plum Grove Road, just south of Golf Road (Ill. Hwy. 58) is entering its second phase of construction, scheduled for completion in late 1973 or early 1974. It has four three-story buildings housing 208 units.

THE OVERALL community, consisting of a total of 620 units in 12 three-story buildings, will encompass approximately 30 acres, including two lakes.

The present buildings are built around a five-acre lake which has a fountain in the center and can be used for ice skating in the winter.

Other recreational facilities include a clubhouse with heated swimming pool and sun decks, exercise and sauna rooms, billiard room, lounge with fireplace, private dining, bar, game and meeting rooms.

Future plans call for a par-three golf course, tennis courts and facilities for fishing and sailing (sailfish class).

Adjacent to, and north of, the apartment community is the Versailles Village Center, now under construction. This will provide convenient shops and services to the residents of Versailles-On-The-Lake and to the surrounding area.

"We are not offering an apartment in a building of many apartments in which people just come and go and never communicate, we are offering a full service community from living and playing to shopping and other services not found in many apartment projects," Felix asserted.

"With all this, we feel a person is not just renting an apartment in a complex, but investing in a way of life that he could only experience without the large capital outlay, he would need if he bought. Renting an apartment, can be an investment!"

Office building topped out at O'Hare Airport

The O'Hare Airport area's newest office building has been topped out at 8101 W. Higgins Rd., Chicago, on a two-acre site overlooking the Kennedy Expressway. Lee Miglin, vice president of Arthur Rubloff & Co., is developing the ten-story, all electric structure, designed by Otis & Assoc., as a luxury office building. The Rubloff firm will be leasing and management agents. Miglin also developed the nearby National Tea building.

Miglin's new development will be the first major office tower to be built in three years between O'Hare Airport and downtown Chicago for tenant leasing.

A distinctive feature of the 120,000 square-foot structure will be its top floor of offices surrounding a landscaped atrium covered by a clear laminated glass geodesic sky-dome in the roof. Windows will be double-insulated, nonglare, silver mirrored glass. Other features include three high-speed Otis elevators, carpeting and draperies provided throughout the building and both enclosed and outdoor parking. The entire building has been constructed with special acoustical treatment to soundproof the offices from the activities of O'Hare. The site adjoins the 115-room Howard Johnson Motel and is within walking distance of car rental facilities, retail shops and restaurants.

Miglin noted that the site was deliberately selected for its access to and from the Kennedy Expressway by either of two interchanges, Cumberland Avenue on the west and Canfield Avenue on the east. This avoids a major portion of the congestion at the O'Hare entry and exit interchanges while still keeping the building within five minutes of O'Hare.

Miglin stated that negotiations are now well along with three nationally prominent companies. Two of these are discussing the facility for use as corporate headquarters and the third for a major regional office. The intent is to lease the top three floors to a single tenant who will occupy the "sky-dome" top floor which will contain executive offices on the periphery surrounding the central garden atrium. Completion of the building is scheduled for late autumn.

Permanent financing was placed through Baird & Warner, Inc. Robert S. Julian, Mortgage vice president of Baird & Warner, handled the financing arrangements.

TIPS TO HOME BUYERS AND HOME SELLERS FROM MAP MULTIPLE LISTING REAL ESTATE SERVICE

"WHY SHOULDN'T I SELL MY HOUSE MYSELF?"

This is a question very often brought up by people who are contemplating selling their home. In the interest of public information, MAP Multiple Listing Real Estate Service helps answer the question with the following information:

Thru the years, a Real Estate Broker has acquired the contacts, the legal experience, and a knowledge of the market that the private citizen has never taken the time to learn.

If you sell your home without the services of a Real Estate Broker, you may find you've entered a situation that demands constant, time-consuming attention. And if you are not acquainted with the seemingly infinite details of a property transaction, you may be overwhelmed by the maze of responsibilities.

Are you able to find the market value of your house? Many owners don't know what a fair price might be. Frequently the owner asks too high a price and has difficulty finding a buyer. Worse yet, he may be asking a price that is considerably below the value, in which case he would be losing money he might have gained.

A Real Estate Broker is in contact with the market in your neighborhood. He would be able to make an accurate estimate of the value of your house in the market. His experience would help assure you of a fair sales price in a reasonable period of time.

Do-It-Yourself show scheduled for fall

The 1973 Do-It-Yourself Show, a modern revival of nationwide shows which attracted millions of visitors in the early 1950s, scheduled for Chicago's International Amphitheater, Oct. 30 - Nov. 4, is rapidly shaping up as a showcase for hobbies, arts and crafts. Its predecessor Shows were primarily home-improvement oriented.

The Do-It-Yourself Show will combine six exhibitions in one by directing special attention to displays and demonstrations, arts and crafts, home improvement, lawn and garden care, hobbies and leisure living, remodeling, and household originality.

A total of 25 Do-It-Yourself activities will be highlighted during this six-day event. According to show manager Ronald P. Ranke, president of American Exposition Corp., "our timing is excellent for the revival of the Do-It-Yourself movement. Never has there been better opportunity for everyone to save money while pursuing their favorite pastime. In this age of spiraling costs, the average person, especially homeowners are faced with Do-It-Yourself, or do-without."

Tired of renting? Why not convert to a condo?

Apartment dwellers by the thousands are being given the opportunity to become homeowners — without having to move.

"An increasing number of these tenants whose apartments are being converted are buying," observes Durand A. Holladay, managing trustee of Continental Mortgage Investors, Boston, the nation's largest independently sponsored real estate investment trust in mortgage lending.

CMI, whose shares are traded on the New York and other leading stock exchanges, has made nearly $2 billion in mortgage loans since 1962.

"The conversion-to-condos (condominiums) trend is sweeping the country," Holladay says. "Present tenants, in a number of cases, are being given the first option to buy."

"Of course, notice of an impending conversion may well come as a shock, especially for the long-time residents of these apartments. The important point is that a renter should give serious consideration to buying if the opportunity arises."

A CONDOMINIUM buyer, he points out, purchases his individual unit and a portion of the common grounds or other facilities.

"As with any home, the owner of a condominium is responsible for maintaining the interior of his unit. Maintenance of the exterior and of the grounds is generally provided by a management association, with each owner paying a set monthly fee."

"Financing a condominium is no more complicated today than purchasing any other type of home. Mortgage loans requiring as little as five per cent down payment are readily available," Holladay says.

He cites several factors the potential condo buyer should consider:

- The total price.
 - The amount of monthly mortgage and maintenance payments.
 - What the purchase includes, beyond the actual unit.
 - Procedures required if the owner decided to sell at a later date.
- "A potential buyer should also keep in mind that all interest on a mortgage loan, as well as real estate taxes, are tax deductible — an advantage the renter does not enjoy."

Three brokers reach $1 million

Recently honored at the general sales meeting for 36 Arlington Realty sales associates were Lorraine Larsen, Ed Joyce and Evelyn Hines, the first three to qualify for the 1973 Million Dollar Club.

All three passed the $1 million figure in residential sales in less than five months. All have qualified for life membership in the Million Dollar Club. For Mrs. Hines it represents the eighth consecutive year, for Mrs. Larsen the seventh year in a row and for Joyce the third in a row.

Herb Carl, who conducted the sales seminar for the firm announced, "one million dollars in real estate sales is the goal for most salesmen in a year. We are fortunate to have three people reach this figure before the end of May, and by the end of the year all of them should be near the $2 million figure, a remarkable achievement."

Mrs. Hines and Joyce are associated with Arlington Realty's North Arlington Heights office. Mrs. Larsen has been with the firm's South office for nine years.

Realtors change policy on land-use plans

The National Association of Realtors has changed its policy on land use. While continuing to support local control, the Realtors' board of directors has recognized the right of states to develop land-use plans in areas of heavy public facility concentration and overriding environmental concern.

In essence, the action assures general backing by Realtors of present legislation pending in Congress which is supported by Sen. Henry Jackson D-Wash., and the Nixon Administration.

PRESIDENT J. D. SAWYER announced recently that action by the board "recognizes a growing need for an overall land use policy to promote more effective land use planning by state and local governments." Action by the Realtors in amending their statement of policy identifies fundamental areas of agreement with Congress and the Administration in developing pending land use policy, Sawyer said, while at the same time continuing to disagree with any plan by government to usurp local controls in matters of strictly local concern.

The Board acted, in part, to indicate support for policies to avoid for the future the present heavy increase in no-growth moratoriums.

SEWER AND no-growth moratoriums, and extensive delays and litigation causing cancellations of significant residential, commercial and industrial developments because of unsettled environmental questions, have created uncertainty and even chaos in many areas of the country, the Realtors' president said.

The new policy states:

"We recognize and support the immediate need for a land use policy which would address itself to the planning of land resource use by state and local government in areas of critical environmental concern and in areas impacted by key public facilities, with due consideration to individual property rights and to the board guidelines established in the national interest.

"We also believe in the continued fundamental right of local government to determine the use of land on all other matters within its boundaries.

"We oppose the use of federal sanctions and the power of federal money to coerce the state and local governments in their development of land use plans.

"We condemn the confiscatory practice of land use moratoriums by any level of government.

Previously, the policy of the association, as adopted in 1972, held that:

"WE OPPOSE THE use of the power of federal money to influence or coerce the states to develop statewide land use policies which would limit the power of local governments to zone the use of land within their jurisdictions.

"We reject as wholly unwarranted and unnecessary federal and state government limitation of local zoning power in determining the residential, commercial, and industrial development of the land."

Four separate authorities on land use addressed Realtors attending the meetings. Rep. Morris K. Udall, D-Ariz., chairman of the Subcommittee on the Environment, House Interior Committee; John Larson, the leading staff expert at the White House on natural resources and land use; John Kyl, assistant secretary of Interior for Legislation; and Lance Marston, director of regional planning, Interior Department, appeared to explain the views of Congress and the Administration.

The speakers emphasized that federal control of land use planning was not the objective of proposed legislation but that states must be provided a helping hand through federal grants to provide coordination between local governments and improve land use planning procedures to promote logical patterns of economic development.

Single-family dwellings still best sellers

Every age group has its "druthers" — music, clothes, hobbies and especially homes.

For middle-aged buyers between 35 and 50, the single-family detached home is still the top choice," observes Jackson W. Goss, president and chief executive officer of Investors Mortgage Insurance Co., Boston.

Investors Mortgage Insurance Co. works with lenders, such as savings and loan associations, mutual savings banks and commercial banks, by insuring the top 20-25 per cent of high-ratio conventional mortgage loans.

"Approximately 55 per cent of the record 2.38 million housing starts last year were single-family dwellings," Goss notes. "Further, the vast majority of these homes were purchased by families in the 35-50 age bracket."

"THE ATTRACTION OF the suburbs with larger homes, more expansive lawns and room for a growing family — is extremely strong for this age group."

A family's income is generally at its highest point during these years also — so, consequently, they can afford to buy larger, more expensive homes, Goss adds.

"Of course, the number of youngsters in a family pretty much determines how much room is needed. Children, as well as adults, need space for entertaining friends — a welcome feature offered by larger detached homes," he points out.

THE AVERAGE DETACHED home shopping list includes:

- Minimum of three to four bedrooms.
- At least two baths and preferably 2½.
- A family or recreation room.
- A location convenient to schools, churches and shopping facilities.
- Patios.

- Ample closet and other storage space.

One ingredient has been added in the form of flexible financing programs "to make it easier to become a real homeowner."

"Most buyers are having no trouble at all obtaining 90 and 95 per cent mortgage loans. The low cash down payment requirements leave them with more money for appliances, furnishings and other items for their new home."

"The single-family home is a staple item on the housing scene. And as long as there are middle-aged families in the marketplace, detached homes will continue to dominate the housing market," Goss concludes.

Atrium kitchens offer extras

Space for informal meals, luminous ceilings and a wealth of built-in storage are features of kitchens in the condominium apartments at Atrium/Elmhurst.

So are solid wood kitchen cabinets, double stainless steel sinks, one-piece suede finish Formica counter tops, Armstrong Solarian continuous flooring that never needs waxing and sliding glass door access to a private balcony that also serves dining and living rooms.

Convenience-oriented kitchens are designed to complement a carefree lifestyle in Atrium townhomes and condominiums, according to William H. Crane, vice president-marketing of The Simon/R-G Group, the planned community's developer. First townhomes were opened last summer in the $22 million development, north of Roosevelt Road midway between York Road and Ill. Rte. 83, in west-suburban Elmhurst.

Kitchen areas of Atrium's one-, two- and three-bedroom luxury condominium apartments are identical in design, Crane said. The three models offer 1,200-, 1,500- and 1,800-square feet of living space, respectively.

"Included appliances also are the same for all three apartment models: Deluxe Westinghouse 21-cubic-foot side-by-side refrigerator-freezer, double oven continuous cleaning range, three-speed dishwasher and disposer," Crane said. "Automatic washer and dryer, in a separate utility room, also will be included in the purchase of an Atrium condominium."

LIKE LIVING and dining rooms and bedrooms, kitchen/eating areas are located on apartments' outside walls, to provide a maximum of natural light, as well as views into Atrium's heavily landscaped grounds. Utility rooms, bathrooms and storage areas line the inner, building corridor walls. Kitchens open both to adjoining dining rooms and to apartments' central halls, thus providing a convenient, circular traffic pattern, Crane pointed out.

"Convenience is the keynote of kitchen built-ins, too," Crane said. "In addition to a conventional array of kitchen cabinetetry, there is a separate 24-inch by 24-inch pantry equipped with four revolving shelves, for storage of staple goods. Above it, a cabinet is partitioned for on-end storage of trays.

"And, in the eating area a wall-length, built-in serving buffet provides ample storage for china, glassware and other table needs."

Prices for Atrium's luxury condominiums range from $39,950 for one-bedroom apartments, $49,950 for two-bedroom and $59,950 for three-bedroom models. Furnished models are open from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m., weekdays and Sundays, and from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. on Saturdays.

Sparrow Point holds gala grand opening

Go West, if you would participate in a gala grand opening of Building Number 8 at Sparrow Point. Crowds are anticipated, and the furnished models are ready and waiting.

There are two unusual things about this, as a rental community, aside from its frank provisions for both adult and family living space. First, the developer was a serious ecology buff and deliberately planned the entire community accordingly. There's special irregular arrangement of buildings on rolling land, for maximum space and privacy, he planted a big variety of trees, and he insured overall spacious suburban living with lots of city conveniences. Second, an interesting mix of one and two-apartments and three-bedroom townhomes encompasses a full range of rental dwelling requirements, from singles to sizeable families. This promotes a harmony of population make-up between Sparrow Point and Naperville — a sort of small-town within a small-town.

The buildings, managed by McKay &

Poague, are well-constructed and spacious and none are more than three stories tall, preserving a fine residential feel. Yet rentals are nominal, starting at $200 a month for one and two-bedroom apartments, and $330 a month for three-bedroom townhomes.

Among the luxury features of Sparrow Point residential units are Hotpoint appliances, dishwasher, disposal, double-oven range, two-door refrigerator, tile baths, air conditioning and private balcony or patio.

Residents share their own private swimming pool, playground, five-acre park and putting green, plus all the advantages of the fine Naperville community nearby. These include excellent schools, shopping centers, established community services, and close proximity to tollways and fast commuter trains.

The Sparrow Point luxury residential complex may be reached by taking the East-West Tollway to the Naperville turn-off, going west on Ogden to Mill Road, then turning right.

Federal agency's housing aid for flood victims told

The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) reported recently that they have provided temporary housing for 474 families and individuals made homeless by the flood that ravaged 49 counties in the state of Illinois. This is out of a total of 944 applications, of which 654 have been declared eligible and 122 ineligible. There have 147 families and/or individuals who have withdrawn their applications and the Department of Housing and Urban Development has 21 applications in process.

This report was issued by Samuel A. Boazman, Sr., director of operations, from his office at HUD's Illinois Disaster Field Office Headquarters, located in Springfield, where he is directing emergency relief operations. In disclosing these figures, Mr. Boazman stated that, "The figures we have now could very well increase due to the continued flooding in some of the counties in the state."

Boazman explained that, "Many of the families which withdrew their applications found that their homes were not as badly damaged as they first thought when filing for temporary housing."

IN ORDER TO BE eligible for temporary housing, a family's home must have been made uninhabitable by the flood.

"In some areas in the Southern portions of Illinois, we are utilizing mobile homes in which to house displaced families because of a lack of adequate housing resources. Five of the 474 families we have rehoused are occupying mobile homes," quoted Boazman.

The State of Illinois, Department of Local Government Affairs, is working very closely with the HUD efforts.

The mobile homes, which were purchased with money from the President's Disaster Fund, have been dispatched from holding points in Wilkes-Barre, Pennsylvania, and Elmira, New York.

BAIRD & WARNER, INC., represented by Robert S. Julian, mortgage vice president, real estate finance division, has arranged a loan of $660,000 at 8-5/8 per cent interest for 25 years on a multi-tenant industrial incubator building in Rolling Meadows. Older home buyers like contemporary dwellings Home builders are finding that an increasing number of Americans over age 50 share many of the same ideas about housing as their younger, under-30 counterparts.

"Contemporary dwellings in planned communities are in growing demand by older home buyers, many of whom are thinking ahead to retirement," observes Jackson W. Goss, president and chief executive officer of Investors Mortgage Insurance Co., Boston.

Investors Mortgage Insurance Co. works with lenders, such as savings and loan associations, mutual savings banks and commercial banks, by insuring the top 20-25 per cent of high-ratio conventional mortgage loans.

"IN THE PAST, older home buyers, in the main, have tended to favor single-family homes of traditional or colonial design — dwellings with ample lawn and landscaping. Contemporary styles were for young home buyers.

"In recent months, however, a new trend has appeared within the older crowd. Builders report a strong demand from this group for more decorative, versatile and distinctive dwellings — particularly for cluster homes," Goss notes.

He adds that they do not just look for new styling — they also seek planned communities with facilities and activities geared to their age group.

"These are mature, active adults who plan to stay active — they do not intend to simply sit and rock when they retire. For starters, they want golf courses, swimming pools, exercise rooms and community centers — the same facilities now being sought by young families and individuals.

"The acceptance of — and demand for — the total community concept and maintenance-free life styles are rising extremely fast among older Americans who truly think young," Goss observes.

COMMUNITIES THAT feature contemporary homes built with textured exterior materials blending with the natural surroundings are highly favored by home buyers in older age groups.

"A very evident parallel trend is the increasing number of single men and women in the over-50 age bracket who are buying contemporary homes. A builder in the northeast reports that one of his most popular sellers features two master bedrooms. This design is especially suited for two bachelors or bachelorettes who want to share the purchase of a home — and still have their own rooms and facilities," Goss states.

"Why this sudden wave of youthful thinking among older Americans? Well, that old saying — 'You're only as old as you feel' — may have more truth to it than most of us care to admit. The senior generation has the right idea — think young, be young," Goss concludes.

Rodgers tops million in sales

Eileen Rodgers, sales associate with Annen & Busse Realtors in their Arlington Heights location, reached a Million Dollars in residential sales during the third week in May.

Mrs. Rodgers, the top sales associate for the entire Annen & Busse firm in 1972 with over $2,000,000 in sales production, was cited as the leading salesperson for 1973 at the company's combined sales meeting held this week. She also leads the firm in Exclusive Listings taken this year.

She has been Top Salesman of the Year in the Arlington Heights office for the previous two years. She will now become a Lifetime Member of the Illinois Association of Real Estate Board's Million Dollar Club and a Lifetime Member of the MAP Multiple Listing Service's Million Dollar Club.

Eileen is the wife of Pete Rodgers, office sales manager of Annen & Busse's Schaumburg office, and the mother of five daughters. She has been serving in the real estate field since 1968, as well as being an active participant in her local community. She, as well as all of the Annen & Busse associates, works through the MAP Multiple Listing Service, as well as the Homes for Living Network, a National Multi-List Service, designed to serve the needs of clients moving from city to city anywhere in the nation.

TV adds to air conditioner load

Do you know that for every hour your color television set is on, your air conditioner must work five minutes more? When you clean the house with the vacuum cleaner for a half hour, you are also adding heat.

One of the lesser known facts about electric appliances, notes the National Better Heating-Cooling Council, is that they add heat indoors whether or not it is needed. In the winter, this extra heat serves as a benefit because it reduces the amount required by the heating system. On the other hand, in the summer time, the heat generated by the use of electric appliances adds to the summer heat and causes discomfort.

If your home is equipped with an air conditioner, the unit must work longer to remove this extra heat. An added paradox, the council reports, is that air conditioners create heat even while they are removing it.

To be as comfortable as possible, turn off all unnecessary lights and TV sets when no one is watching. Also, unless your home is electrically heated, advises the Council, don't rely on electric appliances for heat in the winter. In most areas, the cost of electricity is higher than the fuel used by the heating system.

The 'human touch'

Bill Crane knows key to condo manage

One of the newest townhouse buyers in Atrium/Elmhurst is going to make absolutely sure the developer remains responsive to him and his neighbors after all construction is complete: he's William Crane, who just happens to be vice president - marketing for the Simon/R-G Group, Atrium's developer.

Crane's unique role as an executive for the developer and a conscientious resident of his firm's townhouse/condominium community provides the foundation for his own philosophy of condominium management. Because he sees management from both the developer's and the residents' points of view, his theories touch all bases.

Most importantly, Crane fiercely believes in the concept of condominium living, both as a developer and as a resident. As William Crane, the developer, he cites the growing popularity of condominiums, along with efficient land-use and profit-potential. As Bill Crane, the resident, he recognizes having bought more housing for his purchase dollar. And he states with a grin, "It is a pleasure beyond all telling to bask in the sun on some warm, lazy summer day and watch somebody else cut my lawn."

IN HIS DUAL ROLE, Crane has weighed the problems and responsibilities of both sides, and has come to the basic premise of his philosophy of condominium management: no condominium association should attempt to manage itself when alternatives are available.

"If the developer of a particular condominium project has a management division," said Crane, "the residents should take advantage of the available professionalism. Management of a development is, after all, a very large job that requires full-time attention."

Because the homeowner association does not have the "total picture" of a development from its inception to its completion, Crane said it often is in trouble from the moment its members decide on self-management.

"The developer's management division has three things going for it that the homeowner association does not," he said. "The developer is completely familiar with costs, has direct experience with the potential for problems in the development and, most essentially, the developer knows exactly why the project was undertaken to begin with."

AN IMPORTANT problem that arises in self-management, Crane adds, is often initially overlooked by members of the homeowners' association: neighbor relations.

"How is a person going to stay friendly with his next-door neighbor when he must, for example, tell him that he can't put up the fence he just bought? A professional manager, on the other hand, is a 'third party' who can effectively enforce the rules which have been spelled out by the homeowners' association."

One of the growing problem areas in condominium living today — the monthly assessment — can take on gargantuan proportions because of inefficient or amateurish management, Crane continued. The assessment, which is used to pay for the maintenance of commonly-owned property in the development, often is driven down to an unrealistically low figure by a self-managed condominium association.

"The resulting problem is well-known," Crane explains. "The development is left with no cash reserve for unforeseen major expenditures or even equipment replacement that should be expected. When that happens, a problem that should have needed only fleeting attention becomes a monster that can be put to rest only with a whopping special assessment."

ON THIS COUNT, however, Crane makes it clear that the developer also has a share in preventing such an occurrence.

"Even if it means potentially upsetting the buyer in the beginning by establishing the proper assessment figure, in four or five years the owner will appreciate the fact that his assessment is both stable and protective of his interests. The developer has a very real moral obligation to protect the homeowner."

Crane also believes the "moral obligation" to the condominium owners has an advantage for the developer. A sidelight of a developer-managed condominium is lasting interaction between the residents and the project's builder, Crane points out.

"When that occurs," Crane said, "the developer's reputation is strengthened and he gains invaluable experience that can be applied to his next project."

CRANE CITES the example of another condominium with which his firm was in-involved as developer, The Portals at Grant Place, a court home development in Chicago.

"A continuing relationship was established between the executives of the homeowners' association and the executives of my firm," Crane explained. "That relationship did not end simply because the condominium was completed and all units sold. In fact, we communicate with the association several times a week to exchange ideas and advice. The obvious result is that both our residential interests — their Portals and our next development — will be run much more smoothly."

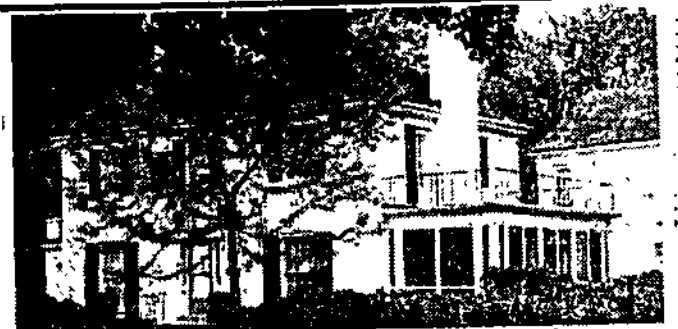

"The key to condominium management is 'human relationship,'" Crane summarized. "When the developer and the residents get together for constructive purposes on this basis, the results can only be positive."

Baldwin Court condos: unique style, low price

"Escape to Baldwin Court and flee from the high cost of apartment living" is the appeal by Wm. L. Kunkel & Co., Realtors, selling agent for the 132 two-bedroom condominiums now available in Palatine.

Built by Oliva-Lee Construction Co., Baldwin Court features 12 buildings with each containing 11 two-bedroom condominiums that range in price from $21,900 to $23,500.

The private, fully landscaped courtyard setting of Baldwin Court offers many benefits including a swimming pool. Combined are all the prestige, privacy and equity profit of home ownership with the carefree maintenance services and facilities of high rental apartments. Everything is done to maximize leisure time. Each condominium owner contributes a predetermined sum to pay for all building maintenance, gardening, snow removal, cleaning and upkeep.

IN ADDITION, owners automatically become members of the air conditioned clubhouse, which features a pool table, shuffleboard, game and conference rooms, tiny lot playground and a huge lounge with double fireplace. Among additional advantages of owning a Baldwin Court condominium is that real estate property taxes and interest on mortgage are tax deductible. Also, continuing rising real estate prices assure that the value of the property will appreciate over the years, providing a profitable investment.

ALL THAT'S required is a 5 per cent downpayment to escape from high rents and crowded apartment living to one of the two-bedroom air conditioned units of Baldwin Court. A private balcony or patio is included with each unit. Choice of carpeting is provided for the living room, bedrooms and hall. Each bath is appointed with ceramic tile, built-in vanities, Moen faucets and gold or avocado Koehler fixtures.

The gold, color-coordinated kitchen comes equipped with a 15 cubic foot frost-free, double door refrigerator; deluxe wood cabinets; Crown continuous cleaning gas oven/range; separate range hood; and formica countertops. Individually controlled gas hot water heating also is provided as well as private storage lockers, spacious laundry facilities in each building and intercom controlled front entrance security system.

BALDWIN COURT is located in a new community that's surrounded by the communities of Palatine, Long Grove, Arlington Park and nearby Inverness and Barrington. It is convenient to schools, churches, shopping, hospitals, golf courses, theaters, trains and O'Hare International Airport.

The Northpoint Shopping Center is five minutes from Baldwin Court. Randhurst is 10 minutes away and Woodfield Mall only 15 minutes. It is just 40 minutes to the Loop via the Northwest Tollway or Chicago & Northwest air conditioned trains.

To reach Baldwin Court, take Rand Road (Rte. 12) to Baldwin Road, which is a half mile northwest of Rte. 53 and a half mile south of Dundee Rd. (Rte. 68).

WORK EXPERIENCE DINNER of the Mental Health Association was recently hosted on behalf of the Chicago Jaycees by Joe Lunn of Wheeling. Area employers were recognized at the Chicago dinner for their willingness to interview and hire former mental patients who have gained office skills through the Work Experience Training Program. The Employer of the Year award was presented to the Keystone Corp. TOP CORPORATIONS in the U. S. are going into the real estate field by initiating programs of real estate investment and development. This was indicated in a recent survey sponsored by the Society of Real Estate Appraisers and the Real Estate Research Institute of California State University. The survey revealed that 51 per cent of the nation's top corporations are now committed to real estate programs. These programs are administered through in-house departments by 44 per cent of the participating companies. A previous survey, taken for the society in 1970, indicated that only 30 per cent of these same corporations had created separate real estate departments at that time.

Information for both studies was drawn from questionnaires sent to the top executives of 500 of the 1,000 top corporations listed in Fortune Magazine (June, 1970). In 1970, 24.6 per cent of the corporations surveyed returned questionnaires; for the 1972-73 survey, the return was 22.2 per cent. Some 14 per cent of the 1972-73 respondents said they now have a complete real estate division within the corporation structure, and 42 per cent have acquired separate (real estate) operating companies. Some of the corporations admitted disappointment with their realty development and investment programs (23 per cent), but most said they would not abandon their programs. The most often cited reason for this disappointment was the incompatibility between the tightly structured corporate management framework and the more loosely structured, faster moving real estate management. All respondents complained of a lack of qualified managers who could successfully merge the corporate and realty sectors into a cohesive unit.

Here's how to estimate exterior painting chore

Determining the quantity of paint you'll need for an exterior paint job, is in many ways, as simple as following the formula for determining the area of a rectangle: "Area equals length times width." In this case substitute the height of the wall for the width in the formula.

To determine the area of each wall, measure the height from the foundation to eaves, then multiply the height by the length of each wall. This yields the area in square feet for each wall. Add the products of each wall together for the total number of square feet to be covered.

Gables are the triangular end walls of a building formed by the sloping roof line and eaves line. For gable ends, multiply the length of the gable by one-half its height, measured from the eaves line to the very top. Double the figure to get the area for two gabled ends, triple for three, etc., and add this figure to the wall area.

Divide this total by the number of square feet a gallon of paint will cover (check the paint can label) to find the number of gallons you need. Do not deduct for windows unless the total number of square feet exceeds 100.

An eave is the under border of a roof that overhangs the wall. The amount of paint needed for eaves depends on their construction. For plain eaves that are to be painted the same color as the walls, measure the area of the eaves (area equals length times width) and multiply the figure by one and one-half. If the eaves are to be painted a different color than the walls, multiply by two. If there are rafters running through the eaves, measure the area and multiply the three. (This same rule applies for eaves over brick or masonry walls.)

To calculate how much paint you'll need for gutters and downspouts, measure the frontal width times the height, multiply by two, and divide by the estimated paint coverage listed on the can.

The surface condition of the house may cause the number of gallons of paint you need to vary. Because of their very nature, rough or porous surface will require about 20 per cent more paint than your estimate yielded. Add 33 per cent more paint for corrugated metal surfaces, and 100 per cent more paint for the first coat on concrete block.

Looking back at Western Open week

"Is that Arnie's golf cart?"

"Yeah."

"Where's he going in it?"

With that question, the Western Open official — proudly displaying his "Star-shall" arm band — gave the once over. He noticed the "Press" arm band and answered, "Directly to the press conference."

This discussion was in a whisper. Strictly "Mission Impossible" all the way.

That's the way it is when you're after the autograph of a superstar like Arnold Palmer or Lee Trevino.

Thousands were gathering around the final hole Friday, many having followed Palmer's threesome several miles around Midlothian Country Club.

Some had never seen Arnie in person. Still, five hours of staring at this all-time great had made a lasting impression. However, they sought some tangible evidence that proved they had been there — Palmer's signature.

And so, the normally open gate near the official scorer's tent was mobbed. Ballpoint pen tips were bared. . . . Special books were opened to a blank page. . . . Eager fans jockeyed for position.

They were rookies. Few if any would have a chance to get the coveted name.

We left the crush and headed for the press area. In a matter of minutes, Palmer emerged from a side entry. However, we were prepared.

The "we" was mainly my wife, Linda. A veteran at getting autographs, she moved in on Arnie before he had the chance to yell, "Fore!" and got his John Henry on a picture.

Earlier in the day she cut off a nearly jogging Lee Trevino just as he reached the men's locker room. Again, another 8 by 10 glossy was made more meaningful by his fancy writing.

Thus, we narrowly succeeded in completing our prizes for the Herald's "Name the Pros" contest. (See details elsewhere in this sports section.)

You might think that being part of the press corps would make it easy to get such autographs. It's not. You've got a slight advantage, but timing is important.

Neither Palmer nor Trevino spend much time in the locker room. They seem to appear mysteriously on the course and are whisked away when the round is over. In between, they're either practicing or moving as swiftly as possible through the always present masses.

After watching the hassles they must put up with, you sometimes have to feel happy you're not as popular or as wealthy.

Most of the players passed through the throngs with just a nod of recognition. A few had the pleasure of seeing an outstretched pen. And how many times afterwards did they overhear the words, "So that's who he is." or "Never heard of him."

Five Herald area caddies were called into service from Hillcrest Country Club for this 70th annual classic. They were Ken Mattini (Dave Stockton), Paul Groot (Bruce Devlin), Dave Poole (Dave Elchberger), Ken Slepicka (Bob Dickson) and Dave Manion (Jim Simons).

All their men survived the cut with Devlin earning the most money with his 10th place finish ($4,025.).

For Groot, a senior at Wheeling High School, this was a first.

"I was," he said in admitting he was a little scared. "I didn't know I would get this guy. I didn't expect to get somebody this big (ranked 59th among the leading money winners with nearly $30,000 in tour winnings so far) my first time there."

After caddying for about five years, this was the high point in his bag-toting career.

"When you walk out with a guy like that in front of the crowd you really feel like somebody," said Paul. "I really enjoyed it."

Ken Mattini, a graduate of St. Viator and a student at DePaul University, can't exactly remember when he began carrying clubs.

He broke in with R. H. Sikes in the '72 Western, but he was still impressed by it all this second time around.

"It was just a super week," said Ken. He thoroughly enjoyed working with Stockton, the PGA champion in '70 and — like Devlin — better than a half-millionaire from four winnings.

Although Mattini wasn't happy with the "pretty poor" gallery (the largest group was about 30 on Sunday) that followed his man, he did get a chuckle recalling the incident to Dick Lotz, one of players in his threesome.

"Dick three-putted the fourth green. So he hit his bag with his putter and broke the putter," said Ken.

"When he broke it, he almost killed me 'cause the head flew off and just missed me. He used everything in his bag to putt with. On the 18th hole he made an eagle using a driver, three wood and a two iron to knock in a 12-footer. That was unreal."

Those first two days of the tournament were testing ones for Billy Ventresca, the area's only competing player.

Rolling Green Country Club's head professional fired a pair of 76's over the par 71 layout, failing to make the cut.

"I enjoyed it," said Billy. "I just am sorry I played so poorly."

After fashioning a very fine 69 at Rolling Green in the qualifying round last week, it looked like this might be his week to make the cut. But just concentrating on the tourney wasn't his luxury. He also had club duties to handle.

Still, he promised he'd "try every year" to get another chance at playing four days in this annual classic.

Billy had heard what other touring pros had to say about improving this great, old tournament. He also had some thoughts:

"I do think that by getting a permanent site like they're doing will be very, very good. It's (Butler National Golf Club in Oakbrook) a very difficult golf course. The big tournaments (U.S. Open, Masters and PGA) are played on great golf courses."

"The story I hear is that it's tough if not tougher than No. 3 at Medinah."

Maybe this will add to the glamour of this second oldest stop on the pro tour. Maybe big Jack and Little Gary will stop along with Arnie and Lee to have a look see next year.

Arlington's Hopkins throws 2-hitter

by MIKE KLEIN

Lloyd Meyer has said all along that right now he isn't concerned with anything but winning the American Legion Ninth District championship.

So he hasn't fretted much about Arlington Heights' six non-conference losses, not even two last weekend in the four-team Wheeling Tournament.

That's because Post 208 has been unbeatable in Ninth District competition. The string of successes ran to five straight on Tuesday as Jim Hopkins throw a two-hit, 5-0 shutout at Mount Prospect.

The win over Merv Fink's ball club left Mount Prospect 2-3 in the Ninth District. Arlington Heights is 9-6 overall. Post 208's win behind Hopkins trailed by one day an 11-5 non-conference decision over DeKalb.

Hopkins overpowered Mount Prospect with only sixth-inning singles by Randy Sherpin and Jim Anderson spoiling a no-hit bid at Recreation Park.

Hopkins, already leading 5-0, wasn't fazed by this and retired the next three men.

Hopkins fanned at least one man every inning except the first when Mount Prospect bowed in order nevertheless. He finished with nine strikeouts, two each in the third, sixth and seventh.

Arlington Post 208 hit Mount Prospect starter and loser Rick Haaning for two runs in the first plus another in the third. Reliever Jim Laing gave two fifth inning runs.

Harth got the home first started with a one base shot to left. George Vukovich reached on a fielder's choice and with Mark Leonhard batting, Harth stole third.

Leonhard fanned, but was picked up by Bruce Hanson's RBI single to left. Vukovich trotted home after Greg Hauptly bounced into a force and the double play throw went wide past first baseman Fink.

That was it for Post 208 until the third when Leonhard walked and moved to second on Hanson's perfect sacrifice bunt. Hauptly struck out before Marc Klemp's triple well past Laing, then

Laing, who took over for Haaning in the fourth, gave up two runs in the fifth. The rally began when Hanson singled to left, moved down on Hauptly's sacrifice and scored after Klemp's perfect bunt was thrown wide by third baseman Sherpin.

Klemp moved down to third on Rick Sidor's foul fly to deep right. He scored on Dar Townsend's single to left.

DeKALB EASY FODDER

Mike McGrath threw five innings of no-hit baseball before giving five runs and six hits the last two innings against a DeKalb which had too little too late.

The visitors folded, 11-5, under Arlington's 13-hit attack. Post 208 led, 9-0, before DeKalb ever found home plate. Harth's leadoff homer signalled a six-run fifth that put it away. Other hits that inning were by Leonhard, Hauptly, Sidor and Dan Cunningham.

Wheeling comeback salvages tie

There's an old baseball cliché that the game is never over until the last out, and Wheeling's American Legion baseball team proved it once again Tuesday.

Trailing 8-2 going into the bottom of the seventh inning at Hersey High School, Wheeling staged an incredible comeback climaxed by John Theriault's double to tie the game 8-8. And that's the way it ended, with darkness closing in, as neither side went home happy.

Wheeling felt it had the game won when Theriault tried to steal home, but he was called out on a close play to end it. The game will be replayed in its entirety as part of a doubleheader.

Ken Roggenbuck pitched the first two innings for Wheeling and, very unusually for the fireballer, was hit for five runs, four in the first inning on six consecutive hits before an out was made. George Pattee worked the next two frames, yielding two runs, and Gordie Nelson allowed one more over the last three innings.

Jerry Jones pitched six innings for Park Ridge but was knocked out in the seventh.

Wheeling was blanked until the fifth when it scored two unearned runs, then suddenly erupted in the seventh. A walk, error, hits by Terry Kukda and Keith Steelman, and three more consecutive walks by Jones brought an S.O.S. for reliever Bob Glagier with still no outs. He responded by striking out the next two batters before another walk, error and Theriault's dramatic double that tied it.

Fans salute Luzinski

Greg Luzinski

Today is Greg Luzinski Day at Wrigley Field!

Luzinski, a former Herald area athlete who now is playing for the Philadelphia Phillies, will be honored by a group of area residents prior to today's Cubs-Phillies game.

Luzinski will meet with an expected group of about 500, most of whom will be Little Leaguers, but who will be accompanied by about 100 adults and parents.

The group will arrive at Wrigley Field by chartered bus at 10 a.m. and take their seats in a roped-off area of the left field grandstand. Luzinski will meet with the group at about 11 a.m.

The day was organized by Jim Seveska of Rolling Meadows, who reports that Greg "has been very cooperative" in making plans for the day's tribute.

Woodfield names tennis pro

Twenty-six year old George Sell of Schaumburg has been named head professional at Woodfield Racquet Club, a 10-court indoor tennis facility under construction in the Schaumburg Industrial Park.

Currently head pro at International Village Tennis Club, Sell will assume his new duties at Woodfield when it opens in September.

Frank Randazzo, club president, said, "We are pleased to have the services of a pro we feel has all the attributes to make our instructional program the finest in the Midwest."

"George is a specialist at developing beginning and intermediate players but also has the repertoire of shots to teach the advanced player."

Sell has instructed tennis in Mount Prospect and is well known for his play in tournaments throughout the Illinois, Wisconsin, Indiana, Michigan and Ohio.

He maintains three jobs this summer: director of tennis for the Wood Dale Park District, head pro and tourney director for the Hanover Park Park District and instructor at The Trails in Roselle.

Sell hails from Detroit, Mich., where he was a district champion and competed on championship teams. Last season, he was a runner-up in the International Village Open. Sell was a member of the Class "A" team runner-ups in Chicago District Tennis Association play.

At Woodfield, Sell will develop programs for players of ranging experience with much emphasis on beginners.

He has worked as a recreation director in Detroit and was assistant tennis instructor at Grosse Pointe (Mich.) University School.

Sell was graduated from Highland Park (Mich.) Community College and the International Data Processing Institute in Detroit.

Woodfield Racquet Club membership may be obtained by calling 692-2842 or writing the club at Box 665, Hoffman Estates, Illinois, 60172.

duties in September when the club opens.

Winning pitcher Ralph Amelio and loser Bruce Terry evenly split 20 strikeouts in a well played Des Plaines Mid-Tech game that found Johnson beating Weber, 3-1.

Johnson scored a first inning run and two in the fifth to back Amelio's winning effort. Weber got its only run in the sixth.

Amelio walked just one batter. Terry passed three.

Mike Kelley got Johnson going when he led off the home first with a single against Terry. Two outs later, Steve Zuccarini lashed a run-scoring double.

In the fifth, Johnson's Rick Simek struck out but reached first on a passed ball. He moved up on Ken Ford's single before Kelley walked to load the bases.

Two outs later, Zuccarini walked, making it a 2-0 game. The third run scored on a wild pitch.

Weber missed a chance to really cash in against Amelio in the sixth. Jeff Schwarz walked, Steve Semler singled and Carl Metzger was hit by a pitch.

Then Terry bounced an infielder grounder, forcing Schwarz at the plate. Zuccarini, catching for Johnson, hit Terry with his throw to first, allowing Semler to score.

Metzger and Terry remained on the bases but couldn't get around.

Granacki wins

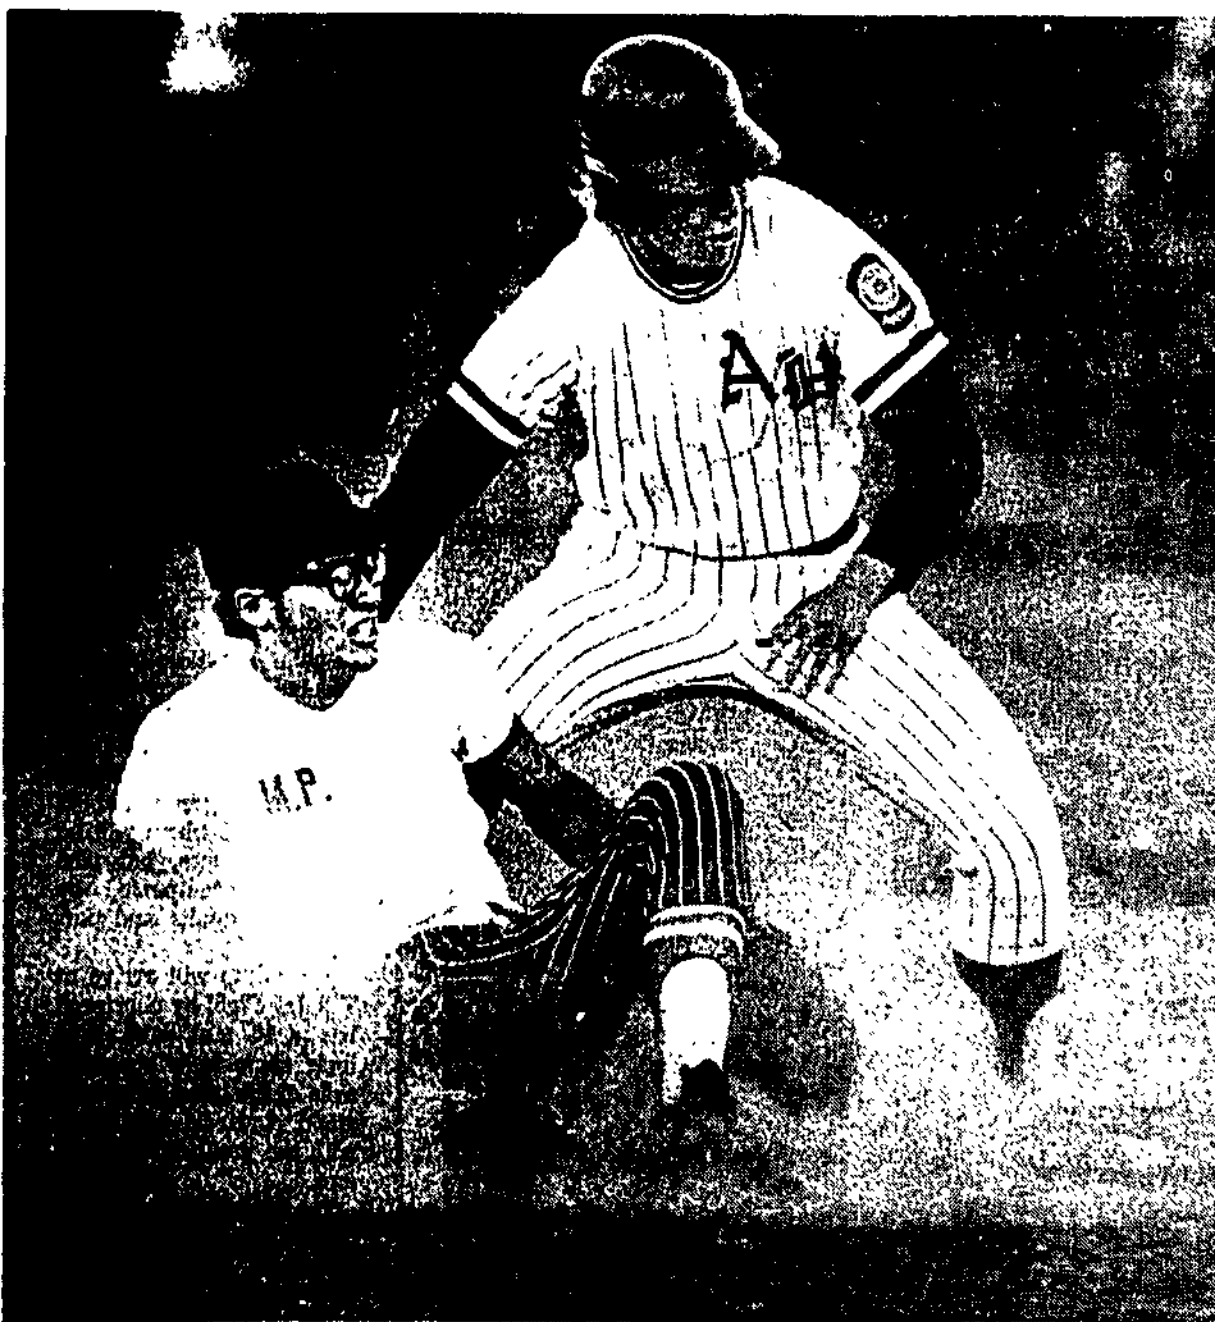

Last Thursday's edition of the Palatine Welcome Wagon Golf League featured "blind hole" as the day's special event, and Gerry Granacki was crowned the winner.

Elaine Whitney and Shirley Lehman tied for second place.

The previous week, a change of pace was provided when "mixed pairs" was held. In this event, a golfer from Flight A and one from Flight B are paired and alternate hitting the ball. Mim Shugars and Helen Smith teamed up for a 66, good enough for the low gross prize. Bill Lytle and Beth Dietz were second at 67.

At the other end of the spectrum, Sig Beckwith and Granacki "won" with high gross and lowest number of putts while Betty Christiansen and Whitney "won" with the high gross score and the most putts.

The week before, Dietz won the best poker hand with five of a kind for the B Flight. Barb Miller's four of a kind ruled Flight A.

DUSTY ROADS. While Mount Prospect's Loren Crites and Arlington Heights pinchrunner Mike Broderick survey the action at first base, Broderick was tossed out on a force play and upended Crites who was pivoting on the play. Arlington triumphed in a tense thriller, 1-0. (Photo by Mike Seeling)

Summer League box score: 4 wins, 1 tie, 2 losses

HERSEY ROLLS
Hersey took advantage of several Crystal Lake fielding lapses to post an 8-3 win on the Crystal Lake diamond.

Hersey never trailed. In the top of the first inning, the Crystal Lake catcher dropped a third strike that started a Huskie rally. A wild pitch, a walk and a successful double steal scored the first run, and Art Hoesterey's triple drove in the second.

Hersey talked once in the fourth as a result of Don Bianchi's base hit and stolen base and Roger Murbach's solid double.

The Huskies picked up three gift runs in the fifth as Gary Gustafson singled and then beat the throw to second on an attempted sacrifice, putting runners on first and second. John Caruso delivered an RBI single before the Crystal Lake catcher again dropped a third strike that enabled Paul Cortes to reach base. One run scored when Dave Mlichowicz was safe on an error and the last run of the frame was forced across when Hoesterey was hit by a pitch.

The Huskies rounded out their scoring with a pair in the sixth off Murbach's fielder's choice. Gustafson's run-scoring double and Jeff Forster's single.

Steve Spaccarelli and Gustafson split mound duties, the win going to Spaccarelli.

ELK GROVE ROMPS
Elk Grove exploded for four home runs in the first four innings and went on to rout Maine South 9-1.

David Millner paced the barrage with two homers, a solo shot to lead off the third and a three-run clout in the fourth. Millner's second blast came after Brian Solomon had singled and Jeff Rezzuto had walked.

The Grenadiers went to work as soon as they got the bats in their hands. Rezzuto singled in the first, Scott Scholten was hit by a pitched ball and then Dave Ray racked a home run over the left-field fence.

In the second inning, Mike Dill walked, was sacrificed to second and, two outs later, came home on Steve Sheridan's four-bagger.

Maine South tallied its only run on a two-out error in the sixth. Elk Grove starter Rick Eckardt looked sharp in spacing six hits, striking out four and issuing just two walks. The Grenadiers committed three errors but only the infield boot in the sixth played a part in any Maine South scoring.

VIKINGS NIP CARDS
Jim Recher topped Jim Letzel in a dual of three-hit pitching jobs as Fremd edged Arlington 2-1 for the Vikings' 11th victory in 12 tries this summer.

Recher struck out seven in allowing just one walk while Letzel fanned six and passed three.

Fremd jumped on top in the third when Ken Geheb singled, Jeff Hanisch beat out a bunt and an error scored the run.

Arlington tied it in the fourth when Kevin Dick walked, stole second, went to third on a groundout and scored on a single by Brian Stebbins.

The Vikings won it in the fifth when Hanisch singled, Randy Kraft and Mitch Gullet walked, Bill Bullard singled in the score and Kraft was thrown out at home on the same hit.

MUSTANGS STIFLE DUNDEE
Rolling Meadows played what head coach Al Otto called "a near-perfect" game as the Mustangs blitzed Dundee, 7-0, and moved to within one game of .500 at 5-4.

Contributing factors that prompted Otto's statement included a sparkling three-hitter authored by Dave Thorstensen, an explosive 13-hit assault and an errorless performance in the field.

Mendows put the contest away early as they tallied a single run in the first on singles by Dan Borland, Scott Green and Steve Breitbell, another in the second on Tom Baugh's base hit, a walk and Glen Zawacki's run-producing single and three in the third behind Green's single, Thorstensen's double, Breitbell's sacrifice fly, Dan Jordan's single and an error.

A two-out, two-run rally capped the scoring in the seventh and was highlighted by walks to Breitbell and Jordan, a doublesteal and Ray Petersen's single.

Thorstensen was superb on the mound, scattering three Dundee hits, walking no one and fanning four in a route-going performance.

10 INNING TIE
Darkness curtailed a Schaumburg-Fenton contest after 10 innings with the score knotted at 3-3.

The offenses on both sides were meager, with the Saxons collecting just four base hits over the 10 innings while Fenton had only five. Neither team mounted threats anytime except in their scoring innings.

Schaumburg grabbed a quick 3-0 lead by tallying three runs on just one hit in the first. Joe Hansen reached on a fielder's choice, advanced when Doug Olson was safe on an error and scored on Ray Fairbanks' RBI single. A walk to Rob Poplar loaded the bases. Ron Pasek's ground out scored the Saxons' second run and the third came in when Dan Ludwig reached on an error.

Fenton posted single runs in the first, third and fifth.

Brian Youngberg started for Schaumburg, going 6 1/3 innings. Fairbanks relieved Youngberg and went the rest of the way.

The game will be continued Monday, July 16, when the two clubs are slated to meet again. Then the regularly-scheduled game will be played.

FALCONS OUTSLUGGED, 11-8
A see-saw battle that saw each team stage big comebacks finally ended in an 11-8 Addison Trail victory over Forest View in a game that included 21 hits. Frank Darras pitched the distance for the Falcons.

Forest View appeared on its way to a rout when it scored five times in the first inning, but Addison came right back with four in the third. The score stood 5-4 until the sixth when the Blazers went ahead with two runs.

The Falcons bounced right back with three in the same inning for an 8-6 lead and was only three outs from victory. But again Addison Trail rose to the challenge with a dramatic five-run seventh and the victory.

Dave Fulton came up with the big clutch hit to put the Falcons ahead in the sixth and other hitting stars for Forest View were Jeff Meinsen with three hits including a double and Darras with two for four. Addison was led by Dan Newrock with two for three and Dan Swanson, who tripled in the tying and winning runs and had three RBI.

Addison upped its record to 9-4 while Forest View dropped to 4-6-1.

Chemplex league knotted at top

Team three took two more points than team two to force a deadlock after the seventh round of the Chemplex Twilight Golf League which plays at the Golden Acres Country Club in Schaumburg.

Jack Blanchard, Larry Dowd, Jim Collins and Ramesh Shroff comprise team three. Eric Jannasch, Holly Fairchild, Milt Kostner and Bob Allen are team two.

Those foursomes have been jockeying for the league lead throughout the season with teams one and five still in contention but eight points behind.

Jannasch continued his hot play, once again capturing low gross honors with a 40, just one stroke off his league-leading 39. Blanchard and Tom Krigos shared low net honors with 34 but Bob Allen's 28 is still the best recorded this year.

Leaders for the second five-week segment of the season are flight "A" Blanchard, flight "B" Dowd and Mitsu Shita, flight "C" Sven Solvik and flight "D" Shroff.

Name these players to win Arnie or Lee

Area golf enthusiasts had a rare treat last week — Arnold Palmer and Lee Trevino were in town.

Neither won the Midlothian Country Club hosted Western Open, but both commanded the largest galleries most of the time.

Meanwhile, most of the other touring pros moved through the milling crowds almost incognito. Few asked for their autographs; hundreds strained to get Arnie's and Lee's.

Now you can have those much sought-after signatures of these two greats by simply telling us who these other golfers are in the Herald Sports Department's "Name the Pros" contest.

Simply identify all or as many as you can of this magnificent seven and a framed 8 by 10 action shot of Arnie or Lee is yours.

There will be two winners — one for each picture. The one with the earliest postmark receives first choice.

In case of a tie, the post mark again will be used to break the deadlock.

In addition to the framed, auto-graphed photograph, the two winners will also be pictured in the Herald with their prizes.

The contest won't run very long, so get your guesses in soon. Just write the name of the golfer next to the number given by his picture. Send your postcard or letter to:

Monday likes what he sees

CHICAGO (UPI) — Like a few others on the team, Rick Monday thinks the Chicago Cubs are going to make it this time. And also like a few of his teammates, Monday believes the reason is Whitey Lockman, the manager now into his second season after replacing Leo Durocher.

"We've got just about the same players as we had last year," Monday said. "The difference this time is that we're all playing together. I can honestly say I've never seen 25 guys on any team get along so well together — on and off the field."

Monday didn't mention Durocher's name, but he noted that the new spirit began to develop after the Lip's departure last August and came on full bloom in spring training.

"We got a guy now who is a real human being. He doesn't ask for or demand respect. He gets it by example and by his fair-mindedness," Monday said.

Responding to a question, Monday said

Mother's nutrition influences child's IQ

(This column is presented by Forest Hospital in Des Plaines, a 135-bed psychiatric hospital known for its intensive programs in psychiatric treatment, research, education and community service.)

It may be possible for a mother to control her child's intelligence.

According to Dr. Robert Canero, professor of psychiatry at the University of Connecticut Medical School, a recent study in Israeli kibbutzim shows that through the control of a mother's nutrition, before and during pregnancy, an offspring's intelligence quotient could be raised significantly.

"Intelligence," explained Dr. Canero, "is the ability one has to learn certain kinds of things more rapidly than others learn those same kinds of things. It's the ability to perform certain kinds of intellectual tasks rapidly, efficiently and well."

"Intelligence is an abstract concept. It is not something real like a toe which is an anatomical structure. Therefore it is defined in different ways — according to culture. That's because the kinds of intellectual activities valued or helpful in one culture may not be valued in another."

The United States, which bases much of its culture on its advanced technology, the kinds of things that are important in measuring intelligence have to do with one's ability to abstract, categorize, think conceptually, anticipate the future, plan and problem solve with new solutions to novel situations.

"These aspects of intelligence," Dr. Canero said, "are measured through intelligence quotient tests. The IQ tests measure verbal ability and abstract reasoning ability. They are a good indicator in predicting a child's school performance."

ACCORDING TO Dr. Canero, the study made with Kibbutzim mothers proved their children's IQ scores can be significantly raised.

"In Israel there are two populations: the Caucasian or the European Israelis and the Oriental Israelis who are from a somewhat different gene pool primarily from North Africa and some Arab countries."

This Oriental group has been socially discriminated against and looked down on as inferior. They average in IQ tests (where technology and verbal abilities are also important) somewhere between 20 and 30 points lower than the European Israeli population.

"Various educational and social programs had been tried in order to bring up the group's IQ. But the programs had relatively little impact. It was then found that the Orientals who moved into the Kibbutz as well as their children, and the children who came into the Kibbutz when quite young, all had lower IQ's. It was among the women who came to the Kibbutz and then got pregnant and the offspring of those pregnancies that IQ's were much higher — in fact identical with the other children reared in the same environment.

"THE MOST LIKELY explanation," Dr. Canero continued, "is pre-natal nutrition. That is the state before her pregnancy as well as during pregnancy. There are other factors like very early learning experiences and early post-natal stimulation that certainly contribute to the intelligence level of the child, but certain data show that nutrition plays very heavily in intellectual development."

"For instance we know that in a multiple birth situation, where there are twins, the twins have a lower IQ than children in general. If there are triplets they have a lower IQ than children of single or double birth. Where there are twins, the one who is lighter had a poorer nutritional environment so he has the lower IQ of the twin pair."

"Much evidence," Dr. Canero added, "suggests that the state of inter-uterine nutrition is vitally important in the development of the central nervous system — the base from which IQ measures."

"We just don't know the answer to the very complicated question of intelligence but this data on nutrition is the only data I have seen so far that looks solid."

Social Security and You

Q. I understand a retired worker getting Social Security checks can now earn $2,100 in a year without losing any of his monthly benefits. Was any change made in the number of hours a retired, self-employed person can work in a month?

A. No. There was no change made in the definition of "substantial services" in self-employment. Generally, you are allowed to work up to 45 hours in a month without loss of any benefits for that month. However, if yours is a highly skilled profession, you could be considered to be working substantially with even fewer hours.

Q. I'll be 65 next May and I plan to retire then. I'll earn nearly $6,000 next year before I retire. After I retire, can I earn $2,100 for the rest of the year and still get all my Social Security payments?

A. No. Since you'll have already exceeded $2,100 in yearly earnings when you retire, you can only get benefits for months in which you neither earned $175 nor done substantial work in self-employment.

Q. I read that there is to be an increase in the medical insurance premium that is deducted from my monthly Social Security benefit. Isn't this increase covered under the recently announced 60 day price freeze?

A. Yes, the premium increase is affected by the price freeze. However, the Social Security administration found that it would be impossible to prevent the new rate from being deducted from your check, because action has already been taken to have the new rate taken out and the vast amount of people involved. You will, however, receive an adjustment of the additional premium deduction as soon as we are able to process the change in our records.

Q. After my husband died recently, I received a bill from his doctor. Since we both were signed up for medical insurance under Medicare, do I just send the bill in for payment as I have done in the past?

A. When a Medicare patient has died, the request for payment must be submitted with some additional information. Along with the usual form, you'll need a receipt showing that the medical expenses were paid and another form (SSA-1660) which explains your legal relationship to the deceased Medicare beneficiary. If you need help in submitting your request for payment, call any social security office.

Q. I signed up for both parts of Medicare over a year ago when I became 65. Now my doctor has told me I'll need to go to the hospital soon for an operation. Will you mail me a hospital insurance claim form so I'll have it when I go in the hospital?

A. You won't need a claim form. The hospital will take care of all the paper work for you. Just show your medicare card to the admission office when you check into the hospital.

Q. My doctor has told me I'll never be able to work again because of my bad heart. When I applied for monthly social security disability payments, they told me I won't be paid for the first five months. Will I get paid later on for these months?

A. No. There is no payment made for the first five full months of disability. This waiting period is a requirement in the social security law.

Q. My brother was only 25 when he died last month. He left a 21-year-old widow and two children, a 2-year-old and a baby 5 months old. Even though my brother was very young, couldn't he still have enough work under social security for his wife and children to get monthly checks?

A. Yes, if your brother had as little as 1½ years of work under social security, his wife and children could get monthly social security checks and a lump-sum payment to help with funeral expenses. Your sister-in-law should call, write or visit any social security office as soon as possible to apply for benefits.

The Doctor Says...by Dr. Lawrence Lamb

Neck artery aneurysm -it can be repaired

Dear Dr. Lamb — My doctor tells me I have an aneurysm of the right carotid artery. Since I just noticed this swelling in my neck I asked if it would disappear. He replied that it had probably been eight months in developing before it was noticeable. He tells me there is nothing that he knows of medically to correct it, except to replace it if it gets larger. Could it rupture and cause me to bleed to death? He wants me to have him look at it again in five or six months or if I start having any trouble. He said he didn't have many cases of this a year as usually the opposite problem occurred, that the artery in the neck became blocked with fatty material.

Because of my great concern, would you please tell me if there is any cure for this condition, such as strengthening of the walls of the artery to make it stay its normal size.

Dear Reader — Yes, you have a fairly uncommon condition. For the benefit of other readers, a carotid artery is one of the main arteries in the neck along the side of the windpipe. An aneurysm means that a sac-like dilation has extended off the artery. This kind of change occurs in an artery when it loses its normal elasticity and balloons out somewhat like a rubber balloon that's been overstretched, or the ballooned out area that can develop on an innertube.

The usual danger from an aneurysm is that it might enlarge too much and actually rupture. This is true regardless of where the aneurysm is located. If the aneurysmal sac is full of clotted blood, there is danger of clot formation and obstruction, but usually the real concern is the possibility of the artery involved.

Carotid arteries can be operated on, this is true whether they are obstructed, preventing blood flow to the brain, or if you have an aneurysm as you have described it.

SOMETIMES AN apparent aneurysm is really a kinking of the artery associated with the way it may be caught or directed around the muscles or other structures in the neck or just because the artery is excessively long and it's kinked on itself. If that should be the case, the excessive length can merely be snipped out and the ends of the arteries sewed back together. In any case, surgery can be done in these instances and it seems to me that what you really need is a consultation from a cardiovascular surgeon.

I note from the address on your letter that there should be a cardiovascular surgeon located within a reasonable distance of your home. The size and nature of the aneurysm you're describing can be outlined with special studies and X ray procedures. If your doctor has not already done so, ask him to arrange for a consultation with a cardiovascular surgeon.

It's possible that your condition can be corrected without too much difficulty. I must add that not all carotid surgery is simple and without complications, but in many instances there are special surgical procedures which can be done for the problem.

Stamp Notes...by Bernadine M. Rechner

IPSA issues new series to mark 5th anniversary

The second series of stamps, six adhesives in five denominations, has been released by the Independent Postal System of America. They commemorate events of national importance and mark the fifth anniversary of the founding of the independent mail system.

Two 4-cent stamps honor the late Presidents Harry S. Truman and Lyndon B. Johnson. The 5-cent issue marks the cessation of the Vietnam War while the 20-cent adhesive symbolizes free enterprise and marks the IPSA anniversary. The Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. is depicted on the 25-cent stamp and the 75-cent denomination is a replica, in miniature, of the IPSAGRAM logo.

Rey Carlberg II, a Chicagoan, designed the series, which was printed 50 stamps to a sheet.

INDIVIDUAL mint stamps, sheets and plate blocks of each denomination are available from Carole Barnes, director of Philately, Independent Postal System of America, 1635 Tonne Rd., Elk Grove Village, 60007. The set of mint stamps is $1.33 and a set of first-day covers, canceled March 31, 1973, is $3.43. A special album, for this series only, is $64.50 and is printed on enameled stock in a limited quantity (1,000). Please add a 50-cent service charge per order and if you request sheets of stamps and want them mailed flat, there is a $1 flat mail charge.

Mint stamps and sheets of stamps in the original series, released November 30, 1971, are also available. The set includes a 1-cent, 5-cent, 10-cent, 25-cent and a 50-cent stamp and sells for 91 cents.

THE U.S. POSTAL Service souvenir card honoring APEX '73, the International Airmail Exhibition now running in Manchester, England, depicts three rare stamps. In the center is the U.S. 24-cent airmail of 1918 showing the Curtis "Jenny" invert. The De Pinedo Newfoundland airmail of 1927 is at the left and the rare Honduras airmail surcharge stamp of 1925 is at the right.

The card will be available after July 7 from "APEX Souvenir Card, Philatelic Sales Unit, Washington, D.C., 20036." The cost is $1 for each card plus a 50-cent handling charge per order.

THE AUSTRALIAN Post Office has announced that about 5,000 private "Cook in the Antarctic" first-day covers franked at Casey Base, Australian Antarctic Territory, were inadvertently left behind when the annual relief ship sailed from that base. Delivery to the mainland was expected in March of this year but now the covers cannot be delivered until after the next relief ship arrives in Australia about February, 1974.

Collecting Coins...by Mort Reed

Round coin-ingot should steadily increase in value

Following the removal of silver from our circulating currency in the mid-'60s, public consumption of the precious metal became increasingly noticeable. Especially in the numismatic industry. With the unrestricted availability of silver, "private mints" cropped up all over the country. At one time over 30 different firms incorporated the term mint in their company name.

Today that number has decreased considerably but there are still a few without so much as a vault in which to store their products. Their minting facilities are limited to their letterheads.

Fortunately, some of the more reliable minting houses are among those doing the most for collectors and dealers in ingots and medals. The lunch-bucket operators are fast falling by the wayside and I doubt that there will be more than five "mints" in existence by the end of 1974.

The pressure is too great. Either they produce a good logical collectors item or they continue to produce junk and suffer the consequences. In a majority of cases most of the medals and ingots offered today are nothing more than junk.

ONE OF THE top five private mints in the country is the Leitcher Mint of Lancaster, Calif. Here the first "two-color" medal was created with a 24-karat gold image fused with a .999 pure silver medal. The Paul Revere Medal.

Their second two-color innovation came with the Minerva Thirty-five dollar coin in which the helmeted head of Minerva was of 24-karat pure gold in a solid silver medal.

Both pieces were widely accepted for their originality of thought and are very popular throughout the coin and medal collecting world.

The latest idea to emerge from the Leitcher Mint drawing board is the round coin-ingot, weighing one Troy ounce with reeded edge and a frosted eagle device superimposed on a mirror finish surface.

Up until now ingots have been more or less confined to a "bar" or "loaf" configuration with its seal and Troy ounce weight crudely stamped on the top surface.

ONE TO THREE ounce ingots in the bar shape have been cast and struck with pictorial surfaces depicting some well-known historical scene or the profile of a famous person but these pieces sell for much more than their intrinsic values and as an investment commodity they lack potential.

The Leitcher coin-ingot on the other hand, is intended for just that purpose. Investment. It makes an ideal personal gift that can only increase in value over the years.

Because of this unusual value increasing phenomenon, banks deem it a logical giveaway for new accounts and deposits, and employers find it the perfect "bonus" for job suggestions and employee performance.

While I am sure these ingots may be secured in lesser quantities, the information available at this time indicates 1,000 pieces would cost 75 cents apiece over the day's spot price of silver; 10,000 would run approximately 45 cents over the spot price of .999 fine silver on the day of purchase, and 50,000 would cost 27 cents over the spot price of silver.

Interested readers may write the Leitcher Mint, P.O. Box 107, Lancaster, Calif. 93534.

Win At Bridge

by Oswald and James Jacoby

Galahad the pure in spirit seldom got into the bridge games at the square table. He felt that card playing did not go well with the search for the Holy Grail.

At the same time, Galahad was too much of a gentleman to refuse to make up a game when he was needed and we find him sitting West in the "Siege Perilous."

The wily Mordred knew that Gawain's four-spade bid denied possession of an ace or king. They didn't use artificial two-club bids in the days of King Arthur but they did follow the precepts of the sage Merlin Culbertson.

Mordred should have passed at four spades, but he had little respect for Galahad's bridge game and decided on a spot of deception. Hence, his five-diamond call.

The deception boomeranged right back in Mordred's face.

Galahad thought a while. After all you should always consider the lead against a slam as carefully as possible. He was familiar with Mordred's reputation for trickery and deceit and came to the conclusion that the five-diamond call was intended to stop a diamond lead.

Then he played his king of diamonds

YOUR MONEY

One of the most important changes in the history of the savings and loan association came with the introduction of the "savings member" idea. In the earliest associations, members only contributed their savings, and the same members were the only loan borrowers. No one else was involved.

As savings and loan associations flourished, it became clear that more people needed loans than the savings of the limited membership could make possible. Since there were many people who saw the wisdom of regular savings, along with earning substantial interest, the "savings member" idea came into being. These were people who were not joining the association with the purpose of a future loan, but simply to save.

Some savings and loan associations were making loans to non-members, too. From then on the scope of the associations widened. Today you, like so many thousands of others, will find our association a better place for your savings, where you'll earn the highest return with insured safety and extra convenience.

Rolling Meadows gathering

Rotary chief boosts 'pride'

Improving the quality of life — that is the guiding aim of new Rotary International Pres. William C. Carter, an Englishman who spoke to suburban Rotary members this week in Rolling Meadows.

"We must think of conservation of our environment," he said. "This is a heritage we have taken on as trustees." Carter said a committee of men dedicated to a survival plan for Canada's natural resources will be able to advise other Rotary clubs, so they may act as a catalyst in the fight for conservation everywhere.

With 740,000 members worldwide, Carter said Rotary should be able to bring back some of the values that have been lost in society today.

"I don't know what's gone wrong today," he said. "Priorities have gone wrong in this world." He explained that new employees often want to know what days they will have off, what the benefits will be, before they have been hired. "Rotary could change that."

He said he would like to see a return to priorities of pride in workmanship, whereby a craftsman gives his best work "and lets the reward follow."

CARTER SAID the worldwide nature of Rotary could be used to fight loneliness in the young as well as the old. "Community service is self-suggesting, but I'm thinking of a different type," Carter said. "There is loneliness in many places today." He added that a survey by the Rev. Billy Graham has shown that there is as much loneliness among young people as the old, and he said loneliness is a prime breeding ground for problems.

Carter spoke to 150 Rotary members from throughout the Chicago area at the special meeting Monday sponsored by the Mount Prospect Rotary chapter. As president, Carter was making his first public appearance to install new officers of the Mount Prospect Club and 19 other clubs in attendance. Clubs in the special installation ceremony included Elk Grove Village, Palatine, Rolling Meadows and Wheeling from the Northwest suburbs.

The resident of Old Windsor, Berkshire, England, joked when he said he is experiencing his first Fourth of July on "this side."

"But we had sent our best people over here," he added. More seriously, he said he hopes every Britisher is as grateful as he is for the existence of the United States.

American Buyers Federation

One way to beat high cost of living

by MONICA WILCH

For Chicago consumers, the answer to the rapidly shrinking buying power of the dollar may not be "Phase IV," but an organization called American Buyers Federation.

Whatever "game plan" President Nixon comes up with next in attempting to salvage the economy, it will have to go some to beat ABF in providing immediate and direct relief to the consumer's pocketbook.

Founded in 1967 by Chicagoan Richard A. Alford, ABF is a mass merchandising program that offers to its members discounts of 10 to 50 per cent on a wide range of products, from food, cosmetics and drugs to clothing, furniture and automobiles, as well as on services such as hotels, car rental, and vacation tours.

Previously available only to groups, such as employees of a company, labor unions, and professional or civic organizations, ABF recently opened its membership to the general public.

The basic operating procedure of ABF is quite simple: the organization sends its members to participating merchants who, in return for the increased customer volume, offer discount prices to ABF members.

THE MERCHANTS who are signed up by ABF are, according to Alford, "volume-minded, honest and reliable." If they prove to be otherwise, they are cancelled.

"We try to negotiate any complaints between sellers and consumers," Alford added. "We check out each merchant with the Better Business Bureau and through our own investigations before accepting him. We then offer follow-up protection to the consumer — we have the power to tell a dealer to refund a deposit or whatever," Alford said.

In addition, he explained, the ABF membership itself is guaranteed. If a consumer joins and then is dissatisfied with the program, his membership fee will be refunded. Or, if a consumer shows that he could have purchased a particular item for less in another store than through the ABF dealer, Alford said, "we'll give him the difference."

"Some people drive a great distance just to go to our dealers," Alford noted, although ABF now boasts more than 350 participating merchants in the Chicago area. In the Northwest suburbs, ABF dealers include art galleries, a bedding store, men's and women's clothing shops, a cosmetics salon, fabric stores, an office supply store, a shoe store and a stereo center.

IN OTHER SUBURBS and Chicago, ABF dealers offer discount prices on groceries through a wholesaler on Elston Avenue, tires, auto parts, diamonds, furs, hardware, building and home decorating materials, sporting goods, as well as on dry cleaning and flowers.

Alford has recently added several unique services, including a family blood insurance plan, a consumer information publication, and a mail order catalogue for drugs. The latter, Alford explained, is especially useful to persons taking particular medications over long periods of time. They can order ahead in large quantities, with significant savings over many pharmacy prices.

The only product area Alford has not yet been able to include in his discount program, he said, is meat. But he is "working on that" and hopes to make arrangements with an institutional supplier to offer meat discounts to ABF members.

WHY WOULD A consumer want to join ABF rather than, say, patronize traditional discount stores, or join a membership discount store?

ABF, Alford replies, offers more products and services than any of these alternatives. Like, for instance, cars. ABF began as a volume-discount merchandiser of automobiles. Through participating car dealers, ABF offers its members the chance to buy the car of their choice at $100 over dealer's cost. Members can also get "car-quote" containing the sticker price and the dealer's cost for a particular car and for each option.

The car discount offer seems to remain the biggest drawing card of ABF. In an informal poll of area teachers, who are eligible to use the ABF program because it is sponsored for them by the Illinois Education Association, most of them told The Herald they or their friends had used ABF to buy cars.

Charles Meyers, a teacher at Grove Junior High School in Elk Grove Village, who is the IEA representative handling the ABF program at that school, said a number of teachers there have purchased cars through ABF dealers.

HE SAID THEY got the cars for about $100 over dealer's cost, with the options they wanted, and all have been "very happy" with the transactions.

According to Larry Halter of the Palatine office of IEA, the ABF program has been well received by teachers in the area and, he added, "I think this will be a good year for it."

"In my own experience — it's been a savings for me," he said.

Attesting to the success of the program, Alford keeps files full of letters from members, merchants and sponsors telling of their savings or increased business, as the case may be.

He also can claim more than 1,000 new members joining every week and more than 1,000 Chicagoans using the vacation program.

(Readers who want more information about ABF may call its national office in Chicago, 427-0630.)

AMERICAN BUYERS FEDERATION members in the northwest suburbs can get significant reductions on the prices of new cars from area dealers who participate in the program. The new car buying program is unique to ABF and ranks as one of the most popular aspects of ABF membership.

At Joshua Tree women bring their children to work

by KATHLEEN NEUMEYER

REDONDO BEACH, Calif. — In the apparel manufacturing business, it's a fact of life that the high employee turnover rate is caused by transferred husbands, sick children and a dearth of babysitters.

Joshua Tree, California maker of women's dresses and sportswear, decided to keep its workers on the job by letting them bring their children along.

Opened last September, Joshua Tree is one of only 11 on-site, industry-financed day care centers in the United States.

"I've been in this business for 20 years," explained Bernard Grenell, president of Joshua Tree, "and without any fancy surveys, I know that the primary reasons for turnover and absenteeism are sick kids, lost babysitters, or the fact that he's been transferred."

"I lived with it. In fact, I used to fantasize about what on earth we would do if my wife had to work. Who would take care of our kids? Luckily, I have the option of saying my wife won't work, but most of our people don't."

FOR YEARS GRENNELL had thought it would be a good idea to maintain a day care center at his factory, but he never thought he could afford to do it.

Then, 28 months ago, he found himself with 4,000 square feet of extra space at his Gardena factory and decided to give it a try.

"We're a people-oriented company, and the employees had a problem which I identified with as a father. I saw it as a way of helping them and helping ourselves," he said.

He spent $30,000 renovating an area for the center — installing sliding glass doors in poured cement walls to meet a state requirement — and adding potties and a play yard with sandpiles.

The head dress designer personally painted a rainbow, a hippopotamus and the ABC's on the walls of the sunny playroom, and Grenell himself picked out the playground equipment.

So far, only about five per cent of Grenell's employees are taking advantage of Joshua Tree, but he says it is attracting new job applicants in women who need to work but have no satisfactory day care arrangements.

YOUNGSTERS from two to six attend, and there are plans to expand during school summer vacation by operating a day camp for older children, offering swimming lessons and crafts at a nearby public park.

The center is open to the children of male employees as well as the women, and two fathers are making use of it. One man brings his son along to work twice a week while his stewardess wife flies, and another man enrolled his child during a family crisis which kept his wife away from home attending to a hospitalized child.

Run by an experienced director and a couple of young assistants, the center opens at 8:50 a.m. six days a week and closes when the last child has been picked up in the evening, usually around 6 o'clock.

Breakfast, lunch and a snack are served, cooked by the teachers in the center's small kitchen, and the youngsters take a three-hour afternoon nap on bright blue folding cots.

MOTHERS POP in during their coffee breaks and many take their children on short outings during the lunch hour. When a child is sick, the mothers run in from time to time throughout the day to give medication and to check on them.

"The kids seem to understand that Mother is on the other side of that door and she's working," Grenell observed.

"It's a far different thing from Mother's going away and leaving me."

Employees are charged $2.50 for each day the children attend. The company picks up the remaining 60 per cent of the cost.

"It costs us from $20,000 to $30,000 a year before taxes, and from $10,000 to $12,000 a year after taxes," Grenell says.

Most of that is in the teachers' salaries. The rent is fixed and the food is $100 or so a month.

"We can well afford it. We spend a lot more on other employee benefits," Grenell said.

"I think there's a real need in terms of the parent, and in time this is going to be a real benefit to the company. It's not a burden. It's something we think is worthwhile. It's something we'd like to encourage throughout the industry."

Gay nursery a delight

Fortunate the little girl whose father is an interior designer. Such a one is 2-year-old Leigh Deutsch, whose daddy, Larry Deutsch, A.I.D., designed this gay nursery for her.

His philosophy of bright bold color throughout the two-story Deutsch home in Highland Park makes little Leigh's room ideal for fun, games and doll housekeeping with her small pals.

White window shades are trimmed in the same blue and red ruffles of the tie-back draperies, echoing colors of stripes and polka dots in the wall covering.

White floors are vinyl-coated. The custom bed is in bright yellow bolster frame with a cover of navy blue and the Louis XV armchair covered in yellow vinyl matches the bed and draperies.

The dollhouse is a family antique.

All room materials in vinyl covering make for easy upkeep and save on wear and tear. The vinyl-coated window shades from Joanna Western conserve energy when they are pulled down, insulating from cold in winter and keeping room cool in summertime.

Any child should take delight in this gay room and mothers will appreciate its easy care.

The Consumer

by Monica Wilch

Buying tires can be a confusing experience, even for individuals who figure they know a little something about tires. That's because tire companies' ads comparing their tires to cats' paws or to lions or tigers, and even their grading terms such as "premium" and "second-line," are virtually meaningless.

But that's set to change in about a year — Sept. 1, 1974 — when federal standards for treadwear, traction and high-speed performance will become effective. It will be the first time tire buyers will have uniform factual information on which to base their judgment.

Tests by the U.S. Department of Transportation will determine ratings to be given in each of the three categories. Treadwear will be measured in seven grades from "less than 60" to "200," according to the percentage of the test tire's wear compared to a control tire.

TRACTION WILL be defined by stars or asterisks. A three-star tire will be one with 110 per cent of the traction of the data. If the dealer cannot produce such proof, the guarantee may be just a come-on. Mileage guarantees are almost certainly invalid, since mileage depends on road conditions and driving habits.

PREDICTIONS ARE that consumers will soon be bombarded by promotional sweepstakes again, due to a recent Federal Trade Commission ruling in a case involving the McDonald hamburger chain.

The FTC dismissed charges against McDonald's that a 1968 sweepstakes was deceptive. McDonald's had advertised $500,000 in prizes, but awarded only 227 prizes worth about $12,000.

Congressional hearings on the matter of sweepstakes about three years ago had turned up evidence that in hundreds of sweepstakes, only small fractions of the number of prizes advertised were actually given away, and usually the least valuable.

One company advertised 10,180 prizes but awarded only 109, 107 of which were fourth-place prizes of minimal value. Another company promoted 18 sweepstakes during two years and gave away only three-tenths of one per cent of the prizes advertised.

FOLLOWING THESE hearings, the FTC began to move against such deception in sweepstakes, greatly reducing their number and improving the chances for actually receiving a prize.

But the latest decision is seen as a step backward. Although the FTC insisted its ruling was not meant to bring back dishonest sweepstakes, a legislative aide who worked on the Congressional hearings said the accomplishments of the committee have been undone and predicted "a great proliferation" of sweepstakes again.

McDonald's was founded in Des Plaines by Ray Kroc, who recently donated a million dollars to Ravinia.

Why don't newspapers ever print good news? Why doesn't Ralph Nader ever say anything good about the American system?

WELL, HE will and they do. That is, Ralph Nader and his Center for the Study of Responsive Law are conducting an investigation to discover "what's right with America." The study is designed to identify institutions and individuals who have dealt with government, economic, social and environmental problems creatively, efficiently and productively.

And, whenever "Nader's Raiders" come up with the good news that such exemplary institutions or individuals exist, you may be sure this column will print it!

If you have any suggestions to contribute to this search, you may write to "What's Right With America," Center for Study of Responsive Law, Box 19367, Washington, D.C. 20036.

Tire grading should make buying easier control tire; two stars will mean traction equal to the control tire; one star will indicate 90 per cent of control tire's traction. A dash will be used to indicate traction less than 90 per cent of control tires.

High speed performance will be graded "A," "B" and "C," with "A" denoting best performance — up to 105 mph without separating from heat; B — durability up to 95 mph, C — 85 mph, the minimum level meeting federal safety standards.

Such uniform standards for tires were originally required in the Highway Safety Act of 1968, which gave the government two years to come up with a grading system.

While consumers await the tardy federal standards, there are several other points to keep in mind when buying tires:

ALL U.S. TIRE sellers are required to record the tire number, name and address of purchaser, and send the information to the manufacturer, in case of recall. But only about 50 per cent of tires sold are so registered.

"Blimshed" tires — ones with a purely cosmetic imperfection — are marked and sold at reduced prices. But some dealers buff off the mark and sell them at the price of perfect tires.

The FTC prohibits tire guarantees that cannot be fulfilled. Thus, a tread-life guarantee should be backed up by test

Entire family in Stalker-Hohm rites

Shelley Stalker's four sisters and a brother took part in her wedding on June 9 in St. Raymond Catholic Church, Mount Prospect. It was truly a family affair for the Douglas R. Stalker family of 215 S. Lancaster, Mount Prospect.

Kimberly was maid of honor, Leslie was a bridesmaid, Hilarie the junior bridesmaid, and 4-year-old Courtney served as flower girl. Among the groomsmen for the noon nuptials was their brother Douglas.

Shelley became the bride of John Hohm of Syracuse, N.Y., whom she met while attending Southern Illinois University. John earned both his bachelor's and master's degrees from SIU.

His sister and brother were among the wedding attendants, Diane as bridesmaid and Craig a groomsman. Parents of the three are Mr. and Mrs. John F. Hohm of Syracuse.

FOR THE DOUBLE ring service Shelley wore a white organza gown with cathedral train and a long flowing veil which covered the train. The dress was accented with bands of lace run with pink ribbon at the high neckline and on the cuffs of the long puffed sleeves. The lace also edged the bridal veil.

The bride carried a colonial bouquet of white and pink roses mixed with baby's breath, and as "something old" she had her great-grandmother's white lace handkerchief.

Her attendants were all gowned alike in pink organza dresses trimmed in white lace, with matching pink picture hats. The girls carried flower balls of white carnations, pink roses and baby's breath.

Shelley made the dresses for her junior bridesmaid and flower girl. They were in pink and white lace, and the girls wore matching colored wreaths of fresh flowers over their hair.

BESIDES THE couple's sisters, the bridesmaids included Cindy Hoff, Shelley's cousin from Duluth, Minn.; Susan Hayward, Barrington; and Ginn Bruhn, Chicago.

Rick Hall of Mattoon, Ill., was best man, and groomsmen were Al Bruhn, Chicago; Bill Vogler, Carbondale; and Rick Streng, Arlington Heights, along with the two brothers of the newlyweds.

After the wedding service, Shelley and John greeted 150 guests at a garden reception at the Stalker home.

They spent a 10-day honeymoon traveling through the southeast before settling in Hoffman Estates. This summer the groom is a counselor at Fleetwing Farms Day Camp.

His bride is a graduate of Sacred Heart of Mary High School.

Dear Dorothy: Reading about people washing fiberglass draperies moves me to say that people with breathing problems, as well as babies and the old, should never be around them. My daughter is a good case. She kept choking up until she removed fiberglass curtains from above her bed. Her trouble then cleared up. — Mr. K. C. Spaulding

This letter intrigued me instantly because it posed such a new and different dimension. Checking discloses that medical studies on the use of glass in industry (for insulation and filters and so forth) and its uses as a textile material have been going on for 30 years. More than a few universities and laboratories have been involved, including the examining of thousands who have worked in fibrous glass plants for as long as three decades. All the scientists seem to agree that glass is an inert material and there is no medical evidence of any harmful effect to either skin, lungs or overall health. I can only assume that your daughter is a rare case.

Dear Dorothy: Can you give the name of a book that will give a club a background on how to conduct meetings and also help to pick an agenda? — Mrs. M. R. W.

You must have used a wrong word. If an agenda is needed, then there is no need for a club. I guess what you want is a basic guide on how to run meetings. Check through Roberts' "Rules of Order" at the public library. Other than this, there may be some reference books on the specifics of volunteer organizations.

Tip to brides: Should a fruit juice spill on a fabric, sponge the spot immediately with cool water. Some fruit juices, citrus especially, are invisible on the fabric after they dry, but turn yellow on aging or heating. This kind of stain usually stays.

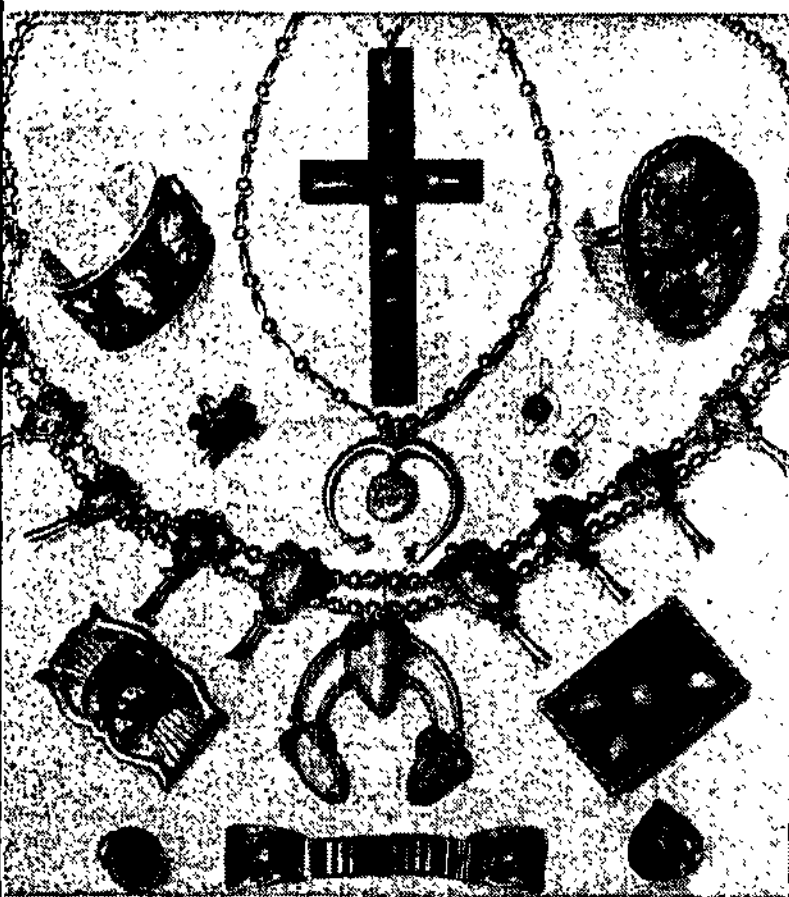

(Mrs. Ritz welcomes questions and hints. If a personal reply is required, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Write to her in care of Suburban Living, Paddock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.)

A wedding fit for royalty

In a style fit for royalty, Mr. and Mrs. David Holden left their 4:30 p.m. wedding ceremony in a Rolls Royce once used by Queen Elizabeth on her tour through Canada.

Sheryl Molway, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leon E. Molway Sr., 1509 W. Dundee Road, Palatine, and David Ross Holden, son of Dr. and Mrs. George Holden, 1108 Glidden Ave., De Kalb, were married June 9 at First United Methodist Church, Palatine, in a double ring, candlelight service.

The bride designed and made her gown of imported French Chantilly lace over satin. The dress featured a scoop neckline, Empire waist and puff sleeves accented with blue lace insertions. A lace cathedral-length train and an illusion veil attached to a Juliet cap completed her ensemble. She carried a prayer book, used by her mother at her wedding, adorned with white lace, red roses, stephanotis and baby's breath.

Sheryl's attendants wore dresses of red and blue floral print featuring white sleeveless chiffon bodices, scooped, ruffled necklines and short bolero jackets with long sleeves and ruffled cuffs. They carried bouquets of white daisies, red roses and baby's breath accented with red ribbons.

BEBE MOLWAY, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids included another sister, Carol; Diane Liggett, Arlington Heights; Marilyn Scola, Lombard; Jane Grimes, Homewood; and Susan Doering, Cicero.

Susan Holden, sister of the groom, appeared as junior bridesmaid and Kathleen Doyle, 5, a friend from Atlanta, was flower girl. They were attired in blue dotted Swiss dresses with short puff sleeves and white ruffles at the neckline and carried baskets of white daisies, red roses and baby's breath.

Best man for the ceremony was David's brother, Kent. Groomsmen were Bruce and Robert Holden, his brothers; Leon Molway Jr., Arlington Heights, brother of the bride; Les Carey, Chicago; and Ralph Kompare, Sycamore. Junior groomsman was Bill Molway, brother of the bride.

Seating the guests were Kevin Diamond, Scott Wilson and Jim Kozelka, all of De Kalb.

FOLLOWING A reception for 150 guests at Chateau Louise, the newlyweds left on a honeymoon to Mackinac Island. They are now living in Creston and will move to Rochelle in August.

Sheryl graduated from Fremd High School in 1968 and Northern Illinois University. She teaches in Rochelle School Dist. 231. David is a 1969 graduate of De Kalb High School and is presently a biology student at Northern Illinois.

Handmade gowns enhance Henn-Zellmer ceremony

The bride appeared at the altar in a dress of sate peau trimmed with Venice lace. With a fitted bodice and natural waistline the dress, was complemented by a flounce hem and sweep train. Sandra's three-tiered illusion veil was worn also by her sister. It was held by a Camelot headpiece of lace and ribbon matching the gown. She carried a cascade of red roses, phalaenopsis and stephanotis.

Mrs. Susan Barrett, sister of the bride from Tucson, Ariz., was matron of honor and bridesmaids were Judy Kryzan, Mil-

Palatine bride moves to Bloomington

A romance at Illinois State University culminated in marriage June 9 for Dolores Gowen of Palatine and Richard Alan Kne of Normal, Ill.

Dolores, daughter of the Curtis Gowens of 837 E. Baldwin, graduated from Illinois State in '71 and has been teaching in Farmer City, Ill. Her husband still attends the university while working for General Electric in Bloomington.

They will live in a mobile home in Bloomington.

Their wedding took place at 4:30 p.m. in Palatine Presbyterian Church, with a reception immediately following for 100 guests at Howard Johnson's Palatine.

Dolores chose her sister-in-law, Mrs. Nancy Davis of Bloomington, as matron of honor. Her college roommate, Mary Parker of Kankakee, and Sue Crisman of Hudson, N.H., the bride's cousin, were bridesmaids.

Also coming down the aisle was 5-year-old Becky Davis of Bloomington, a niece, who served as flower girl.

All the girls were dressed alike in white dotted swiss over blue taffeta, with a pastel floral printed overskirt. They wore matching white hats trimmed with blue net bands and carried baskets of pink roses, white daisies, baby's breath and bachelor buttons.

THE BRIDE chose a white organza over satin gown with lace accents at the high neck, on the cuffs of the bishop sleeves and at the hemline. A train of organza over satin was dotted with lace appliques.

Dolores completed her ensemble with an Alencon lace crown studded with pearls and an elbow-length veil. She carried a nosegay of pink roses, baby's breath and white roses.

The groom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kne of Normal, chose his brother, Fred, of Lemore, Calif., as best man. The bride's brother, George Gowen; Marshall Davis, Bl/Mmingion; and Mike Cunningham, Peoria, were groomsmen.

Soloist for the double ring ceremony was Mrs. Margaret Anne Crisman of Hudson, N.H.

The bridal couple honeymooned in Minnesota for two weeks before going to Bloomington to live.

The Palatine Unit of Suburban Cook County Homemakers Extension Association will stage a fashion show at a meeting Tuesday at 12:30 p.m. at the Palatine Township Building, 37 N. Plum Grove Road, Palatine. Members are asked to use the north entrance.

Arlington VFW Auxiliary honors 50-year members

The Auxiliary to VFW Post 981, Arlington Heights, will celebrate its golden anniversary in fall.

Started in October, 1923, the women's group has compiled a record of achievement in support and donations to the community and to families of Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Although plans call for a noteworthy celebration in fall, the auxiliary has already given some recognition to longtime members.

At the June meeting 50-year membership pins went to Mrs. Edward Foley, Mrs. William Beckman, Mrs. Frank H. Morris, Mrs. George Held and Mrs. R. Horcher.

Twenty-five-year pins were awarded to Mrs. Wilbert Becker, Mrs. William Grismer, Mrs. George Haufl, Mrs. Arnold Hicks, Mrs. Fred Kehe, Mrs. Leonard Luber and Mrs. L. Winkelman.

Others who have been members for 20, 15, 10 and 5 years were also given membership pins.

CHILD WELFARE and veterans' hospitals have been strongly supported by the local auxiliary during its 50 years of service.

Mrs. Joseph Anzalone, chairman, states that this past year a cash donation of $138 went to child welfare, earning a total credit of $15,000 for the women.

To aid the servicemen at Downey Veterans Hospital, the women donate clothing and gifts, also providing entertainment and hours of visiting. For the veterans in Hines Hospital they sewed quilts, and they also donate toys and clothing to Dixon State School.

Hospital chairman Mrs. Bruce Hansen reports that the auxiliary has accumulated $70,000 credit from its hospital projects.

Garden club adds floral touch to their wedding

Carrying flowers expertly arranged by her mother and several friends from the Arlington Heights Garden Club, Jan Schrank, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Schrank, 3120 N. Volz Drive, West, Arlington Heights, exchanged marriage vows with Joseph Szymanski, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Porm of Joliet.

The June 9 afternoon service was held at Southminster United Presbyterian Church, Arlington Heights.

As she came down the aisle, Jan was attired in a gown of white silk over taffeta with Empire styling. Appliqued flowers adorned the bodice, long sheer sleeves and skirt, and a chapel train and elbow-length net veil completed her ensemble. The veil flowed from a wide bow.

Accessories included a pin worn by her great-grandmother and a bouquet of white daisies, yellow roses, baby's breath and ivy greens.

LINDA SUPRENANT, college roommate of the bride, appeared as maid of honor in an Empire gown of turquoise chiffon over taffeta with long sheer sleeves and a high neckline. She carried a basket of turquoise and white daisies with yellow ribbons, also arranged by the garden club members.

Darrell Szymanski, brother of the groom, was best man and seating the guests were Steven Milligan, Glen Ellyn, and Gary Setzer, Villa Park, both cousins of the bride.

Following a buffet dinner at Arlington Heights VFW Post for 120 guests, the newlyweds left on a trip to West Palm Beach and Orlando, Fla. They are at home in Mount Prospect.

Both Jan and Joseph work for Xerox.

The Potting Shed

by Mary B. Good

Weeds? In my garden? The next smart alec who tramples over to my house and comments about all the weeds in the garden is going to get run out of town.

Yesterday the sheriff came over and dared to utter that unmentionable phrase: "Why don't you weed?"

Ten minutes later my husband was on my back, noting that the sheriff — who doesn't garden — noticed the unruly sprouts.

That's just the trouble. Everybody is giving advice nowadays. Even to the people who make their living giving advice.

Don't these people realize that there is no such thing as a weed? Only misplaced natural things? Some say a weed is a plant that grows where you don't want it to grow! The only difference between a weed and a wildflower is that the weed grows on disturbed ground. You never find a dandelion patch in the middle of a virgin forest, or a trillium on the front lawn.

WE MUST EXPECT weeds in cultivated ground, and live with the fact that they will always be with us. Why, who ever heard of weeding before the 4th of July? I assert my independence that I am not a slave to a weed-free garden! I can always smother, sythe or pluck whenever the mood strikes me. When the weeds compete for water, sun or strangle my peas — then I will turn to serious weeding.

Meanwhile, think of the service that weeds perform: they lend a spot of green to the garden long before anything else is growing, they hide young vegetables so the rabbits don't get them, and shade seedlings so they don't get sunburn. Besides, they have historical value as cathartics, carminatives, contraceptives, etc., in folk therapy.

A HANDSOME lawyer friend (new gardening recruit) commented to me on the voluminous amount of gardening misadvice being circulated. When pressed, he revealed that he'd been told that it was perfectly satisfactory to smother sod with dirt and plant a garden in it. Only when his seedlings struggled through the tough sod roots and languished did he realize it can't be done that way.

He also mentioned that his tomato plants were getting stunted and slender-stemmed until an old-pro neighbor told him about the "pinching suckers" bit. (This means plucking off shoots that sprout in the joint of a main branch.)

He also never knew that smoking cigarettes in the tomato patch invites a fungus amongus.

Straggly tomato seedlings will get a big boost if you bury them almost to the depth of half their stem or more. The use of metal stakes instead of wood stakes for tomato plant support is another important crop booster. It's used by the organic gardeners and called electro-culture.

TO BOOST yields on snap beans (the word green beans is passe), lay clear plastic between the rows. The University of Wisconsin has done research on the clear plastic and now recommends it in its vegetable growing pamphlets.

One last tip: Water cucumbers during the warmest part of the day. Throwing ice cold water on cukes is the surest way to hold them back.

'Hot line' helps parents

Most child abuse result of stress

BERKELEY, Calif. — The parent who fears uncontrollable anger may lead to beating up his or her own child can get help in Berkeley by dialing a telephone aid service.

It is the Parental Stress Service, a group recently formed to help battered children and their parents. You can discuss the crisis, and perhaps be put in touch with a sympathetic volunteer.

The service is an experiment aimed not only at the problem of battered children — some experts believe 50,000 annually die at their parents' hands — but at a vast number of parents whose wallowings end just short of real physical damage.

"To me, abuse runs the gamut from psychological neglect and verbal assaults to actual battering," said Carol Johnston, founder-director of the service. "If people are honest, they will admit they sometimes abuse their children."

"Every parent is a potential abuser. What can stop him is seeing the child as a person with his own rights."

Mrs. Johnston believes 90 per cent of people who abuse their children are normal. Only 10 per cent of seriously abused children have parents who are mentally ill, she said.

Abusing parents, she added, aren't monsters but basically good people under great stress who finally crack, often because of some trivial incident.

"I consider myself an abusing parent, and that's how I got into this," she said. "I do not trust myself. Sometimes I have no empathy to stop me from hurting Danny."

"Now I can say, Danny, get out of here, and he will leave. He knows what is coming."

Danny is eight, and Mrs. Johnston confesses to an occasional sudden desire "to ram him through something," "to kill him."

Mrs. Johnston, 34, is a divorcee who quit teaching at Moses Lake, Wash., to take a master's degree at the University of California.

After work at the San Francisco Youth Guidance Center, she obtained a state grant of $15,000 to set up the Parental Stress Service. Additional money has been contributed by churches, and the state grant has been renewed for a second year.

The service takes calls seven days a week, 24 hours a day. Calls are handled by Mrs. Johnston, the only full-time worker, and 19 volunteers.

About a third of callers don't give their names, but the same voices keep calling back. Volunteers who have taken a training course, take calls and often visit homes, when invited.

Some parents phone after having let loose all their frustrations by trouncing their child. Others learn to call when they feel violence coming on.

Half the cases involve children under five, and 90 per cent of the callers are women.

A common factor is isolation, and women are more likely to feel isolated. Another common factor is that the parent herself was abused as a child, and knows no other mode of child raising.

"The abusing parent never really had his or her own needs met," Mrs. Johnston said. "The parent is not really striking out at the child. A role reversal takes place, and he is actually striking out at his own parents."

National studies show that of children actually injured, most are three or under. The most severely injured are under six months.

"It would be a great benefit for the country if we had family life and positive parenting classes in the schools, starting with kindergarten," Mrs. Johnston said. "It's more important than sex education."

"A lot of people, especially teen-agers, aren't prepared to be parents. Girls pull their doll by the leg, or throw it on the floor, and think it's okay."

The women's liberation movement, she said, is spreading the realization that parenting is no bed of roses, and making it easier to say, "I hate this damn kid today."

"That doesn't make you a bad mother. And it's easier now to find alternatives for mothers who are fed up."

Mrs. Johnston regards as the service's failures those people who don't call back. Typical successes are mothers who find a volunteer a friend, somebody who cares for her.

Well wishers often call the service, Mrs. Johnston said, to say, "I wish you have had been here years ago when I was a beginning parent."

Students earn scholarships

The Junior Woman's Club of Des Plaines has awarded scholarships to six Des Plaines students.

David Franks, a senior at Maine West High School, will attend a two-week high school speech-communication workshop at Eastern Illinois University. David has been active in the speech department at Maine and has performed in several plays.

Keith Sove, also a senior at Maine West, will attend the Federation Art School at Allerton Park. Keith has earned an art award each year at Maine.

THREE DISTRICT 62 junior high school students — Cheryl Bergman, Algonquin; Robert Davis, Chippewa; and Annette Arnold, Iroquois — have been awarded scholarships to attend the Egyptian Music Camp at Du Quoin, Ill. These awards were based on the outstanding contributions of these students has made to the school's music program.

Kristine Sove, a junior at Northern Illinois University, De Kalb, was awarded $250 toward continuing her education in music.

Funds for these scholarships were raised by the Juniors from projects such as the benefit fashion show-luncheon held each spring.

AND EVERYTHING NICE ABOUT FOOD

SUMMER smorgasbord

The Scandinavians have a word for it — smorgasbord. Traditionally, it was a spread of hot and cold appetizers. But today's more general interpretation is a meal of various meat, fish and salad dishes served buffet style.

The assets of a summer smorgasbord are many — the foods are universally appealing and all can be fixed ahead allowing the hostess to keep a cool head in warm weather. Also, many of the dishes are available in jars and cans so the flexible menu can be expanded as the budget permits.

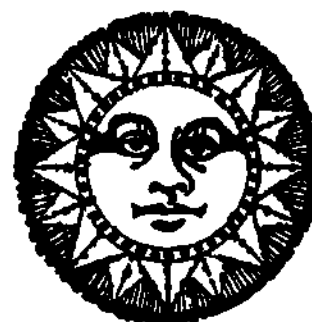

The smorgasbord shown here begins with Midnight Sun Salads — "rafts" of western iceberg lettuce, one adorned with tiny shrimp, cucumber slices and asparagus spears; the other carrying a cargo of red caviar nestled in a green pepper ring. A simple oil and vinegar dressing spiked with Worcestershire sauce is just the right complement to either salad.

The baked Apricot-Mustard Glazed Ham starts with a canned ham that's basted with a sweet-tart mixture of apricot preserves and mustard. Garnished with apricots, it's an elegant looking dish that belies its simplicity.

Potato salad, that favorite accompaniment to ham, is here given a Scandinavian accent with the addition of peas, cucumber and dill weed. This jelled version, chilled in an attractive mold, is a stunning centerpiece that's also delicious.

Tivoli Tea, inspired by the winter-time hot glogg drink of Scandinavia, is a tangy summer cooler.

In the Scandinavian manner, serve fresh fruit and cheese for dessert — it's agreeably light and suitably colorful.

MIDNIGHT SUN APPETIZER-SALADS

- 2 heads western Iceberg lettuce
- Tiny cooked shrimp
- Cucumber slices
- Asparagus spears
- Red caviar
- Green pepper rings
- Lemon slices
- Rosy French Dressing

To prepare rafts, core, rinse and thoroughly drain lettuce; chill in disposable plastic bag or lettuce "crisp-it." At serving time, cut the head crosswise with sharp stainless knife into 1-inch thick slices and place on individual salad plates, reserving end pieces for other salads. (One head of Iceberg lettuce will make 4 to 5 "rafts.")

Top each slice with an attractive arrangement of cucumber slices topped with baby shrimp and asparagus spears or red caviar in a green pepper ring garnished with a lemon slice. (Other variations might include herring bits, tuna, salmon, sardines, anchovies, pickled beets and marinated cucumbers.) Serve with Rosy French Dressing. Serves 6 to 8.

ROSY FRENCH DRESSING

- ½ cup salad oil
- ¼ cup catchup
- ¼ cup vinegar
- 2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
- ½ teaspoon salt

Combine ingredients in jar with tight fitting lid; shake to mix. Makes 1 cup.

APRICOT - MUSTARD GLAZED HAM

- 3 pound canned ham
- 2 tablespoons butter
- ¼ cup apricot preserves
- ¼ cup prepared yellow mustard
- 2 tablespoons brown sugar
- ¼ teaspoon ground cardamom, if desired
- Canned apricot halves for garnish

Place ham in shallow roasting pan. Bake at 325 degrees for 1 hour. Melt butter; stir in apricot preserves, mustard, brown sugar, and, if desired, cardamom. Brush ham generously with apricot glaze. Return to oven; bake 30 minutes longer, brushing occasionally with apricot glaze. Garnish with canned apricot halves. Serves 6 to 8.

MOLDED POTATO SALAD

- 1 package (5½ oz.) scalloped potatoes
- 2 envelopes unflavored gelatin
- 1 cup cold water
- 1 cup dairy sour cream
- 1 cup mayonnaise
- 1 teaspoon dill weed, if desired
- 1 cucumber, chopped
- 1 package (10 oz.) frozen peas, thawed
- ½ cup chopped celery
- Iceberg lettuce leaves

Place potato slices from package of scalloped potatoes in medium-size saucepan; cover with salted water. Cover and simmer 15 to 20 minutes, until tender; drain and chill. Soften gelatin in cold water in small saucepan. Cook and stir over medium heat until melted. Combine with sour cream, mayonnaise, dill weed, seasoning mix from package of scalloped potatoes, cucumber, peas, celery, and chilled potato slices. Pour into 2-quart mold. Chill until set. Unmold onto bed of Iceberg lettuce leaves. Serves 6 to 8.

TIVOLI TEA

- 1½ quarts boiling water
- 6 teabags
- 1 (12 oz.) jar currant jelly
- 1 teaspoon ground cardamom
- ½ cup raisins
- ½ cup blanched whole almonds
- Pell of 1 orange and 1 lemon
- 2 cups apple juice, chilled
- Orange slices for garnish

Pour boiling water over teabags and let stand 5 minutes. Remove teabags and stir in jelly, cardamom, raisins and almonds. Add long strips of orange and lemon peel. Crush peel. Let stand until cooled to room temperature. Remove peel. Chill. When ready to serve stir in apple juice. Pour into ice-filled tall glasses, adding some of the raisins and almonds to each glass. Garnish with orange slices. Makes about 2 quarts or 10 servings.

Mrs. Gilbert Hill

Her tuna mold gets 'saints' name

by LOIS SEILER

A tuna mold has taken on the unlikely name of "The Saints Salad" because it has been served in so many churches whose names begin with Saint.

Mrs. Gilbert Hill of Arlington Heights acquired the recipe from her mother-in-law, whose husband was a clergyman. It was used for luncheons at churches in which he served, and Bettie Hill has prepared it for various church luncheons.

"The recipe has criss-crossed the country with us," Bettie remarked, "and always been successful whether made in quantity for a large group or in a one-quart mold for a luncheon at home."

Relish sandwich spread and chopped onion are mixed with tuna to give it a tasty flavor. Unflavored gelatin is used as the congealing agent. The salad looks particularly attractive when made in a fish mold, according to Bettie.

A summertime meal of bratwurst on hard rolls and homemade potato salad is a favorite of the family, which includes husband, Gil, and children Chris, who is working towards his doctorate at California Institute of Technology, Betsy, a senior at Illinois State University, and Gil, a freshman at the University of Wisconsin at Oshkosh.

Bettie's appealing potato salad includes onion, celery and cucumber, and her dressing has extra zest from pickle juice, horseradish and mustard which she adds to the mayonnaise. Made ahead of time for the flavors to blend, it is served garnished with radishes and hard cooked eggs.

Another specialty which her family loves is what Bettie calls an Easy Trifle. This dessert is simply made by using a commercially-packaged sponge or chiffon cake.

Bettie assembles the trifle in a handsome cut glass bowl, layering the cake with brandy and topping it with custard, a frozen fruit mixture and whipped cream garnished with slivered almonds. Spooned into dessert cups, it is a colorful and refreshing summer dessert.

Formerly a kindergarten teacher for District 59, Bettie's hobbies include singing, playing the piano and gardening. She is a member of the Episcopal Church Women of St. Simon's.

THE SAINTS SALAD

2 small cans tuna fish
1 cup celery, finely-cut
2 tablespoons chopped onion
1 teaspoon salt
¾ cup relish sandwich spread
2 tablespoons unflavored gelatin
1 cup cold water
Flake tuna and rinse with hot water to remove oil. Drain. Add celery, onion, salt and sandwich spread. Mix thoroughly and set aside.

Soak gelatin in cold water for five minutes. Place over hot water to dissolve. Add to tuna mixture and stir well. Turn into a one-quart mold and chill until firm. Remove mold and garnish with parsley, watercress or romaine lettuce. Serves 8.

POTATO SALAD

2 cups cubed, cooked potatoes
½ cup chopped onion
½ cup chopped celery
¼ cup chopped cucumber
½ cup Miracle Whip Salad Dressing
½ cup mayonnaise
¼ cup sweet-sour pickle juice
¼ teaspoon horseradish
1½ tablespoons prepared mustard
1 teaspoon salt
Sliced radishes
2 hard-cooked eggs, sliced
Combine potatoes, onion, celery and Fast food service offers short course

A short course in fast food restaurant operations is being offered by Burger King Restaurants for groups from churches, clubs, schools or other organizations.

The course, which is offered free to groups, begins at 9:30 a.m. with a visit to the company's commissary in Franklin Park where meat, fish, condiments and equipment are supplied to Burger Kings in the Chicago area. From there the tour group visits the bakery in Aurora where buns for Burger King sandwiches are made.

The final phase of the course meets at one of the restaurants near the originating point of tour. Students study food preparation, restaurant organization, sanitation compliance and other aspects of the fast food operation. Students then prepare their own Whoppers.

Transportation for the tours must be provided by the touring group.

Tours may be arranged through Diane Bosh at the Confire Division of Self Service Restaurants, Inc., Oak Brook (325-7920).

"THE SAINTS SALAD" looks almost heavenly when made in a fish mold, according to Mrs. Gilbert Hill, Arlington Heights. She suggests garnishing the molded tuna salad with watercress or parsley. Potato chips and spiced apples or pears are excellent accompaniments when using the salad as a luncheon main dish.

Mostly For Men

by Charles Flynn

Today our readers take over with some timely summer recipes.

Mrs. Norma Ames, Quincy, Ill., suggests this family recipe for Barbecued Pork Chops. To serve four, brown 8 lean pork chops in hot fat. Combine ½ cup catsup, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon celery salt, ½ teaspoon nutmeg, 1/3 cup vinegar, 1 cup water, and 1 bay leaf.

Pour mixture over the chops and bake in a 325 degree oven for 1½ hours. Turn chops once during the baking.

With sweet corn plentiful, Mrs. Otto Fredlin, Rockford, sends along this old-fashioned dish, Fried Fresh Corn.

Select five to six ears of firm but tender fresh corn. Shuck and clean. With a very sharp knife, shave 2 or 3 layers of kernels off the ears, then scrape the cob. Place cut corn in a bowl.

Add 1½ to 2 cups water, 2 tablespoons flour, 2 tablespoons sugar, salt to taste. Stir well. Melt ½ cup, or a little more, bacon drippings in a frying pan. Pour in mixture and cook over medium heat 20 to 25 minutes, stirring often. Serves 8. I can testify this is delicious, great with fried chicken and sliced tomatoes.

With all ingredients available and inexpensive at this time of the year, Mrs. George Corson, Marengo, Ill., offers this no-cooking Fresh Tomato Relish which she says is delicious and different. Keeps indefinitely stored on a cool shelf.

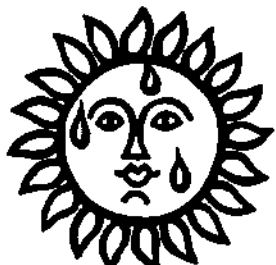

You'll need 1 peck choice ripe tomatoes, 10 medium onions, 3 green peppers, 2 cups sliced celery.

Peel the tomatoes and grind with peeled onions and peppers. Add the celery. Mix. Cover with ½ cup salt and let stand for 2 hours. Drain well for several hours.

Put drained vegetables in a bowl and add a mixture of 4 cups sugar, 3½ cups vinegar, 2 tablespoons whole mustard seed. Let stand for 1 hour. Pack into clean jars and seal. Remember, do not cook.

Tuna-Custard Pie

Calling all camp cooks!

Camp cooking has changed with the times. Now most foods used for camp cookery are dehydrated, freeze-dried or canned. This includes the variety of potato products that save peeling time for the chef on duty. A variety of instant mashed flakes and buds, diced, shredded, or scalloped potatoes certainly make life more simple. Two dishes to try at the campsite are Clam and Egg Hash and Camper's Choucroute Garnie.

CLAM AND EGG HASH
2 pkg. (12 ounces) dehydrated Idaho hashed brown potatoes
1/2 cup each butter and oil
1 large onion, chopped
2 cans (7 1/2 ounces each) minced clams, drained
Salt and pepper
3 egg yolks
3 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
1/4 cup freeze-dried chives
6 tablespoons evaporated milk

Cook potatoes according to package directions; drain well. Melt butter with oil in heavy skillet and cook onion. Mix potatoes with the clams; season. Press into the skillet with a spatula. Brown well, turning often. Mix yolks with cheese, chives and evaporated milk. Pour gently over the hash. Cover and cook until eggs are just set. Makes 4 servings.

CAMPER'S CHOUCROUTE GARNIE

4 thick slices bacon
1 can (1 pound 11 ounces) sauerkraut
1 canned ham (1 pound)
1 can of sausages (8 ounces)
1 can of tongue (7 1/2 ounces)
2 cans (1 pound each) small whole Idaho potatoes
1/4 cup freeze dried chives
2 cloves garlic, crushed
Beer
Salt and pepper
In a Dutch oven or heavy pan fry fry the bacon half-crisp. Drain sauerkraut and mix it with bacon and drippings. Arrange sliced meats and sausage on one side of the pot, drained potatoes on the other. Sprinkle with chives and garlic. Pour in beer to almost cover. Sprinkle lightly with salt and heavily with pepper. Cover tightly and simmer 30 minutes until everything is hot. Makes 4 servings.

Crown of lemon sherbet on blueberry shortcake

A towering dessert spangled with blueberries gets a crown of lemon sherbet and more berries. The only secret of this Super Shortcake is in the mixing: the dough should be handled with a very light touch.

Make your own fresh Blueberry Sauce as follows, or use a 15-oz. can of blueberries, adding 1/2 cup water and thickening with 1 tablespoon cornstarch.

SUPER SHORTCAKE
2 cups enriched flour
2 tablespoons sugar
1 tablespoon baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
1/4 cup shortening
1/2 cup blueberries (see blueberries (see Sauce recipe below)
Lemon Sherbet
Blueberry Sauce
Sift together flour, sugar, baking powder and salt. Cut in shortening until mixture resembles coarse crumbs. Combine 1/4 cup cream and blueberries, reserving remaining cream to whip for garnish. Blend blueberry-cream mixture into flour mixture to make soft dough. Press into ball. Roll out on lightly floured surface to about 1/4 inch thick. Cut out 2 biscuits with 4 1/2 to 5-inch floured round cutter. Press remaining dough together to make third biscuit. Place on lightly greased baking sheet. Bake in preheated 425 degree oven 12 to 15 minutes or until lightly browned. Cool slightly. Split biscuits, top each half with scoop of lemon sherbet and warm Blueberry Sauce. Whip remaining 1/4 cup cream for garnish. 6 servings.

Fresh Blueberry Sauce:
1 pint fresh blueberries
1 1/2 cups water
1/2 cup sugar
2 tablespoons cornstarch
2 teaspoons lemon juice
Reserve 1/2 cup blueberries for shortcake. In medium saucepan heat water to boiling; add remaining blueberries. Blend cornstarch and sugar together; add to blueberry mixture. Bring to a boil, stirring constantly. Reduce heat and simmer 2 minutes or until thickened, stirring occasionally. Stir in lemon juice. Cool slightly.
*Spoon flour into dry measuring cup; level. Do not scoop.
NOTE: If self-rising flour is used, omit baking powder and salt.

Main dish pie with tuna

Tuna-Custard Pie with Cheese Sauce is a taste-tempting entree planned especially for Sunday night supper, an elegant brunch, or an unusual dinner entree. Although not planned with dieters in mind, they could enjoy a wedge of this tasty pie when the accompaniment is a tossed green salad. Easy is the word for this pie — sauteed onion mixed with eggs and milk and poured over the flaked tuna in a partially cooked pie shell. Bake until the filling has set, and serve with cheese sauce simplified by using canned Cheddar cheese soup, and tomato slices.

TUNA-CUSTARD PIE WITH CHEESE SAUCE

2 cans (6 1/2 or 7 ounces each) tuna
1/2 cup chopped onion
2 tablespoons margarine or cooking oil
2 tablespoons flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
Dash pepper
1 1/2 cups undiluted, evaporated milk
2 eggs, beaten
1 9-inch unbaked pastry shell
Cheese Sauce (recipe follows)
Tomato slices (optional)

Drain and flake tuna. Cook onion in margarine or cooking oil until tender, but not brown. Stir in flour, salt, and pepper. Add milk; cook, stirring constantly, until thickened. Pour mixture over eggs very slowly, beating constantly. Bake crust in moderate oven, 375 degrees about 5 minutes. Remove crust from oven and spread tuna over crust; pour egg mixture over tuna. Return pie to oven; bake about 25 to 30 minutes or until filling is set. Let stand about 10 minutes before cutting into wedges.

Serve with Cheese Sauce. Garnish with thin tomato slices, if desired. Makes one 9-inch pie, 4 to 6 servings.

Cheese Sauce

1 can (10 1/2 ounces) condensed Cheddar cheese soup
1/2 cup undiluted, evaporated milk
Combine soup and milk in saucepan; heat, stirring until hot and smooth. Makes about 1 1/2 cups sauce.

Easy ways with fruit

This quickie frozen salad is popular for a party luncheon menu. Drain a 30 ounce can of fruit cocktail and combine it with a creamy smooth dressing of 2 small packages cream cheese and 1/2 cup mayonnaise. Turn into a refrigerator tray and freeze until firm.

Cinnamon peaches are great topped with ice cream. Make a syrup with sugar, red cinnamon candies and syrup drained from canned cling peach halves. Heat the peaches in the cinnamon syrup until they're bright red. Cool and serve with your favorite ice cream.

Simple puddings are often family favorites but variations are always welcome. Try serving rice, cornstarch, or tapioca pudding with a crown of colorful canned fruit cocktail. The comments will be highly complimentary.

Salmon Salads

by Fran Heckart

Meat usually has priority on the barbecue grate, but vegetables deserve space too.

Roasted corn and potatoes are favorites and there are many ways of cooking these standbys. However, there are many fine ways of cooking other vegetables outdoors.

A foil package can be your saucepan on the grill and hold all kinds of vegetables, fresh or frozen.

For a completely potless method, place — directly on a treated grill above coals — thick slices of tomato, mushroom, pepper and/or parboiled onion. Cover with an inverted colander and cook until tender.

Here are two simple methods to prepare potatoes on the grill.

POTATOES roasted over the coals: Scrub potatoes, dry, rub with a little butter, margarine or bacon fat. Wrap in aluminum foil. Place on grill over moderate fire and roast about one hour for medium-sized potatoes. Or place around outer edge of grill and allow slightly longer. If space is tight, place potatoes around outer edge of fire, right on the coals about 45 to 60 minutes. Turn two or three times. Pierce through foil with fork to test doneness. Or squeeze with fingers protected by gloves. To serve, slit foil, squeeze slightly to fluff up centers, top with butter.

Sour cream and chives, cottage cheese and crumbled bacon are also good with roasted potatoes.

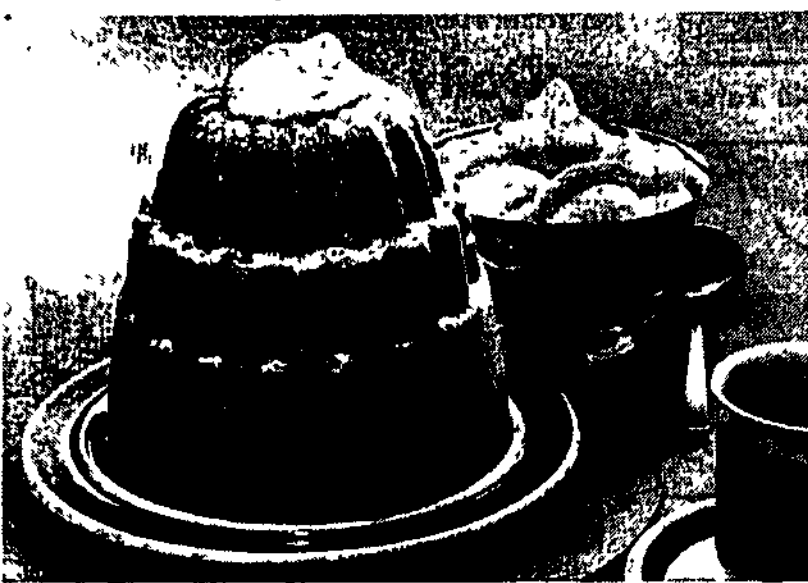

PATIO POTATOES: Prepare potatoes as for French fries, or use frozen French fries. Place enough to serve the crowd in center of large square of heavy duty foil.

Add minced onion, salt and pepper, snips of fresh dill or a sprinkling of the dried, and dot with butter. (Use less butter for frozen fries.) Close package loosely and place over a medium fire. Cook 30 to 40 minutes for fresh, about 25 minutes for frozen potatoes. To serve, turn back foil and place package in a serving basket. The potatoes will brown slightly throughout the foil.

To cook whole onions select medium to large white or yellow ones. Rinse, leave skins on, then place each on a square of heavy duty foil. Bring corners up over onions and twist together at top. Place on grill over medium fire and cook about 40 minutes. Open foil. Skin will push back easily. Add butter, salt and pepper. ZUCCHINI, TOMATOES and onions are a vegetable combination which can also be cooked in foil on the grill. Slice zucchini, cut peeled tomatoes in quarters and slice onions very thin. Combine enough for the number of people to be served on a large square of heavy duty foil. Season with salt, pepper, a few snips of garlic and basil. Dot with butter or margarine. Bring foil over vegetables and seal to make a tight package. Place on grill over medium fire about 30 minutes, turning once. This is also good made with summer squash.

Dilled summer squash can be prepared by slicing tender young squash in half-inch slices. Slice an onion very thin. Arrange squash and onion slices in center of a square of foil. Season with salt, pepper and snips of fresh dill or a generous sprinkling of the dried. Dot with butter. Seal package and cook over moderate heat, shaking occasionally, about 25 minutes.

Pudding in elegant form

Beautiful economical and easy to prepare desserts are the answer to many of the problems of entertaining during these days of spiraling costs. A simple entree and salad becomes party fare when topped off with something as glamorous as In-the-Pink Pudding. Make it well ahead of time and greet your guests relaxed in the assurance of a successful party.

IN-THE-PINK PUDDING

- 1 can (30 ounces) fruit cocktail
- 1 cup water
- 1 package (6 ounce) raspberry gelatin
- 1/4 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1/4 teaspoon ground cloves
- 1/8 teaspoon salt
- 3 eggs, separated
- 1/3 cup sugar

Whipped cream
Drain fruit cocktail syrup into top of double boiler. Combine with water, gelatin, spices and salt. Heat until gelatin is thoroughly dissolved. Beat egg yolks; combine with a little hot gelatin mixture. Add to mixture in double-boiler and cook, stirring constantly, until thoroughly heated. Remove from heat, stir in fruit cocktail, and chill until mixture mounds on spoon. Beat egg whites until foamy, add sugar gradually and beat until whites stand in soft peaks. Fold gelatin mixture into whites. Pour into 6-cup mold and chill until firm. Unmold and garnish with whipped cream. Makes 10 to 12 servings.

Cool salads star salmon

Swimming, boating, tennis and other summer activities require energy-giving foods, high in complete protein, while less in the calorie department.

Easy convenience foods can offer tempting and economical summer fare with necessary nutritional qualities. Canned salmon is one which combines perfectly with foods such as fresh vegetables, salad greens, fruit and dairy products. It lends flavor and color to sandwiches, salads and any number of warm weather specials.

Here are two of the many summertime economical meals found in a can of salmon that offer an abundance of good nutrition.

SALMON GRAPE SALAD

- 1 7½-ounce can salmon
- ½ cup broken walnut meats
- 1 cup green seedless grapes
- ¼ cup chopped celery
- 1 tablespoon mayonnaise
- 2 tablespoons salmon liquid from can
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 1/8 teaspoon pepper

Drain salmon, reserving liquid. Flake salmon. Combine with other ingredients. Chill thoroughly. Serve on a bed of crisp lettuce or romaine with additional mayonnaise. Garnish with watercress. Serves 2.

SALMON SALAD PLATTER

- 1 1-pound can salmon, drained
- Romaine or crisp lettuce
- ½ cup mayonnaise
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- ¼ teaspoon dry mustard
- 1 cucumber, peeled
- 1 large tomato, peeled and cut into wedges
- 2 hard-cooked eggs, quartered
- 1 tablespoon chopped parsley

Salt and freshly ground pepper

Separate salmon into chunks and arrange in center of a platter lined with romaine leaves. Combine mayonnaise, lemon juice and mustard and spread over salmon. Slice cucumber thinly. Arrange cucumber slices, tomato wedges and egg quarters around salmon. Sprinkle with parsley and salt and pepper. Serves 4.

Plentiful fruits

Abundant supplies of sweet cherries and fresh Bartlett pears are expected in major markets during the next several weeks, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture. (USDA).

Sweet cherries, mainly of the Bing variety, are available now in ample quantities in all major markets. This year's crop — mainly from California, Oregon and Washington — is estimated to be nearly double that of a year ago.

Shipments to market will peak this week, and cherries will continue to be available until early August, reports USDA.

Total production of fresh Bartlett pears in California, Oregon and Washington is forecast at 19 per cent above the production utilized last year.

Larger crops than last season are expected in all of the major producing states, although supplies in August will be coming chiefly from California.

Food budget guidelines in free USDA publication

A newly revised edition of a United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) publication, "Your Money's Worth in Food," is available free to consumers.

"Your Money's Worth in Food" provides a guideline on how much you might reasonably spend for food and offers a simple guide to planning well-balanced meals. A variety of tips for cutting food costs is also included.

Some of the features of the publication includes:

—A table showing the cost per serving of various cuts of meat when prices range from 40 cents to $1.80 a pound.

—A table that shows at what price chicken parts are a good buy in relation to the whole chicken.

—Costs of a serving of various cuts of meats and of foods you might use as alternates to meat in meals — dry beans, peanut butter, cheese and eggs, for example — using U.S. average and Washington, D.C. prices. Costs of milk — fresh (with and without part of the fat removed), canned and dried — are compared, too.

—Tables showing the cost of a serving of vegetables and fruits when the price of the fresh produce from which it's prepared ranges from 10 to 60 cents a pound.

—Sample lists of vegetables and fruits — fresh, canned and frozen — that cost less than six cents a serving and more than 12 cents a serving.

—A three-page table that makes it easy to find the cost per pound of food from containers of one to 48 ounces. (This table provides the same information as unit pricing.)

There are also ideas on planning menus and shopping lists that suit the budget, family's appetite and lifestyle.

Readers may obtain free copies of "Your Money's Worth in Food" from Office of Communication, USDA, Washington, D.C. 20250.

Waiting for the U.S. Mail

by BARRY SIGALE

Here is a mathematical problem to chew on along with that high-priced roast beef sandwich and costly glass of milk.

If more than 5 per cent of the population is not receiving its first class mail on time and literally thousands of persons are complaining of incredibly slow delivery, then why is it the U.S. Postal Service is intending to raise the cost of mailing a letter to 10 cents?

Before hearing the answer you better swallow first. You'd think that most of the estimated $1 billion raised would cover the cost of improving services, right? Apparently that's wrong.

ACCORDING TO Postmaster General E. T. Klassen, the newly independent postal service probably will ask the Postal Rate Commission in September for permission to raise the price of the 8 cent stamp to 10 cents beginning next year.

The money, said Klassen, primarily would be used to meet the rise in labor costs, which means meeting the needs of postal workers who have negotiated bigger and better wage and benefit contracts the last few years.

Since the new revenue would probably have little effect on productivity it is assumed the public is going to be paying a lot more than they are now with nothing gained in return. Nothing, that is, unless you work for the two-year-old postal service.

Standing in the way of this latest move by the highly controversial postal service is the U.S. Congress, armed with the approval of their beleaguered constituents, to head off additional price increases of any kind.

One of the most outspoken congressmen is U.S. Rep. Philip Crane, R-10th "Mr. Conservative," who has always fought for his idea that private industry can do a better job in areas where government is foundering. And the postal service, according to Crane and others, is foundering badly.

CITING THE fact that the 2 cent boost would be an increase of 25 per cent or 66 per cent over the last three years, a violation of the wage-price guidelines, Crane said:

"Such an increase would be unconscionable at a time when the federal government is imposing severe restrictions upon price increases in the private sector. It is incredible that the federal government itself should seriously be contemplating a 25 per cent price increase in a service vital to communications within our country.

"An increase in first class mail rates from 6 cents to 10 cents in three years," added Crane, "is hardly a record in which our government can be proud. It dwarfs the meat price increases which have recently been the topic of such debate."

Then Crane added what will amount to be the knockout blow if he has his way:

"It is clear that something is fundamentally wrong with the postal service when American citizens must pay more and more for less and less. The source of the trouble, of course, is the monopoly... in this case a government monopoly on (Continued on page 2)

Flood basin plan will go ahead despite cutback

by LYNN ASINOF

Plans for a five-acre retention basin in the Arlington Country Club apparently will not be seriously affected despite the fact that the Illinois General Assembly has failed to provide the needed $50,000 for the project.

A bill allocating funds for improvements to the Buffalo Creek-Wheeling Drainage Ditch was trimmed from $150,000 to $25,000 before passage by the House in the final days of its legislative session.

The bill as originally introduced would have provided $50,000 for the retention basin and $100,000 for needed channel improvements along the creek.

THE $25,000 approved by the state will leave finances for the retention basin $25,000 short of the estimated $230,000 needed for the project. It will also mean needed channel improvements will have to be delayed until more funds are available.

Buffalo Grove Village Mgr. Dan Larson said he was disappointed that the full $150,000 was not approved. He said, however, the reduced appropriation would not force the project to be dropped.

Larson said it is possible that the estimated cost of the basin will exceed its actual cost. He said he expected bids for the project to be considerably lower than the estimated figure because of recent cutbacks in construction contracts.

"Contractors are cutting their estimates," Larson said. "They are keeping their bids pretty close to cost so they can keep their crews together."

HE SAID if the bids on the contracts are less than the estimated figure, the money pledged by the village, state and Metropolitan Sanitary District (MSD) may be sufficient to finance the project.

Larson said that even if the bids are not lower than the estimated figure, money would be available either from the state motor fuel tax funds, the village or the MSD.

"For us, it's just a matter of taking other funds that are needed for the project, but that's just because this project has such a high priority," he said. "The economies are there to justify the increased cost for the village part of it."

Larson said construction of the basin will probably reduce the need for channel improvements along the creek. "We will be putting together another proposal for the channelization of the creek, and we would probably do this with the Village of Wheeling," he said.

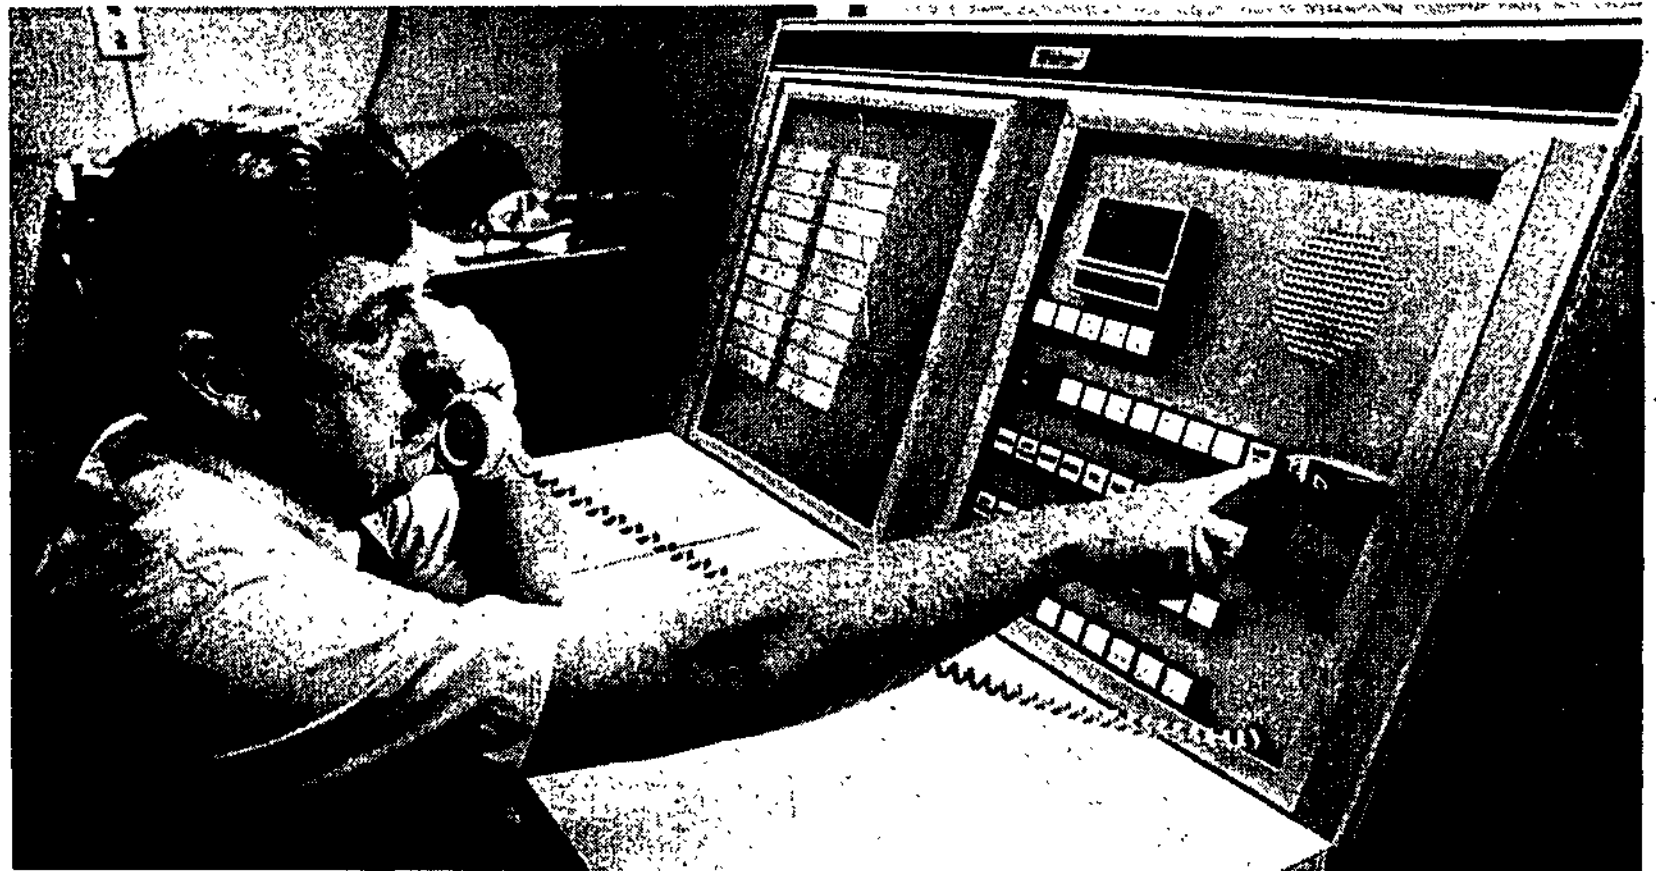

VILLAGE MGR. George Passolt said previously he expected opposition to the $150,000 appropriation. He said the governor had only allocated $25,000 for Buffalo Creek in his budget, and therefore felt this would be the amount finally approved.

Rep. John Porter, R-Evanston, House sponsor of the bill, had also indicated that either the legislature or the governor might trim the appropriation to $25,000.

Porter was unavailable to comment on why the bill was reduced to one-sixth its original amount when it came before the House.

Construction on the retention lake in the Arlington Country Club is scheduled to begin in October. An agreement was reached in May with the owners of the golf course and Buffalo Grove to allow construction.

The retention lake will have a capacity for 16 million gallons of water. It is designed to alleviate flooding in the White Pine Ditch, Buffalo Creek and the Wheeling Drainage Ditch.

USING THE ELECTRONIC "eyes" of a computer, School Dist. 21 personnel can watch for fires, vandalism and problems in the heating systems of the district's 17 schools and the administrative building. Bill Senne, administrative assistant in charge of operations, is seated at the master console of the system that will cost about $80,000 to set up.

Electronic surveillance system

'Big Brother' to guard area schools

by JILL BETTNER

The school is dark. There's no sign of movement in the building and the parking lot is deserted.

It's the perfect chance to get in the old "prison" and have a little fun, thinks the 15-year-old boy. Overturn a few desks, maybe, rummage through the rooms, break some windows.

But he better think twice before he tries it if the school is part of Dist. 21.

Big Brother is watching.

IN THIS CASE, Big Brother is an electronic monitoring system being installed in each of the district's 17 schools and the administration building.

Bill Senne, administrative assistant for operations, said the entire system is scheduled to be working sometime in September.

Dist. 21 serves Wheeling, Buffalo Grove, Arlington Heights and portions of unincorporated Prospect Heights.

Senne said the system, which is costing the district about $80,000 to install, consists of sensors to be placed in each building and monitored by a computer in the Dist. 21 administration building, 999 W. Dundee Rd. in Wheeling.

The sensors will detect heat, motion within the buildings and foul-ups in the heating systems. The problems will be relayed to the central computer by electronic impulses, triggering alarms in the operations office where the console is set up.

DEPENDING ON the problem, whoever is on duty at the central computer will contact the fire department, police or maintenance staff to correct the trouble. During the day, the computer will be operated by Senne and his assistants in the operations office. Custodians will run it (Continued on page 3)

Environmental panel votes no to sled hill

by JOE FRANZ

The idea of a sledding hill in the White Pine area has been voted down by the Buffalo Grove Environmental Control Commission.

By a 6-1 vote Tuesday night the commission instead recommended the village board go ahead with its original plan to develop the area into a park and wildlife preserve.

The idea of the sled hill was dropped after several residents raised objections. Several said they thought the hill would be hazardous to children playing on it. They said they feared children might slide off the hill and into the White Pine ditch.

One resident said it would probably be necessary to have constant adult supervision at the sled hill to prevent accidents.

A NUMBER OF residents said they were opposed to the hill because it would be usable only during winter. Since trees or shrubs probably would not be planted on the hill for safety reasons, they argued that the hill would be an eyesore when it was not in use. If the hill was bare, erosion could also be a problem, they said.

Jim Kowleski, 2 Beachwood Ct. East, said he feared motorcyclists and muni-bike riders might come to the area in summer to ride up and down the hill. This would create a hazard as well as a neighborhood nuisance, he said.

Comr. Herb Dorn, who represented the residents advocating the sled hill, said they hoped the hill in the White Pine area would replace the make-shift one next to Buffalo Grove High School. When construction of the school is complete, the hill will be eliminated.

The sled hill, as planned, would have been about 20 feet tall. Dorn said the slope of the slide would have been gradual, about a 15 degree angle.

Dorn said the extra dirt from the recent renovation of the White Pine ditch would have been used to build the hill. Using the soil there would be cheaper than hauling it away, he said.

THE WORK THAT has been done on the ditch includes grading the steep west bank of the ditch and using some of the excess soil to fill in the eroding east bank. In some places, erosion was so extensive that it threatened to consume backyards. Some residents said the high bank was a hazard to children playing in the area.

With the first phase of the project complete, the village will now plant grass and install drainage tiles to prevent erosion of the ditch from starting again.

In several years, the village plans to develop the area into a park and wildlife preserve. At its completion the area will be landscaped and will contain barbecue pits and picnic tables. Several residents said Tuesday they would not favor having barbecue pits in the area because they might attract persons from other communities.

Resident-builder meeting produces no solutions

by LYNN ASINOF

A meeting between residents of Haben Lane and Hollywood Builders ended without solving any of the problems caused by the developers' plans to close the old gravel road.

The meeting was called after residents learned that the developers of Chelsea Cove on McHenry Road planned to close their road to build more townhomes. If the road is closed, residents will lose their only access to public roads and become virtually landlocked.

Attorney Charles Salzman, representing Hollywood Builders, said Monday that his firm had thought all of the Haben Lane residents would have access to public roads from the rear of their property onto Whippletree Road.

Whippletree Road, however, is a private road of Whippletree Village, and therefore is not open to use by the four families on Haben Lane. Moreover, the residents said they did not want to build new drives to the rear of their property when they already have a road in front of their homes.

SALZMAN TOLD the residents that their position would cause serious problems for his company. "If you were to keep your road, it would cause serious financial hardships," he said. "We'd either have to move this or make a new layout or something."

The attorney suggested that the residents check with the Whippletree Village owner to see if he would grant them the right to use his road. "Perhaps they will give you all the rights of ingress and egress you need," he said. "Until we check out what the circumstances are in respect to Whippletree Road, we really can't do anything."

Attorney David S. Krause, representing the families on Haben Lane, said his clients would stand firm on their right to keep the road open. He said that by law any road that has been open to use by the public for more than 20 years is considered a public road.

According to residents, Haben Lane has been open for 40 years when the first residents moved into the area. They said the road was a cooperative effort of all the neighbors, and therefore the legal aspects of the road were never fully explored.

KRAUSE SAID his clients are not disputing the fact that Hollywood Builders owns the road. He said they are merely fighting to keep the road open.

According to Krause, the residents are also not willing to go along with a proposal to move the road back toward their homes 15 or 20 feet. He said this would place the road too close to the homes and virtually eliminate the residents' front yards.

Big Brother to be on guard

Besides trouble-shooting for problems within the schools, the computer also has a brain of its own that will indicate problems such as a power failure or difficulty in the monitoring system itself.

Senne added that the computer will also keep a printed log of all reported problems and when they are fixed.

"Over-all, I think the district will save a lot of money with it," Senne said of the monitoring system purchased from the Tempron Corp. in Wheeling.

SENNE SAID the motion sensors, designed to catch vandals, will be particularly valuable to the district because until now there has been no way of monitoring the buildings closely enough to prevent trouble.

"Vandalism is a continuing problem," Senne said. "The monitoring system should help us solve it to some extent. We know we can't completely eliminate it, but at least now when something happens, we'll know about it."

The new system will also save the district money by watching over the heating systems, Senne said. Previously, the district has paid custodians overtime wages to check the systems on weekends. Senne said the monitoring system will eliminate the necessity to do that, plus help correct problems that led to cold classrooms last winter.

All Illinois school districts are required by a law called the life safety code to meet certain standards for fire protection. The law was established by the state after a 1968 fire at Our Lady of the Angels School in Chicago where 95 children died.

LIFE SAFETY code work is financed from a five cents per $100 assessed valuation levy of all property within the boundaries of each school district.

Robert Hayes, assistant superintendent of Cook County schools, is responsible for enforcing the life safety code in Cook County. He personally inspects each school before a letter of compliance with the life safety code is issued.

"We had to set up a system to monitor the fire alarms in the building under the life safety code anyway," Senne said. "With the one we're putting in, we're doing that plus getting these other things."

CARNIVAL-GOERS are swinging out this week at the Wheeling Jaycees annual carnival at the Wickes Furniture parking lot on Dundee Road. The carnival, which began Tuesday, will be open from 6 p.m. to midnight through Sunday. The festivities feature rides, games, pizza and a new beer concession. All proceeds will be used to finance Jaycee community projects.

Traffic study group seeks to 'stay a step ahead'

by JEANNETTE DE WYZE

Growing suburbs mean more people, more industry and always more traffic. Keeping up with the growing traffic needs involves the hairy problem of trying to stay one step ahead of the times.

The Chicago Area Traffic Study, the agency primarily responsible for long-range transportation planning in the Chicago metropolitan area, estimates a 40 to 80 per cent increase in traffic volume in the Wheeling and Buffalo Grove area by 1995. The 40 per cent estimate assumes that no new freeways will be added to the area, while traffic volume may increase by as much as 80 per cent if freeways are developed.

Beyond the estimates for long-range increases in traffic volume, the decisions as to what roads must be improved to accommodate growing needs falls into the hands of state, county and local officials and are based on a number of factors.

TALKING ABOUT the traffic demands need is indicated for it in the future, Larson said, "I like to feel that the village is ahead of projected traffic needs now."

Larson said that with the improvements that have been made on Arlington Heights and Buffalo Grove roads, and with the widening of Ill. Rte. 83 to four lanes, the village now has a good north-south transportation system.

As far as the east-west system goes, the village will begin the extension of Bush Road to Deerfield Road this fall. Bush Road will also be widened to four lanes and may be further widened if a need is indicated for it in the future, Larson said.

RTE 22 IS A major thoroughfare for the village in the north and Dundee Road, in the south, is now being widened and improved and should be completed by June, 1974.

Although Larson said Dundee Road will still be "heavily congested" even after the improvements are completed, he said if Lake Cook Road is extended through the village to Rand Road it should help to relieve some of the traffic.

"With those four major roads the village should have a good east-west road system," he said.

However, Louis Quinlan, of the Cook County Department of Transportation says problems have developed with the extension of Lake-Cook Road. While the extension was originally scheduled to begin in 1974, Quinlan said the county has had trouble obtaining the right of way for the extension in Highland Park and Deerfield. Thus, the extension may not begin until 1975 or 1976, he said.

"DUNDEE ROAD will not become inoperative within the next five years. It only will become inoperative if there is not relief on Lake-Cook Road and hopefully we'll get that in time," he said.

Wheeling is also looking to the extension of Lake-Cook Road to provide some relief to traffic on Dundee, Village Mgr. George Passolt said.

"We're having a real population explosion out here and of course that causes problems for traffic," he said.

Dundee Road is the major traffic problem area in Wheeling, according to Wheeling Police Lt. Ronald Nelson. Nelson said that while the widening will help move the flow of traffic on some parts of the road, many problems on Dundee Road still will not be alleviated.

These include trouble spots where traffic turns on and off the road to get to business establishments. Nelson said although the problem is being considered now, no real solutions have been proposed to correct it.

McHenry Road in the north part of the village is also a problem area, Nelson said. As developments are built near the road there are likely to be more children around and with the 55 miles per hour speed limits more accidents may result, he said.

"WE'RE NEGOTIATING now to get school buses to pull into the subdivisions along there or to lower the speed limit," he said.

"Schoenbeck and Dundee has also been a real thorn in our side," he said, adding that traffic lights are now scheduled for the intersection.

The village is now extending and widening Wheeling Road to provide another good crosstown road. While Nelson said Hintz Road was resurfaced there have been little or no traffic problems on it. Passolt foresees the eventual widening of it to accommodate heavier traffic demands.

Passolt said the village will have to develop future accommodations for increased traffic flow as the problem areas become more defined.

LARSON INDICATED that Buffalo Grove is also looking to other transportation systems to relieve traffic problems. The village is now studying the possibility of a bus service and is talking with the Sioux Railroad line about the possibility of developing a commuter line for the village in the future.

He said the village is planning to meet the anticipated needs of the community so that when they materialize, "we'll be with them or ahead of them."

"everyday"

interest. That's pretty special. But there's more. That daily interest is compounded daily. Paid quarterly. So you can deposit when you like. Withdraw when you need to. Never lose interest provided you maintain $25 or more in your account at the end of the quarter. In fact, you even gain. All money deposited by the 10th earns from the 1st ... if you leave it on deposit until the end of the calendar quarter. Sounds interesting? But what does "everyday" interest mean in dollars and cents? It means that our 5% passbook interest actually earns more when compounded every day the First Federal Savings way. It makes a difference.

Waiting for the U.S. Mail

by BARRY SIGALE

Here is a mathematical problem to chew on along with that high-priced roast beef sandwich and costly glass of milk.

If more than 5 per cent of the population is not receiving its first class mail on time and literally thousands of persons are complaining of incredibly slow delivery, then why is it the U.S. Postal Service is intending to raise the cost of mailing a letter to 10 cents?

Before hearing the answer you better swallow first. You'd think that most of the estimated $1 billion raised would cover the cost of improving services, right? Apparently that's wrong.

ACCORDING TO Postmaster General E. T. Klassen, the newly independent postal service probably will ask the Postal Rate Commission in September for permission to raise the price of the 8 cent stamp to 10 cents beginning next year.

The money, said Klassen, primarily would be used to meet the rise in labor costs, which means meeting the needs of postal workers who have negotiated bigger and better wage and benefit contracts the last few years.

Since the new revenue would probably have little effect on productivity it is assumed the public is going to be paying a lot more than they are now with nothing gained in return. Nothing, that is, unless you work for the two-year-old postal service.

Standing in the way of this latest move by the highly controversial postal service is the U.S. Congress, armed with the approval of their beleaguered constituents, to head off additional price increases of any kind.

One of the most outspoken congressmen is U.S. Rep. Philip Crane, R-10th "Mr. Conservative," who has always fought for his idea that private industry can do a better job in areas where government is floundering. And the postal service, according to Crane and others, is floundering badly.

CITING THE fact that the 2 cent boost would be an increase of 25 per cent or 66 per cent over the last three years, a violation of the wage-price guidelines, Crane said:

"Such an increase would be unconscionable at a time when the federal government is imposing severe restrictions upon price increases in the private sector. It is incredible that the federal government itself should seriously be contemplating a 25 per cent price increase in a service vital to communications within our country.

"An increase in first class mail rates from 6 cents to 10 cents in three years," added Crane, "is hardly a record in which our government can be proud. It dwarfs the meat price increases which have recently been the topic of such debate."

Then Crane added what will amount to be the knockout blow if he has his way:

"It is clear that something is fundamentally wrong with the postal service when American citizens must pay more and more for less and less. The source of the trouble, of course, is the monopoly... In this case a government monopoly on (Continued on page 2)

Flood basin plan will go ahead despite cutback

by LYNN ASINOF

Plans for a five-acre retention basin in the Arlington Country Club apparently will not be seriously affected despite the fact that the Illinois General Assembly has failed to provide the needed $50,000 for the project.

A bill allocating funds for improvements to the Buffalo Creek-Wheeling Drainage Ditch was trimmed from $150,000 to $25,000 before passage by the House in the final days of its legislative session.

The bill as originally introduced would have provided $50,000 for the retention basin and $100,000 for needed channel improvements along the creek.

THE $25,000 approved by the state will leave finances for the retention basin $25,000 short of the estimated $230,000 needed for the project. It will also mean needed channel improvements will have to be delayed until more funds are available.

Buffalo Grove Village Mgr. Dan Larson said he was disappointed that the full $150,000 was not approved. He said, however, the reduced appropriation would not force the project to be dropped.

Larson said it is possible that the estimated cost of the basin will exceed its actual cost. He said he expected bids for the project to be considerably lower than the estimated figure because of recent cutbacks in construction contracts.

"Contractors are cutting their estimates," Larson said. "They are keeping their bids pretty close to cost so they can keep their crews together."

HE SAID if the bids on the contracts are less than the estimated figure, the money pledged by the village, state and Metropolitan Sanitary District (MSD) may be sufficient to finance the project.

Larson said that even if the bids are not lower than the estimated figure, money would be available either from the state motor fuel tax funds, the village or the MSD.

"For us, it's just a matter of taking other funds that are needed for the project, but that's just because this project has such a high priority," he said. "The economies are there to justify the increased cost for the village part of it."

Larson said construction of the basin will probably reduce the need for channel improvements along the creek. "We will be putting together another proposal for the channelization of the creek, and we would probably do this with the Village of Wheeling," he said.

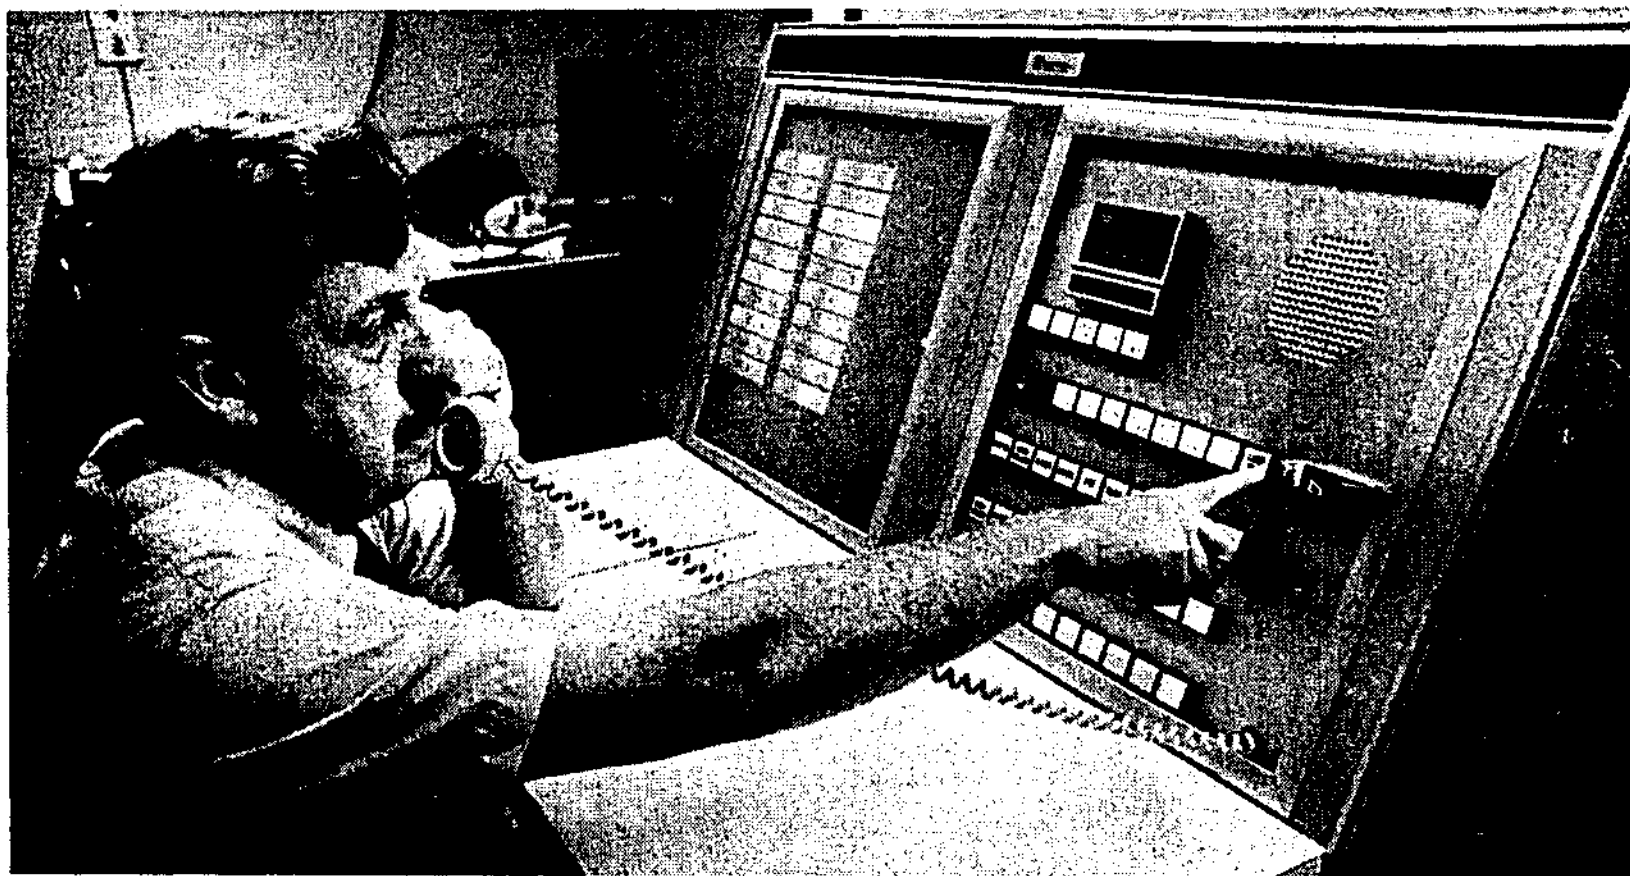

VILLAGE MGR. George Passolt said previously he expected opposition to the $150,000 appropriation. He said the governor had only allocated $25,000 for Buffalo Creek in his budget, and therefore felt this would be the amount finally approved.

Rep. John Porter, R-Evanston, House sponsor of the bill, had also indicated that either the legislature or the governor might trim the appropriation to $25,000.

Porter was unavailable to comment on why the bill was reduced to one-sixth its original amount when it came before the House.

Construction on the retention lake in the Arlington Country Club is scheduled to begin in October. An agreement was reached in May with the owners of the golf course and Buffalo Grove to allow construction.

The retention lake will have a capacity for 16 million gallons of water. It is designed to alleviate flooding in the White Pine Ditch, Buffalo Creek and the Wheeling Drainage Ditch.

USING THE ELECTRONIC "eyes" of a computer, School Dist. 21 personnel can watch for fires, vandalism and problems in the heating systems of the district's 17 schools and the administrative building. Bill Senne, administrative assistant in charge of operations, is seated at the master console of the system that will cost about $80,000 to set up.

Electronic surveillance system

'Big Brother' to guard area schools

by JILL BETTNER

The school is dark. There's no sign of movement in the building and the parking lot is deserted.

It's the perfect chance to get in the old "prison" and have a little fun, thinks the 15-year-old boy. Overturn a few desks, maybe, rummage through the rooms, break some windows.

But he better think twice before he tries it if the school is part of Dist. 21.

Big Brother is watching.

IN THIS CASE, Big Brother is an electronic monitoring system being installed in each of the district's 17 schools and the administration building.

Bill Senne, administrative assistant for operations, said the entire system is scheduled to be working sometime in September.

Dist. 21 serves Wheeling, Buffalo Grove, Arlington Heights and portions of unincorporated Prospect Heights.

Senne said the system, which is costing the district about $80,000 to install, consists of sensors to be placed in each building and monitored by a computer in the Dist. 21 administration building, 999 W. Dundee Rd. in Wheeling.

The sensors will detect heat, motion within the buildings and foul-ups in the heating systems. The problems will be relayed to the central computer by electronic impulses, triggering alarms in the operations office where the console is set up.

DEPENDENT ON the problem, whoever is on duty at the central computer will contact the fire department, police or maintenance staff to correct the trouble. During the day, the computer will be operated by Senne and his assistants in the operations office. Custodians will run it (Continued on page 3)

The sun came shining through for celebrations

by FRED GACA

The sun shone on yesterday's Lions Club Fourth of July celebration — and every Lion gave a sign of relief.

Club members had feared the early morning thunderstorm that swept the area yesterday would wash out the carnival. The weather cleared by mid-morning and by noon, when the carnival started, the sun was out and Lions Park had dried off.

The only "casualty" of the day were the Boys Baseball All-Star Games. Playing fields were soaked, but about 20 men from the organization used shovels, rakes, brooms and loads of dirt to dry the fields. Officials hoped the games could be started later in the day.

ELK GROVE Village may be less than 20 years old, and yesterday may have been only the 10th annual Fourth of July celebration sponsored by the Lions, but the day was a copy of any decades-old carnival in Smalltown U.S.A.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars opened the celebration by posting the flag with the VFW color guard firing a three-volley salute.

A group of young children did not quite maintain the dignity of the ceremony as they scrambled for the spent cartridges ejected from the rifles.

Although it was the Lions Club who sponsored the celebration, many of the other village clubs and organizations set up booths or sponsored rides. Boys Baseball, Elk Grove Village Jaycees, Community Masque and Staff, Lions Ladies, Alexian Brothers Medical Center and the Community Blood Program were all represented.

THE MOST popular attractions, at least for the kids, were the pony rides and the horse-drawn cart sponsored by the Elk Grove Industrial Lions Club. Youngsters were lined up for the two attractions.

Lions Pres. Tom Wienckowski said he expected up to 10,000 persons at the carnival, many of them coming late in the day and staying for the fireworks display.

The three $50 college scholarships, donated by the Lions Club to Elk Grove High School graduates were presented last night. Scholarship winners were: Rosemary Gnananis, 1227 Berkenshire; Robert Winsor, 237 Wildwood, and Joseph Sica, 48 Ridgewood.

The day's events were to include: demonstrations by the village police and fire departments, bingo, a park district water carnival and a sing-a-long.

SPLISH, SPLASH, Dick Gore will be taking a bath when the little fellow who uses a big windup tank. The tank was one of the attractions at the day-long Elk Grove Village Lions Club Fourth of July celebration in Lions Park.

New budget 15% higher; police, firemen added

Approval of the new 1973-74 fiscal year budget and a wide range of personnel matters were the main actions in Tuesday's village board meeting.

The board unanimously adopted the $3.1 million dollar budget for the new fiscal year. The new budget is approximately 15 per cent larger than last year's.

Trustee Ronald Chernick, budget committee chairman, said the budget was a balanced one that had been prepared by the village manager. The committee reviewed the proposed budget during the past two months.

As in past years, most of the village's funds were appropriated for the police and fire departments. The manager had recommended just over 25 per cent of the budget for each of the two departments.

THE RECOMMENDATION for the fire department was $882,000; for the police department, $877,000 was recommended.

The police department staff was increased by six patrolmen, bringing the department to a total force of 40 men. The fire department was increased by four firefighters, bringing the total department to 56 men.

The personnel actions taken by the board covered salary schedules, fringe benefits and increased vacation time for village employees.

PERSONNEL RECEIVED a 5.5 per cent salary increase and new salary schedules were adopted for the fire-prevention bureau, crossing guards and public works personnel.

A new overtime pay rate for supervisors and fire and police department personnel was to have been approved Tuesday, but Manager Charles Willis asked that the schedule be postponed until next week. He said there were some "disputes" over the schedule that required more time to settle.

An increase in vacation for long-time village employees was also approved at the meeting. Persons with 15 years experience will now get 20 working days (four weeks) vacation instead of 15 days (three weeks). Persons with 25 years experience will receive 25 working days (five weeks) vacation instead of 20 days.

Village employees also received two additional "floating holidays." These holidays, in addition to the regular seven annual village holidays, may be taken at the convenience of the employee.

NONE OF THESE BOTTLES is for sale. They are different types of beer bottles. Hauser, who has been collecting for about six years, has bottles from 26 states and 24 foreign countries and he is still looking for more bottles to add to the set.

Devon-53 will be reviewed by planners

The proposed Devon-53 housing project will be reviewed at tonight's meeting of the Elk Grove Village plan commission. Chairman William Shannon said, however, no recommendation is expected to be made at the meeting.

The commission will meet at 8 p.m. in the village hall, 901 Wellington Ave.

Shannon said, "I don't want to hostile that (Devon-53) through at the meeting." He said the commission will study the transcripts of the public hearings on the project and other information tonight.

Shannon expects the commission will make a recommendation at its next meeting in two weeks. "I would like to defer any recommendation to the next meeting," he said.

The Devon-53 development consists of three large sections, near the intersection of Devon Avenue and Ill. Rte. 53, totaling 267 acres, that are to be built by several developers. When completed, the project would have 6,402 living units with an estimated population of 13,000.

THE PROPERTY now is outside the village limits and the developers are petitioning for a pre-annexation agreement.

A recommendation on accepting the pre-annexation must be made by the plan commission and given to the village board. The board would then make the final decision on possible annexation.

The proposed project is a very controversial one in the village. At the second and last public hearing on the project, held last month, a citizens group presented a petition with over 1,300 signatures demanding that approval for the project be done by referendum, not village board action.

Also scheduled on the plan commission's agenda tonight is final approval of Section 19 of the Vale Tract development west of Rte. 53 and another review of the proposed 450,000-square-foot factory at Higgins and Busse roads.

Got a 'Monarch'?

He collects beer bottles — empty ones

by FRED GACA

If you have a bottle of "Monarch Beer," empty or full, Ed Hauser would like to make you a deal.

If you have a bottle of "Bucket of Blood" or "Super John's Private Stock," don't bother seeing him — he already has those bottles.

Hauser is a beer bottle collector. His 411-bottle collection, gathered over the past six years, is on display in the liquor section of his drug store, Elk Grove Drugs, in the Park 'N Shop center, Arlington Heights and Higgins roads.

The bottles in the collection represent some 28 different states and 24 foreign countries. The farthest away any bottle has come from is a brand brewed in New Zealand.

HAUSER DOES not care how old a bottle is. He simply wants to have as many different kinds of beer bottles as possible. He collects not only different brand names, but also different bottles used by a single brewery.

The collection, which includes bottles going back to World War I days, does represent some history. For example, Hauser has 18 different brands produced by Chicago breweries. Today, only one brewery still exists in the city.

History can actually be traced through the bottles. Hauser has several "Old Style" bottles that show the different labels used by the company through the years.

Some of the brand names are unusual, almost unheard of. "Bucket of Blood" brewed in Nevada and "Super John's Private Stock" are two of Hauser's favorite brand names. Other little known names include "Arrowhead," "Rolling Rock," "Old Timer" and "Genesee."

HAUSER COLLECTS the bottles in a variety of ways. He has only collected about 35 bottles personally. The rest have been brought in by friends, customers and beer-truck drivers who know about his hobby.

Some bottles were obtained through other collectors in the area.

One of his friends is an airline pilot who travels around the world. The pilot has brought back several bottles from far-away places.

On one occasion, a woman was in the store and asked Hauser if he had a bottle of "Bub's," a beer brewed in Wisconsin. He said he did not have one in his collection, so the next time the woman went to Wisconsin, she brought him back a bottle.

A few of the bottles in the collection are still capped and filled. Hauser will never open them, however, because the beer has soured and become "skunky." He said if one of the bottles was opened the smell would drive you out of the store.

Hauser collects the bottles as a private hobby. He said there is a bottle club in Chicago, but the members are interested in old bottles as historical items. He is just interested in beer bottles.

HIE SAID THERE is a beer bottle collectors club based in the New England area, but the club is too formally organized for him. "They want the $5 dues and all the other stuff that goes with it," he said.

As big as his collection is, Hauser is still looking for more bottles. He knows of a "Monarch" beer that was made in Chicago, but he has never been able to find a bottle.

He also would like to get bottles from more than just the 26 states he now has, especially from the western states, which are poorly represented in his collection.

The present collection almost fills the available shelf space in the store, so Hauser is planning to do what any good collector would think of — adding more shelves.

Hauser has no idea what the collection is worth and said it is hard to estimate its value because only another collector would want it. "If you weren't a collector, you wouldn't give me $5 for it," he said.

Even if another collector offered to buy the collection, Hauser probably would not sell. "It gives the place individuality, sets you apart. I guess that's what it is all about," he said.

First Federal Savings offers all its passbook savers everyday interest on every dollar every day it's on deposit with us.

"everyday"

Interest. That's pretty special. But there's more. That daily interest is compounded daily. Paid quarterly. So you can deposit when you like. Withdraw when you need to. Never lose interest provided you maintain $25 or more in your account at the end of the quarter. In fact, you even gain. All money deposited by the 10th earns from the 1st ... If you leave it on deposit until the end of the calendar quarter. Sounds interesting? But what does "everyday" interest mean in dollars and cents? It means that our 5% passbook interest actually earns more when compounded every day the First Federal Savings way. It makes a difference.

Waiting for the U.S. Mail

by BARRY SIGALE

Here is a mathematical problem to chew on along with that high-priced roast beef sandwich and costly glass of milk.

If more than 5 per cent of the population is not receiving its first class mail on time and literally thousands of persons are complaining of incredibly slow delivery, then why is it the U.S. Postal Service is intending to raise the cost of mailing a letter to 10 cents?

Before hearing the answer you better swallow first. You'd think that most of the estimated $1 billion raised would cover the cost of improving services, right? Apparently that's wrong.

ACCORDING TO Postmaster General E. T. Klassen, the newly independent postal service probably will ask the Postal Rate Commission in September for permission to raise the price of the a cent stamp to 10 cents beginning next year.

The money, said Klassen, primarily would be used to meet the rise in labor costs, which means meeting the needs of postal workers who have negotiated bigger and better wage and benefit contracts the last few years.

Since the new revenue would probably have little effect on productivity it is assumed the public is going to be paying a lot more than they are now with nothing gained in return. Nothing, that is, unless you work for the two-year-old postal service.

Standing in the way of this latest move by the highly controversial postal service is the U.S. Congress, armed with the approval of their beleaguered constituents, to head off additional price increases of any kind.

One of the most outspoken congressmen is U.S. Rep. Philip Crane, R-10th "Mr. Conservative," who has always fought for his idea that private industry can do a better job in areas where government is foundering. And the postal service, according to Crane and others, is foundering badly.

CITING THE fact that the 2 cent boost would be an increase of 25 per cent or 66 per cent over the last three years, a violation of the wage-price guidelines, Crane said:

"Such an increase would be unconscionable at a time when the federal government is imposing severe restrictions upon price increases in the private sector. It is incredible that the federal government itself should seriously be contemplating a 25 per cent price increase in a service vital to communications within our country.

"An increase in first class mail rates from 6 cents to 10 cents in three years," added Crane, "is hardly a record in which our government can be proud. It dwarfs the meat price increases which have recently been the topic of such debate."

Then Crane added what will amount to be the knockout blow if he has his way:

"It is clear that something is fundamentally wrong with the postal service when American citizens must pay more and more for less and less. The source of the trouble, of course, is the monopoly... in this case a government monopoly on

Rep. Crane calls for U.S. return to 'Godly society'

U.S. Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-12th, called for the people of Palatine and the rest of the country yesterday to get back to the "Godly society" intended for the United States by its Founding Fathers.

Speaking at Palatine's Fourth of July celebration, Crane predicted the "rise and fall of the American Republic" if citizens don't quit overemphasizing material values and ignoring the religious ones.

"It is time for all Americans to go back and rededicate themselves to the objectives our Founding Fathers had," Crane told the people standing around the temporary grandstand.

THE FOUNDING Fathers, Crane said, "thought they were creating the first truly Godly society in the history of mankind," by following the Bible's First Commandment.

The American government was created to "make us more secure in our possession of these rights" guaranteed in the Constitution, Crane said, adding that Americans have historically solved their own problems.

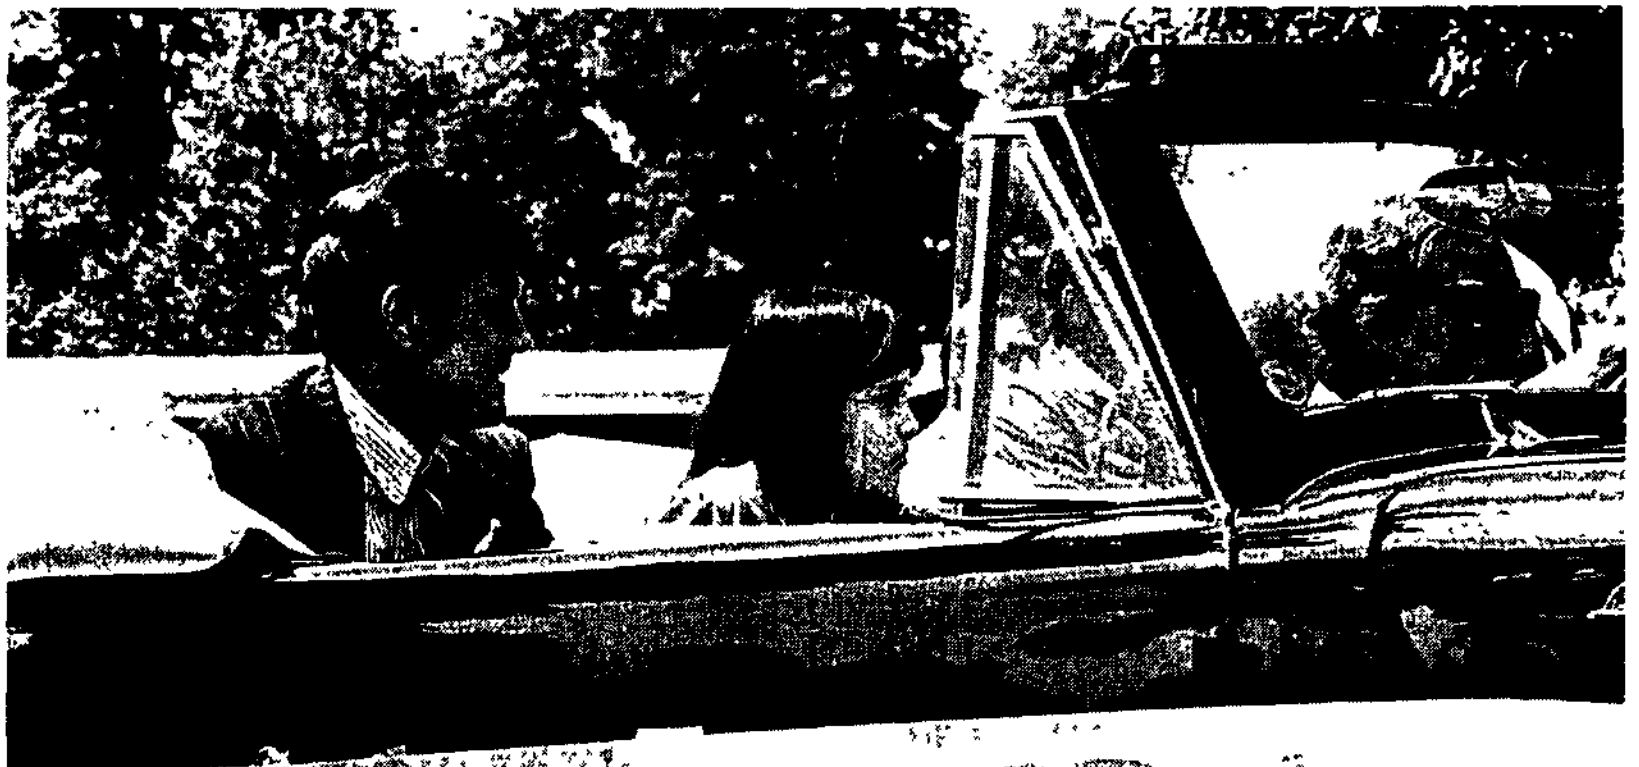

"We've been inclined to put undue faith in the government," Crane charged.

The congressman touched on major political problems plaguing the country, but did not elaborate on the issues of the Watergate break-in, world money crisis or other international and domestic problems.

INSTEAD, HE TOLD his listeners that when a Godly society is created, a natural by-product is material wealth, or "the American way of life." The first concern should be on religious aspects of life, with less emphasis on the materialistic values of Americans today, according to Crane.

He hit the current economic controls saying they were being determined "mostly by the expediency of the moment." But generally, the congressman stayed away from hot political issues on this balmy July holiday.

As he explained at the start of his speech, "All of us are a little bit weary of politics."

PHILLIP M. CRANE

JUDY RUBIN had a special vantage point yesterday, as she got the spotlight by riding in Palatine's Fourth of July celebration next to grand marshal U.S. Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-12th. Crane and Miss Rubin, a 13-year-old Plum Grove School student, were the featured speakers at the celebration yesterday.

Miss Rubin won the local essay contest on "What the Flag Means to Me."

Lightning hits Palatine home; damage minor

Lightning struck the John Carroll home, 1046 Grissom Dr., in Palatine yesterday morning causing minor damage.

The lightning hit at about 7 a.m., according to Palatine firemen who said damage was contained to insulation in the building. There was no estimate of damage but fire officials called it minor.

An early morning storm swept through the area at about 6 a.m. with heavy rains and some lightning. There was no other storm damage reported by Palatine residents.

County approves plans for 15 homes, shopping area

Rezoning to allow a row of single-family homes and a small shopping area were approved recently by the Cook County Board of Commissioners for northern Palatine Township.

Fifteen homes ranging in value from $35,000 to $75,000 will be constructed on Cunningham Drive between Staples Road and Plum Grove Road, south of the English Valley subdivision.

Jerome J. Elrod, builder of the development, described houses as "big, colonial homes." Elrod requested and received the variation to the zoning, allowing him to have more narrow lots fronting on Cunningham.

Zoning for a small shopping area was also granted, for a White Hen Pantry grocery store, a dry cleaners, boutique and small card shop near the intersection of Rand Road and Ill. Rte. 33.

The shops will be built facing the frontage road, northwest of Wilke Road and northeast of Rand Road. Builders of the shopping area are Able Construction Co. and holders of a trust with First Bank & Trust Co., Chicago.

She took her husband's plane away

by PAT GERLACH

After 25 years of marriage, Shirley Kelme threatened her husband.

"Dale, if you buy another airplane, I'm going to learn to fly and take it away from you," she promised with vehemence.

That was three years ago. Today, Dale Kelme considers himself lucky if he doesn't have to make an appointment to use their four-place Beech Bonanza.

Ordinarily, a caper of this magnitude would be quite an accomplishment for any woman. But Shirley is quite accustomed to achieving the unusual.

Since January, she has enjoyed the unique position of being the only woman insurance premium auditor in the midwest. As an independent contractor for White & White, of Arlington Heights, Shirley averages 35 audits per week in Chicago and suburban firms. Her work deals exclusively with commercial policies written on estimated sales of the companies involved.

BEFORE GOING into business for herself, Shirley worked as office supervisor at J. C. Penney & Co., Woodfield, and has earlier experience as a staff accountant for Combined Insurance of America. Years of training field men for Harford and Century insurance companies have also provided an excellent background for the job Shirley loves — almost as much as flying.

"I wish I had taken that plunge years ago instead of spending 25 years really not knowing what was going on," she commented.

But it really all started when Shirley returned from a two-week vacation in Alaska in 1970 to discover Dale, once again had been bitten by the "new airplane-itis" bug. After their initial confrontation over "another airplane," Shirley tells of Dale abruptly leaving the house.

"But he was back in an hour with a slip for my first lesson at a flight school at Schaumburg Airport," she explained.

AFTER 11 HOURS of instruction, Shirley soloed and soon won her private pilot's license. Now, with 200-plus hours of flying time, she has begun work on an instrument license in order to be able to fly in all kinds of weather.

Shirley and Dale, a maintenance manager for three Bolt Master Corporation plants in Elk Grove Village, have taken the Beech Bonanza to Jasper, Texas, Columbus, Ohio and are planning a jaunt to Albuquerque, New Mexico.

But they joke about the shorter trips. "Dale loves to tease me about having coffee in Memphis while I'm at work," Shirley says.

Both native Chicagoans, Shirley and Dale make no secret of the reason they chose to move to Schaumburg five years ago.

"BECAUSE OF Schaumburg Airport, and that's no joke. We wanted to live somewhere close to an airport because we own a plane and want to use it frequently," they both agree.

Since her introduction to aviation, Shirley has become an interested and active member of the Greater Chicago chapter of the Ninety-Nines, a group of about 150 women pilots.

She thinks of the Ninety-Nines as "a fun group who also get together to improve efficiency and safety in flying" and has high praise for their scholarship and mercy flight programs.

But Shirley has also become active in Schaumburg Airport Boosters, a newly-formed local group of pilots and others interested in general aviation, and serves as their secretary-treasurer.

She looks at the Boosters as an organization "working together for the good of the airport and the community."

SHIRLEY FAVORS the idea of a municipal airport in Schaumburg for many reasons.

"It would be a better airport because we would get more needed facilities but I think the most important thing would be the ability to control the type and size of planes permitted to land at Schaumburg," she believes.

That control, according to Shirley, is as important to pilots using the airport as it is to the community at large.

"It is only when you fly a plane yourself that you achieve a marvelous sense of accomplishment — a pure enjoyment, because then you really know what's going on," the accountant-pilot claims.

And at that rate, she may just go on to become an instructor.

Snoopy contest to be July 14

Kids and dogs will run the show July 14, when Snoopy's All-Star Contest at the Palatine Park District will decide the area's most talented canines.

The show starts at 10 a.m. in Community Park, 262 E. Palatine Rd., and entry blanks are available there now. They must be returned to the office or to the registration booth 30 minutes before the show.

Awards will be given for dogs with the best costume, best trick, smallest dog, largest, hairiest, best-groomed and for the liveliest puppy.

Youths entering their dogs must be 18 or younger, and must keep their dogs on a leash and under control during the contest. Dogs must be clean, combed and brushed. Dogs entered in the smallest dog contest must be older than six months.

Contestants and their owners must be at the show grounds by 9:30 a.m. on the morning of the event.

Waiting for the U.S. Mail

by BARRY SIGALE

Here is a mathematical problem to chew on along with that high-priced roast beef sandwich and costly glass of milk.

If more than 5 per cent of the population is not receiving its first class mail on time and literally thousands of persons are complaining of incredibly slow delivery, then why is it the U.S. Postal Service is intending to raise the cost of mailing a letter to 10 cents?

Before hearing the answer you better swallow first. You'd think that most of the estimated $1 billion raised would cover the cost of improving services, right? Apparently that's wrong.

ACCORDING TO Postmaster General E. T. Klassen, the newly independent postal service probably will ask the Postal Rate Commission in September for permission to raise the price of the 8 cent stamp to 10 cents beginning next year.

The money, said Klassen, primarily would be used to meet the rise in labor costs, which means meeting the needs of postal workers who have negotiated bigger and better wage and benefit contracts the last few years.

Since the new revenue would probably have little effect on productivity it is assumed the public is going to be paying a lot more than they are now with nothing gained in return. Nothing, that is, unless you work for the two-year-old postal service.

Standing in the way of this latest move by the highly controversial postal service is the U.S. Congress, armed with the approval of their beleaguered constituents, to head off additional price increases of any kind.

One of the most outspoken congressmen is U.S. Rep. Philip Crane, R-10th "Mr. Conservative," who has always fought for his idea that private industry can do a better job in areas where government is foundering. And the postal service, according to Crane and others, is foundering badly.

CITING THE fact that the 2 cent boost would be an increase of 25 per cent or 86 per cent over the last three years, a violation of the wage-price guidelines, Crane said:

"Such an increase would be unconscionable at a time when the federal government is imposing severe restrictions upon price increases in the private sector. It is incredible that the federal government itself should seriously be contemplating a 25 per cent price increase in a service vital to communications within our country.

"An increase in first class mail rates from 6 cents to 10 cents in three years," added Crane, "is hardly a record in which our government can be proud. It dwarfs the meat price increases which have recently been the topic of such debate."

Then Crane added what will amount to be the knockout blow if he has his way:

"It is clear that something is fundamentally wrong with the postal service when American citizens must pay more and more for less and less. The source of the trouble, of course, is the monopoly... in this case a government monopoly on

Mrs. Macdonald key speaker

Our 'happy birthday': Rolling Meadows celebrates 4th

by Doug Ray

The loudspeaker didn't work very well, and State Rep. Virginia Macdonald labored to lift her voice above the buzzing of the crowd.

The mile-long parade had just ended and participants and as many as a thousand persons ringed the flat bed truck that was adorned in red, white and blue. They listened to the newly-elected state representative from Arlington Heights make the Independence Day speech at the parking lot of the Rolling Meadows Shopping Center.

It was the morning phase of the city-wide celebration that would last into the night with a giant fireworks display in Kimball Hill Park.

THERE WAS something for everyone.

And as most residents didn't work yesterday most took part in at least one of the events, ranging from a cavalry display by the Army to games in the parks during the afternoon.

It was a day for the individual — the do as you please holiday — that fell in the midst of the week so many stayed in town and celebrated with neighbors and friends.

ON THIS CLOUDY and humid day, Mrs. Macdonald talked about the individual and his role in government and the independence each voter possesses.

She spoke only for a short time, leaning directly upon her point — if you're disappointed in government, it's your job

'Kid's World' tops annual 4th of July parade

by JERRY THOMAS

Kids and their pets stole the show during the annual Fourth of July celebration in Hoffman Estates sponsored by the Schaumburg Township Independence Day committee.

How can you top a tissue paper float complete with a cute little red haired youngster puffing and energetically pumping her decorated tricycle down the parade route, or a duck named Brandy with a bow in its head feathers?

"It's a Kid's World," was the theme for the annual Fourth of July parade and all day celebration in Hoffman Estates; and kids of all ages loved it.

A pet parade and decorated bike contest had hundreds of entries. Some of the kids said they had to decorate their bikes twice. An early morning shower ruined a lot of crepe paper decorations but didn't seem to dampen any of the young paraders' spirits.

ALL ALONG the parade route, watchers kept an eye on overcast skies and watched for the parade, many with an umbrella tucked under their arm.

But, the sun decided to shine on the 14th annual Hoffman Estates parade and even the ducks entered seemed to approve of the change in the weather.

Float entries were judged in two categories: theme and commercial.

Winning entry in the theme category was the Schaumburg Area Council of PTA's float depicting School Dist. 54's curriculum offerings. The float held banners of all the districts schools and the motto "A Quality Education for All." Honorable mention went to the Twinbrook YMCA.

WINNING FLOAT in the commercial category was the Roselle State Bank for its display of the Freedom Bell. Honorable mention was awarded to Paddock

Plan commission to review Devon-53 plans tonight

The proposed Devon-53 housing project will be reviewed at tonight's meeting of the Elk Grove Village plan commission. Chairman William Shannon said, however, no recommendation is expected to be made at the meeting.

The commission will meet at 8 p.m. in the village hall, 901 Wellington Ave.

Shannon said, "I don't want to hustle that (Devon-53) through at the meeting." He said the commission will study the transcripts of the public hearings on the project and other information tonight.

Shannon expects the commission will make a recommendation at its next meeting in two weeks. "I would like to defer any recommendation to the next meeting," he said.

The Devon-53 development consists of three large sections, near the intersection of Devon Avenue and Ill. Rte. 53, totaling 287 acres, that are to be built by several developers. When completed, the project would have 6,402 living units with an estimated population of 13,000.

THE PROPERTY now is outside the village limits and the developers are petitioning for a pre-annexation agreement.

A recommendation on accepting the pre-annexation must be made by the plan commission and given to the village board. The board would then make the final decision on possible annexation.

The proposed project is a very controversial one in the village. At the second and last public hearing on the project, held last month, a citizens group presented a petition with over 1,300 signatures demanding that approval for the project be done by referendum, not village board action.

Also scheduled on the plan commission's agenda tonight is final approval of Section 19 of the Vale Tract development west of Rte. 53 and another review of the proposed 450,000-square-foot factory at Higgins and Busse roads.

It was a 'Kid's World' on our Independence Day

Publications float.

The John Sheehan Marching award was given to the D. Elhier's Entertainers marchers.

A special trophy was given to John Smith of Hoffman Estates who was named "Mr. Fourth of July," and honored for his work on the annual celebration. Smith has been a member of the committee since its inception in 1959, and acted as program chairman at the Wednesday celebration.

The pet parade had the usual entries like cats and dogs, but also some very unusual pets like tiger striped salamanders, a crab who didn't qualify because he came late, and ducks and chickens.

MOST UNUSUAL pet trophy winner was Barry Rucks of Schaumburg Township and his duck "Brandy." The duck carried a sign that proclaimed she laid 102 eggs in the last three months, "and the Rucks family ate them all," said Barry.

"Tarzha" a St. Bernard, captured the funniest dressed pet trophy. She wore a crocheted hat, big bloomers and skirt, and is owned by Mrs. Arlene Danczuk of Hoffman Estates.

Winners of the decorated girls tricycle contest are, Patty and Karen Wagner and Kim and Rick Harold for a tricycle entry that centered on a duck called "His Royal Highness."

Boys tricycle winner was Bob Selko who built an old style auto around his tricycle.

WINNER OF the girls bicycle trophy was Karrie Eckert and Steve Balinski won the boys bicycle trophy.

Kids and adults skipped over puddles and muddy spots in Chino Park where a horse show, watermelon and pie eating contests, water balloon contest, races and other events went on all afternoon.

There were lots of muddy shoes and damp seats in sight, but Mrs. Sharon Kimble, one of the festival workers, summed up the general reaction of festival goers, "muddy? so what, I wouldn't miss it for the world."

Outpost gives mental help to residents

Opening of a new mental health outpost in Schaumburg Township has been delayed but help for Schaumburg Township residents is still available within the community.

Schaumburg Township residents who seek help from the Elk Grove Schaumburg Townships Mental Health Center are being seen at the Schaumburg outpost at 105 S. Roselle Rd. and at the center's main office at 700 Blesterfield Rd., Elk Grove Village.

The center will soon be operating from newly-modeled offices in the old Hoffman Estates Village Hall on Illinois Blvd.

Jordan Rosen, director, said the center now pays a nominal rent of $10 a month for its space in the old village hall and is confident its rooms there will be ready for occupancy in two weeks.

When Hoffman Estates built a new municipal building it designated the Hoffman Estates Womens Club as administrators of the old village hall.

The Woman's Club has, with volunteer help, been remodeling the old building. It will also be used as a meeting place for young people and other civic groups.

IN OFF-THE-JOB HOURS 'Let's go flying' is the cry of Shirley Keime, who after 25 years of marriage successfully managed to learn to fly her husband's airplane and literally take the aircraft pilots license, Shirley is now studying for an instrument rating.

Junior Achievement headquarters to open

Keys to a new Junior Achievement headquarters in Hoffman Estates were presented Monday to John Walsh, Chicago JA director, at the village board meeting.

The facility, a two-bedroom townhouse with full basement, is being provided by Kaufman & Broad at 2166 W. Graystone Pl., Hoffman Estates.

The unit will be used by an estimated 150 JA students from Conant and Hoffman Estates high schools, said Walsh. He said students will produce and market products and will organize an estimated eight businesses.

The Junior Achievement program was established to teach students various aspects of the business world.

The key was presented by David M. Brown, president of K & B's Illinois division. Also present was Frank Alexa, chairman of the village's youth commission.

Pot bust Tuesday

Mike Cohen, 19, of 300 S. Roselle Rd., Schaumburg, was arrested in Rolling Meadows Tuesday night and charged with possession of marijuana.

Rolling Meadows police reported that they stopped Cohen for an alleged traffic violation at Carriageway Drive and Ill. Rte. 62 and discovered a quantity of marijuana and a switchblade knife in his possession.

Cohen was released on $1,000 bond. A trial date was set for July 24.

...and learned to fly it herself

She took her husband's plane away

by PAT GERLACH

After 25 years of marriage, Shirley Keime threatened her husband.

"Dale, if you buy another airplane, I'm going to fly and take it away from you," she promised with vehemence.

That was three years ago. Today, Dale Keime considers himself lucky if he doesn't have to make an appointment to use their four-place Beech Bonanza.

Ordinarily, a caper of this magnitude would be quite an accomplishment for any woman. But Shirley is quite accustomed to achieving the unusual.

Since January, she has enjoyed the unique position of being the only woman insurance premium auditor in the Midwest. As an independent contractor for White & White, of Arlington Heights, Shirley averages 35 audits per week in Chicago and suburban firms. Her work deals exclusively with commercial policies written on estimated sales of the companies involved.

BEFORE GOING into business for herself, Shirley worked as office supervisor at J. C. Penney & Co., Woodfield, and has earlier experience as a staff accountant for Combined Insurance of America.

Years of training field men for Hartford and Century insurance companies have also provided an excellent background for the job Shirley loves — almost as much as flying.

"I wish I had taken that plunge years ago instead of spending 25 years really not knowing what was going on," she commented.

But it really all started when Shirley returned from a two-week vacation in Alaska in 1970 to discover Dale, once again had been bitten by the "new airplane-itis" bug. After their initial confrontation over "another airplane," Shirley tells of Dale abruptly leaving the house.

"But he was back in an hour with a slip for my first lesson at a flight school at Schaumburg Airport," she explained.

AFTER 11 HOURS of instruction, Shirley soloed and soon won her private pilot's license. Now, with 200-plus hours of flying time, she has begun work on an instrument license in order to be able to fly in all kinds of weather.

Shirley and Dale, a maintenance manager for three Bolt Master Corporation plants in Elk Grove Village, have taken the Beech Bonanza to Jasper, Texas, Columbus, Ohio and are planning a jaunt to Albuquerque, New Mexico.

But they joke about the shorter trips. "Dale loves to tease me about having coffee in Memphis while I'm at work," Shirley says.

Both native Chicagoans, Shirley and Dale make no secret of the reason they chose to move to Schaumburg five years ago.

"BECAUSE OF Schaumburg Airport, and that's no joke. We wanted to live somewhere close to an airport because we own a plane and want to use it frequently," they both agree.

Since her introduction to aviation, Shirley has become an interested and active member of the Greater Chicago chapter of the Ninety-Nines, a group of about 150 women pilots.

She thinks of the Ninety-Nines as "a fun group who also get together to improve efficiency and safety in flying" and has high praise for their scholarship and mercy flight programs.

But Shirley has also become active in Schaumburg Airport Boosters, a newly-formed local group of pilots and others interested in general aviation, and serves as their secretary-treasurer.

She looks at the Boosters as an organization "working together for the good of the airport and the community."

SHIRLEY FAVORS the idea of a municipal airport in Schaumburg for many reasons.

"It would be a better airport because we would get more needed facilities but I think the most important thing would be the ability to control the type and size of planes permitted to land at Schaumburg," she believes.

That control, according to Shirley, is as important to pilots using the airport as it is to the community at large.

"It is only when you fly a plane yourself that you achieve a marvelous sense of accomplishment — a pure enjoyment, because then you really know what's going on," the accountant-pilot claims.

And at that rate, she may just go on to become an instructor.

Waiting for the U.S. Mail

by BARRY SIGALE

Here is a mathematical problem to chew on along with that high-priced roast beef sandwich and costly glass of milk.

If more than 5 per cent of the population is not receiving its first class mail on time and literally thousands of persons are complaining of incredibly slow delivery, then why is it the U.S. Postal Service is intending to raise the cost of mailing a letter to 10 cents?

Before hearing the answer you better swallow first. You'd think that most of the estimated $1 billion raised would cover the cost of improving services, right? Apparently that's wrong.

ACCORDING TO Postmaster General E. T. Klassen, the newly independent postal service probably will ask the Postal Rate Commission in September for permission to raise the price of the 8 cent stamp to 10 cents beginning next year.

The money, said Klassen, primarily would be used to meet the rise in labor costs, which means meeting the needs of postal workers who have negotiated bigger and better wage and benefit contracts the last few years.

Since the new revenue would probably have little effect on productivity it is assumed the public is going to be paying a lot more than they are now with nothing gained in return. Nothing, that is, unless you work for the two-year-old postal service.

Standing in the way of this latest move by the highly controversial postal service is the U.S. Congress, armed with the approval of their beleaguered constituents, to head off additional price increases of any kind.

One of the most outspoken congressmen is U.S. Rep. Philip Crane, R-10th "Mr. Conservative," who has always fought for his idea that private industry can do a better job in areas where government is foundering. And the postal service, according to Crane and others, is foundering badly.

CITING THE fact that the 2 cent boost would be an increase of 25 per cent or 66 per cent over the last three years, a violation of the wage-price guidelines, Crane said:

"Such an increase would be unconscionable at a time when the federal government is imposing severe restrictions upon price increases in the private sector. It is incredible that the federal government itself should seriously be contemplating a 25 per cent price increase in a service vital to communications within our country.

"An increase in first class mail rates from 6 cents to 10 cents in three years," added Crane, "is hardly a record in which our government can be proud. It dwarfs the meat price increases which have recently been the topic of such debate."

Then Crane added what will amount to be the knockout blow if he has his way:

"It is clear that something is fundamentally wrong with the postal service when American citizens must pay more and more for less and less. The source of the trouble, of course, is the monopoly... in this case a government monopoly on

30,000 watch Fourth of July festivities here

Nearly thirty thousand persons, according to police estimates, lined the streets of Mount Prospect yesterday to watch the annual Fourth of July parade.

Sitting on lawn chairs, balancing sun umbrellas or just straddling a curb on the street, each of the observers vied for a better position from which to view the 50-plus unit extravaganza.

"You've turned out again the most super-sensational parade up here in the suburbs," noted U.S. Rep. Philip Crane, R-12th, in speaking to the crowd at Lions Park, where the parade broke up for awards later.

SPONSORED jointly by the Mount Prospect Chamber of Commerce, Mount Prospect Lions Club, the park district and the village, the parade stepped off promptly at 1:30 p.m. with the award winning Prospect Heights High School band leading the way.

Adults—only swim set at Lions Pool

The Prospect Heights Park District will open the Lions Park Pool from 6:30 to 7 p.m. for a businessmen and adults-only swim.

Anyone paying the daily admission is entitled to remain for the balance of the evening. Pass holders may come at any time, according to Ronald Greenberg, park district superintendent.

cars, floats, trucks and marching bands made up the bulk of the parade. Dignitaries included Mayor Robert Telchert, State Representatives Eugenia Chapman, David Regner and Robert Juckett.

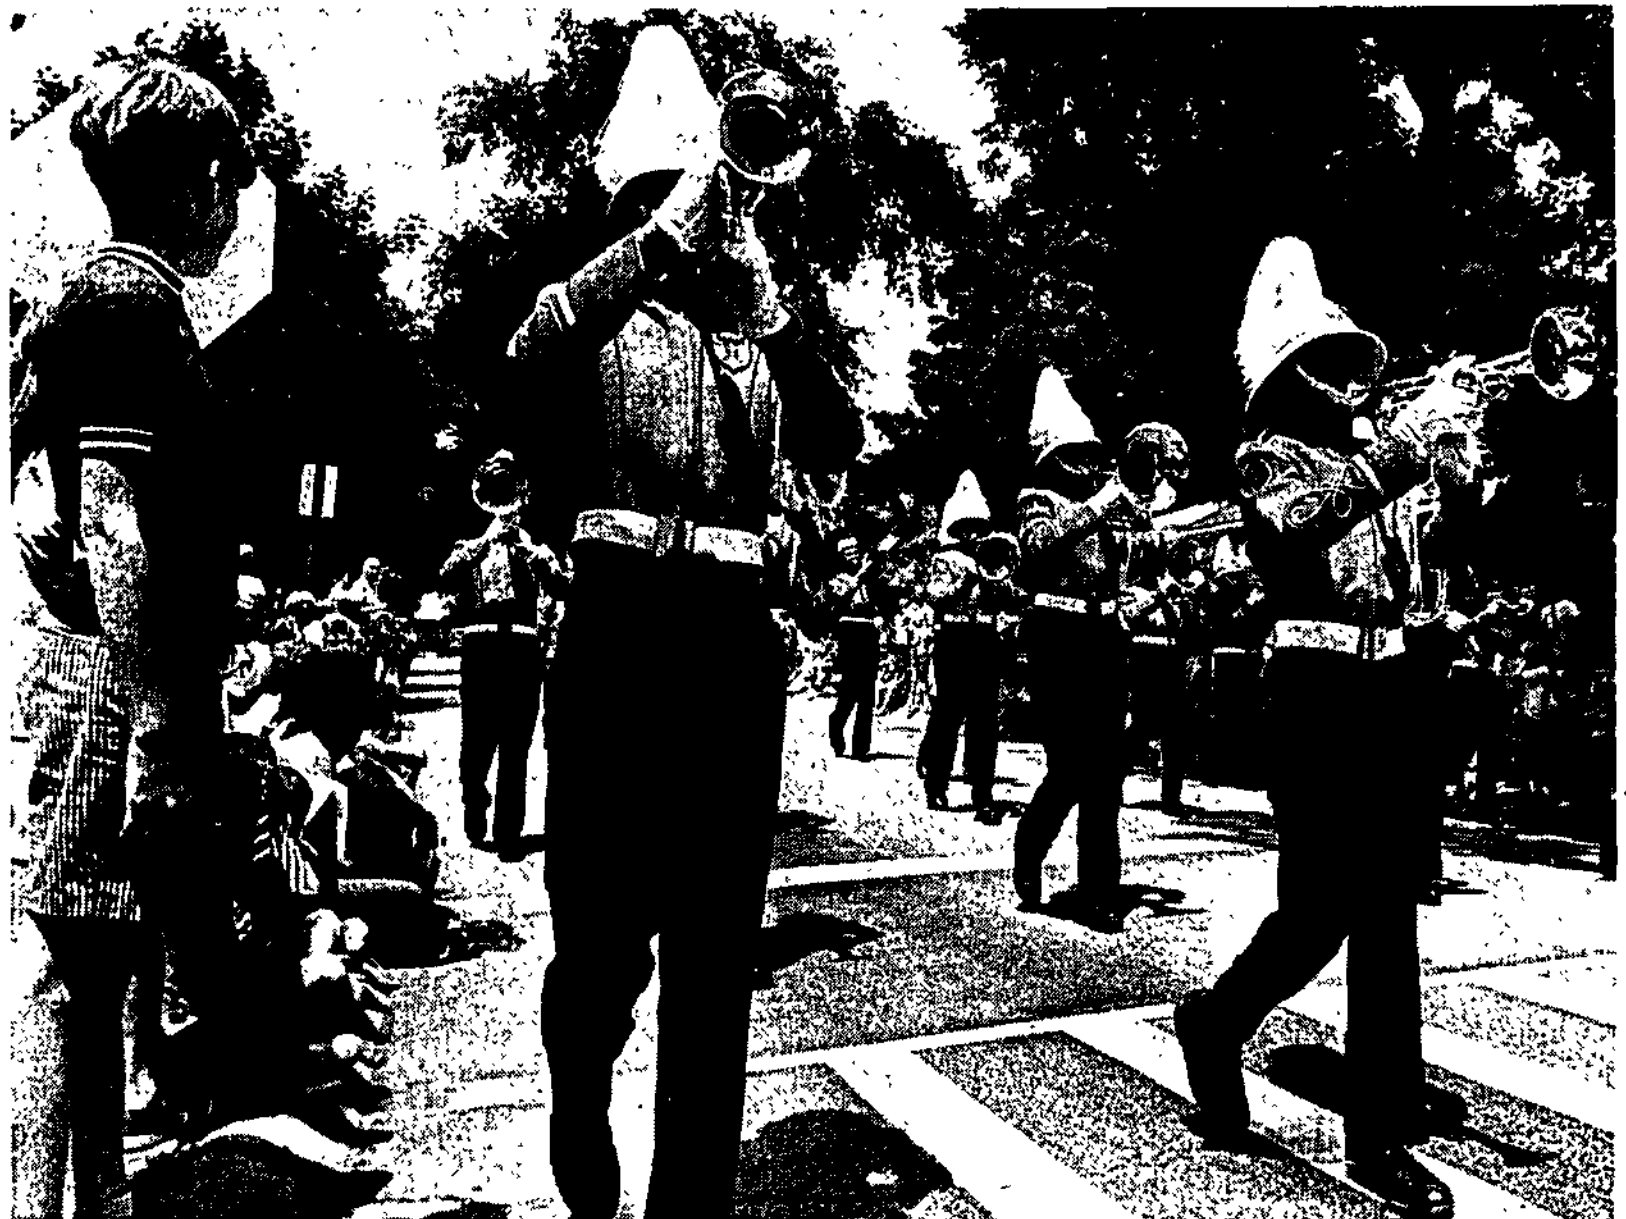

The theme of the parade was "Happiness Is..." and each of the different units defined the word in their own way: "Happiness Is Having Your Own Kazoo Band, Happiness Is a blooming 1939 Ford, Happiness Is Giving Service, Happiness Is A Camp Fire Girl."

HIGHLIGHT of the parade were the 10 marching drum and bugle corps units who snapped the crowd to attention with their resounding drums and their military demeanor whenever there was a lull between floats. Included in the marching units were the Mount Prospect Guardsmen and Guardsmen Cadets, the Polish National Alliance Drum and Bugle Corps of Chicago and Page Park Cadets of St. Louis, Mo.

As each of the floats turned into Lions Park, the judges stood on the grass writing down their choices for awards. St. Mark's Hi-League received the prize for Best Youth float, Busse Florists for Best Them, the Mount Prospect State Bank for Best Commercial float and Paddock Publications for Best Civic float. The Mount Prospect E-Hart Girls float won the award for "best overall." Their float was a miniature replica of a circus carousel.

The afternoon festivities ended with a few words from Mayor Telchert on the meaning of freedom ("As a nation it is our most priceless possession.")

Afterward, the crowd flooded into Lions Park carnival for a little rest and refreshment.

SEVENTY-SIX TROMBONES played the big parade in Mount Prospect yesterday. Here, one of the 10 drum and bugle corps who competed for prizes after yesterday's Fourth of July parade, show their finest stuff as they march down Emerson Street. According to police, twenty to thirty thousand people turned out to see the parade which included 50-some units.

Equalizes funding for schools

State aid formula would be 'good, bad'

A new, proposed formula for state aid to schools would be a financial windfall to Elk Grove Township School Dist. 59, but may create problems in hiring new teachers, according to Supt. James Erviti.

The new formula, passed by the General Assembly, still must be signed by Gov. Daniel Walker. It is designed to give all school districts in the state equal funding per pupil.

Erviti estimated the new formula, if signed by Walker, would give the district an additional $300,000 to $300,000 next year. Eventually, the aid could increase to millions of dollars.

The appropriations passed by the General Assembly, including the new aid formula, far exceed the proposed budget of the governor and he must veto some of the bills. Observers would not speculate on the chances of the new aid formula.

UNDER THE NEW formula, each school district in the state would base its budget on an assessed valuation of $64,615 per pupil. If the district's actual assessed valuation per pupil is below that level, the state would pay the difference.

The state aid formula is complicated, but the poorer a district is in terms of assessed valuation per pupil, the greater its state aid will be.

The new formula will not provide the full increase in aid for several years. No more than a 25 per cent increase over last year's amount will be permitted. At least four years will be required for a district to get the full increase in aid.

Erviti said the new formula may adversely affect the district's ability to hire new teachers. "We can no longer beat the sticks for teachers in poorer districts by offering more pay," he said.

According to Erviti, all districts under the new formula, would be able to offer competitive pay scales for teachers. "Every district in the state will be in the same league as us," he said.

ERVITI EXPLAINED the new formula and its effects at Monday's school board meeting. In other action at the meeting:

- The board, after long discussion, approved the Northwest Educational Cooperative (NEC) budget and the district's portion of expenses. The board was very dissatisfied with the data processing service provided by the cooperative last year and agreed that if service did not improve, the district would consider dropping out of the agency.

- Another report on the long-overdue Friendship Junior High School was presented by Grant Torrell, representative for the architect. He said construction work is progressing and the school should be ready by September, but the gym will not be finished until some time in October.

- The district will continue its present program of interscholastic and intramural basketball games in the junior high schools. A report on the past program, with a recommendation to continue it, was presented by Erviti.

Thousands at Lions parade

Several thousand persons, according to Lions parade chairman Joe Lesniak, stood in driveways and along the side of the road to watch the Fourth of July caravan of floats in Prospect Heights yesterday.

Fire engine sirens from the Prospect Heights Volunteer Fire Department blared the arrival of the parade which included decorated bikes, trucks, antique cars and even a carousel float on wheels.

"It looks like every piece of equipment in town came out," said Mrs. Ed Collins as she stood in her driveway watching earth movers and dump trucks from Wheeling Township gliding along in the same parade path with paper stuffed floats and flag-decorated cars.

THE PARADE, co-sponsored by the Prospect Heights Lions Club and the Prospect Heights Baseball Program, depended on Lions members in pith helmets to direct traffic along the parade route. Judging of floats took place at Lions Park, where float riders dispersed for refreshments after the almost two-hour parade through town.

Seven local organizations won trophies for their floats or decorated cars. These included: the Campfire Girls who won with their float of an outdoor scene, the E-Hart Girls, whose entry was a replica of a circus carousel in red, white and blue paper, the Prospect Heights Four-H Club and the Prospect Heights Swimming Team.

Also awarded trophies were the decorated cars of each of the leagues from the Prospect Heights Baseball Program, including the Greyhounds, the Expos and the Twins who had hand-painted caricatures of baseball players decorating both sides of their car.

Two special awards were given, one to a 1929 antique Pontiac taking part in the parade and the other to Mike Wenzel who rode a mini-antique car.

The Lions also awarded a special certificate of appreciation to Wheeling Township and to Cub Scout Pack 336 for the units they provided.

"everyday"

Interest. That's pretty special. But there's more. That daily interest is compounded daily. Paid quarterly. So you can deposit when you like. Withdraw when you need to. Never lose interest provided you maintain $25 or more in your account at the end of the quarter. In fact, you even gain. All money deposited by the 10th earns from the 1st ... if you leave it on deposit until the end of the calendar quarter. Sounds interesting? But what does "everyday" interest mean in dollars and cents? It means that our 5% passbook interest actually earns more when compounded every day the First Federal Savings way. It makes a difference.

Waiting for the U.S. Mail

by BARRY SIGALE

Here is a mathematical problem to chew on along with that high-priced roast beef sandwich and costly glass of milk. If more than 5 per cent of the population is not receiving its first class mail on time and literally thousands of persons are complaining of incredibly slow delivery, then why is it the U.S. Postal Service is intending to raise the cost of mailing a letter to 10 cents?

Before hearing the answer you better swallow first. You'd think that most of the estimated $1 billion raised would cover the cost of improving services, right? Apparently that's wrong.

ACCORDING TO Postmaster General E. T. Klassen, the newly independent postal service probably will ask the Postal Rate Commission in September for permission to raise the price of the 8 cent stamp to 10 cents beginning next year.

The money, said Klassen, primarily would be used to meet the rise in labor costs, which means meeting the needs of postal workers who have negotiated bigger and better wage and benefit contracts the last few years.

Since the new revenue would probably have little effect on productivity it is assumed the public is going to be paying a lot more than they are now with nothing gained in return. Nothing, that is, unless you work for the two-year-old postal service.

Standing in the way of this latest move by the highly controversial postal service is the U.S. Congress, armed with the approval of their beleaguered constituents, to head off additional price increases of any kind.

One of the most outspoken congressmen is U.S. Rep. Philip Crane, R-10th "Mr. Conservative," who has always fought for his idea that private industry can do a better job in areas where government is foundering. And the postal service, according to Crane and others, is foundering badly.

CITING THE fact that the 2 cent boost would be an increase of 25 per cent or 66 per cent over the last three years, a violation of the wage-price guidelines, Crane said:

"Such an increase would be unconscionable at a time when the federal government is imposing severe restrictions upon price increases in the private sector. It is incredible that the federal government itself should seriously be contemplating a 25 per cent price increase in a service vital to communications within our country.

"An increase in first class mail rates from 6 cents to 10 cents in three years," added Crane, "is hardly a record in which our government can be proud. It dwarfs the meat price increases which have recently been the topic of such debate."

Then Crane added what will amount to be the knockout blow if he has his way: "It is clear that something is fundamentally wrong with the postal service when American citizens must pay more and more for less and less. The source of the trouble, of course, is the monopoly... in this case a government monopoly on

'We're getting set for next year'

Big success of 'Festival '73' will lead to greater event

The success of "Festival '73," which wound up with a bang at Forest View High School last night, will lead to a bigger event next year. Festival committee chairman Dave Griffin said yesterday in reviewing the activities of the six-day celebration.

"Everybody likes the idea and we're already getting set for next year," Griffin said. A parade, more carnival rides and an expanded art show and boutique row are some of the goals for Festival '74, he said.

Griffin said the committee expects to be able to meet its expenses and possibly have some money left over to put toward next year's activities. But some bad experience with this year's carnival operator has reduced the amount of money the committee will receive.

SEVERAL HUNDRED handicapped children were at the Festival site yesterday morning to enjoy free carnival rides and refreshments. And though some of the ride operators were late in showing up, it was obvious that the kids and parents alike were enjoying the occasion.

"I think this is very beneficial for the kids. Being on the rides with their own makes it even more enjoyable," said Harry Dziedziec of Glenview who brought his handicapped daughter to the Arlington Heights Festival.

Nancy Siewenie, whose handicapped child attends the Samuel A. Kirk Development Center in Palatine, said she was "definitely in favor" of seeing the Festival repeated next year.

Mrs. Siewenie, who lives in Rolling Meadows, said she knew her child was having a good time.

Free refreshments for the handicapped youngsters were paid for by donations from Arlington Heights merchants and banks.

"I THINK THE event is becoming accepted and we've learned a lot this year," Griffin said. He estimated that "thousands" of people visited Festival over the six days.

"We had 500 people watch the second performance of the Free Street Theatre and 350 people at the first. And there were 700 to 1,000 people at the Battle of the Bands Sunday night," he said.

The Fourth of July parade, traditional in Arlington Heights, was not held this year because money to run the parade was put into Festival.

A possibility next year may be to run a parade from Arlington Heights to Mount Prospect. This has been done successfully in other suburbs, Griffin said.

About the only sour note reported in connection with Festival '73 was some difficulty with the carnival operators, Mutual Amusements.

GRIFIN SAID several of the rides that were contracted for were not delivered and that the ride operators were late in reporting for work. Part of the trouble may have been due to the recent death of the carnival operator, he said.

The problems were unfortunate from a financial standpoint because much of the income to the Festival Committee derives from the carnival rides. Griffin said the committee had hoped to gross $10,000 during the six days but he doubted that goal would be realized.

Difficulties with the rides did not dampen anyone's enthusiasm though, Griffin emphasized, and, as chairman of the committee, he said the event was encouraging in every respect.

"Lots of people came up with suggestions for making the thing bigger next year and my response was generally, 'Great idea. You're in charge.'"

Fire Dept. answers NW Community call

Arlington Heights Fire Department responded to a call at Northwest Community Hospital yesterday afternoon when an equipment sterilizer apparently overheated in the hospital's first-floor laboratory. There was no other damage reported.

CARNIVAL RIDES were one of the big attractions at "Festival '73" which ended last night with a traditional fireworks display at Forest View High School. The six-day Festival was successful enough that its promoters are already thinking of an expanded celebration next year. Yesterday morning, the Festival Committee extended free carnival rides and refreshments to several hundred handicapped youngsters from throughout the area.

Our reporter starts new driving course on 'wrong' foot

Editor's Note: Driver's education — that special course taught high school students before they receive their driver's license — has changed somewhat in recent years. Herald Staff Writer Joe Swickard was a driver's education student in 1961 and last week went through the modernized version of the how-to-drive class at Prospect High School. He recalls how things have changed.

by JOE SWICKARD

I apparently took driver's education in the Automotive Dark Ages of the mid-1960s.

Now I have learned that many things I held as sacrosanct were meaningless rituals having no place in the modern world of motoring.

If you learned to drive prior to six years ago, you can join me in this latest episode of future shock: brake with your left foot.

STILL ABLE to absorb more punishment? Well, now the neophyte driver no longer has to parallel park to earn his license.

George Gattas, Prospect High School athletic director and supervisor of driver education, was to be the debunker of earlier teachings.

He stood on the Prospect parking lot early one morning last week to explain the program. Although it was noticeably chilly, he seemed perfectly warm in his gym teacher tee-shirt, slacks and gym shoes. I thought at first the shoes were a carryover many coaches affect during the off season. Later, I was to learn they were necessary.

He explained the program is divided into four phases: class room, simulator, closed course and behind the wheel (or BTW as it is known by the men who ride the suicide seat with the novice drivers).

THE FIRST REAL jolt to my education came as I watched Gattas strap the student driver warning signs to the cars. None of those "low price three" for these kids. They were going to learn in style.

Lined up in the early morning sun were two Rivieras, an Electra and an Olds. 88.

Students confined to the closed course would have to make do with Novas, Centurys, Montegos or LTDs.

(A check with Bill Cook Buick, Arlington Heights, revealed he supplies the luxury cars because the demand for smaller cars is too great to consign them to students. The cars used are then sold at $200 below invoice price, said Don Cook, sales manager.)

Gattas said the students prefer the smaller cars for driving on the course. But, for the streets, there's nothing like a Detroit Dream.

My turn for the boat ride would come later, first stop was the classroom.

TONY LANZARATTA is a summer driving instructor. It was his minor at Illinois State University.

The students were in for a treat this morning. To break up the monotony of lectures in summer school, Lanzaratta had some slides to show.

The slides were supposed to give the students new perceptions — looking for the unexpected.

One hour of zig-zag lines, checks and squares all jumping around and changing while I tried to look at them. An hour later, my retinae barely recovered, found me in a driving simulator.

The idea is to have a mock-up of a car with the appropriate wheels, pedals and controls. The instructor shows a movie and the students are supposed to "drive" along.

A computer, attached to the simulator, registers everytime an error is made.

In reality, the simulators look like a bump-up car with a pinball machine hooked up to the dash. Do something wrong and the appropriate sign lights up. THE FILM was swell. John Drury, channel 7's ace news announcer, took us for a ride through Des Plaines, Winnetka, and Highland Park.

It showed an old girl friend's house and the site of my first traffic ticket.

After 45 minutes of watching for careless delivery men and children chasing balls into the street, John had us "drivers" "pull" into an angle parking place in Highland Park. He left us there.

Next stop for me was the enclosed course where the students drive around the parking lot and practice maneuvers. I was somewhat envious of these "intermediate" cars the kids got to tool around in. The North Shore high school I attended gave us Corvairs (remember them) with governors that limited speeds to under 15 m.p.h.

I watched with Gattas as the Buicks, Chevys, LTD's and Montegos made left and right turns.

What about my old nemesis, parallel parking?

"We set up some pylons where they can practice. But not too much. It isn't on the tests anymore," Gattas said.

My contemporaries and myself considered the drivers test as rites of passage toward manhood. Parallel parking was our ordeal by fire. Now they don't even test it. No wonder this younger generation is getting soft.

"T-BACKING MANEUVERS" were on tap. This replaced the incomprehensible "three point turn about" I practiced for hours. Just more evidence of decadence.

I soon saw the necessity for the gym shoes worn by Gattas.

He called one car in to practice the move.

"Look out. She can't control the car," he said as he displayed some fancy footwork while grabbing a pylon out of harm's way.

Around and 'round the cars went while Gattas watched for proper techniques such as hand over hand wheel turns and using the turn signal.

"Sometimes it gets pretty hairy out here. You should have been here last week. The first time behind a wheel and there were cars all over the place. We've had some accidents, but we're lucky. At Wheeling they had a car totaled on the course," he said.

I rejoined Lanzaratta for my last hour:

a ride with the students on the street. "YOU'RE LUCKY. These guys are good drivers," he said.

They were, too. No shocks, thrills, chills or spills. A little harsh with the brakes, but...

They were using their left foot to brake.

Lanzaratta said calmly, "We teach left foot braking now. We used to worry about confusion when they drove with a clutch, but not any more. We start them with the foot just touching the brake; then they can later put it to one side."

Blasphemy.

I called the Illinois State Police when I returned to the office. Those precision drivers would set the world right.

NO DICE. In the academy where troopers are taught high performance driving they use either foot.

I called drivers testing stations to get the answer to the preposterous situation of no parallel parking required for a license.

Libertyville doesn't require it. (But again, it never did. Some faint heart souls got tested there for just that reason.)

Elgin doesn't require it.

Even Elston Avenue, the driver's testing station of high school nightmares, hasn't required it for over a year.

Ever since that day, I have occasionally been subject to spastic contortion while I struggle to get my left foot onto the brake.

It's no use. The conditioning is just too strong.

I think I'll go back to the simulator and wait for John Drury to get me out of Highland Park.

If you look hard enough, you'll find a summer job...

by BETTY LEE

If you're a student, finding a summer job isn't easy. But a handful of students in the area say there are jobs, even if you have to create your own.

While hundreds of students in the Northwest suburbs were scrambling to land those rare summer positions this spring, Bob Horwath and John Cooper were already making trips to the bank with money earned from Arlington Home Maintenance, a business they started themselves.

"It just came about and I was needing a summer job," John said, referring to the business he and Bob formed in March. "We worked mainly on the weekends then."

Bob worked for a janitorial service last summer and acquired some of the equipment needed for the business from his father. The two, both graduates of Prospect High School, Mount Prospect, had flyers printed and distributed them to potential customers.

"WE WERE BOOKED the first two weeks of summer," said Horwath. "And a lot of customers referred us to others."

Their specialty is cleaning shag carpeting, according to Horwath. "It's a special process that won't untwist the shag." They also do floors, walls and windows.

However, jobs have been tapering off and both partners are planning another advertising campaign. "We'll get some calling cards printed, distribute them and get more flyers out," said Bob.

"I have a feeling that business is coming along," said John, who is also working part-time as a life guard at Regent Park Pool. "It's hard work a lot of the times, but I get a lot of pleasure working with my hands."

THIS FALL BOB will go to University of Tulsa, Okla. John plans to keep the business going while studying at Harper College. "I guess I'll help when I get back for vacations," said Bob.

According to Bob, the profits have been substantial. "I'm making about 20 per cent more than I was last year and I was getting $3 an hour then," he said. "I'm keeping track of customers and I'll remind them next summer that I did these jobs last year and ask if they want me to do it again."

Jim Johannesen of Mount Prospect and his friends — Brian Deevy, John Deevy and Mike Thalman, all of Arlington Heights — literally knocked on doors for their jobs last winter. They convinced some residents they needed their house painting services.

"We worked for a company last summer and were dissatisfied, so we branched off on our own," said Jim, a sophomore at Western Illinois University, Macomb.

"We explained to people what kinds of jobs we do and gave free estimates," he said.

THE GROUP, known as Quality Home Painters, hired a lawyer to cover the legal aspects of their small business.

"We are fully insured, and our work is guaranteed for two years," said Jim. "We don't leave a job unless the customer is satisfied."

A house can be painted in one to 1½ days, Jim said. But the days start at 7 a.m. and continue until 9 p.m.

"It's about a 70-hour week," he said.

"We're just trying to get enough money to get back to school. We have no aspirations of making a lot of money." John and Brian will start studies this fall at Dartmouth College, Hanover, N.H., and Mike at Murray State University in Kentucky.

Quality Home Painters will be dormant during the school year but will resume work when the group starts knocking on doors again next spring, this time with a thick notebook of references.

FIFTEEN-YEAR-OLD Nancy Johnson of Mount Prospect has been playing piano for more than 10 years, so the idea of giving children piano lessons was a combination of doing something she liked and making money.

She had placed an ad in the paper a little more than a year ago and got 17 responses. "But as time went by some of the kids didn't like piano, so at the end I had only three students," said Nancy. "So I put another ad in the paper and ended up with 10 students altogether."

During the school year, Nancy teaches in her home after school. This summer she is increasing her earnings by taking baby sitting jobs.

"It's pretty good money," she said. "I'm going to Europe with the school next spring and I need $200 for spending money." Nancy, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Johnson, 717 N. Pine, is a junior at Prospect High School.

THREE ARLINGTON High School students are depending on magic cards and the crystal ball for summer money. No, they're not banking on magic, but they are giving magic shows at children's parties.

Steve Hausknecht, 16, had signed up with the Arlington Heights Park District for a position as a lifeguard for the summer.

"On the application it asked what relationships I had with kids in particular age groups," said Steve. "I put down that I did magic shows for children and they hired me to do shows for parties at Hasbrook Park."

"For every good show, I make good money," said Steve, who hopes to buy an expensive bicycle before the summer ends. It could be easily bought, according to Steve, since "business keeps building up every year."

STEVE'S FRIENDS, Chuck Constantino and Pete Kovacevich, both 16, also are in the magic business. They are neither partners nor are they rivals. All charge according to the number of persons at the party, the age and where the party's at.

But for Pete, who has performed at Northwest Community Hospital, it's not money he's after. The money he earns goes to buying more magic props, which are "awfully expensive," according to Pete, who also works for his father cleaning engine parts.

Chuck, who has been spending all his earned money on more tricks for the past three years, is now tucking the money away for college.

TWO ARLINGTON HEIGHTS students, Bob Horwath, left, and John Cooper, formed Arlington Home Maintenance, a business they started themselves in order to earn money for college. Several students in the area have been earning summer money by developing their own jobs.
